BRITISH WARSHIPS BOMBARDING DUNES

CONTINUE EFFORTS TO REVITALIZE THE PETERBOROUGH BOARD OF TRADE

All the Officers Are Re-elected at Annual Meeting and Another Attempt Will be Made to Increase the Usefulness of the Organization

With the same officers as last year guiding it, and no material change in policy save a determination to dig in and take a more active part, the Board of Trade at their annual meeting Saturday night decided once again that the time was ripe for the display of a more enthusiastic sentiment and the cessation of tendency to knock the institution. That the Board had a wide and useful part to play in the building up of Peterborough was the unanimous feeling but that its membership should be opened to mechanics and tradesmen and laborers seemed to be the general feeling prevalent. Though no action was taken in the latter regard it was felt that by bringing in mechanics a greater interest would result. It was also decided to let the membership fee remain at $2 for another year as the time was hardly opportune for any increase of that nature.

President Basil D. Hall was in the chair and following the presentation of his report he put out a feeler by asking the members present whether they considered it advisable to carry on the Board of Trade this year. This question naturally aroused the members to speech.

GREAT HELP TO THE CITY COUNCIL.

Mayor Buller maintained that it would be a mistake to think of disbanding it. It was a great help to the city council, but the trouble was that not half enough interest was taken by the members as a whole. He was sorry to admit that Peterborough had the most unenthusiastic board of any city he had visited. In other cities mechanics and tradesmen were prominent in their membership and made things boom. It might be advisable to raise the fee a little but the main thing was to obtain the backing of the citizens.

In regard to getting the morning papers here early he wanted the feeling of the Board as to the advisability of going back to the old system of getting them at noon, thereby allowing the freight to reach here earlier, or continuing to get them early but being compelled to put up with a later freight service. The freight would arrive earlier if it were not compelled to wait for the Toronto mail.

Some Opinions.

Mr. R. M. Glover was against the disbanding of the Board. It had accomplished something, but he felt that thirty or forty active members paying a fee of $5 could accomplish more than two hundred members paying $2.00 but doing practically nothing.

Mr. G. O. Cameron, manager of the Bell Telephone Co. thought the board passed too many resolutions and then sat back feeling they had done their duty. They drifted away from the right angle he thought. They should pick out one definite object and go ahead never letting up till it had been accomplished. Oratory should be abolished and a program not too elaborate decided upon this year. Go after one thing at a time was the policy laid down by Mr. Cameron.

Mr. J. W. Worth thought perhaps the name Board of Trade accounted for some of the lukewarm interest taken in it. A name like the Chamber of Commerce might help a lot. President Hall said it cost $10 to have the name changed.

Advocated a Vote.

At this juncture Mr. W. C. Ackerman advocated a vote being taken on the advisability of carrying on the Board of Trade. Last year the average attendance was not one member per thousand population. Why should ten or fifteen men waste their time if the great bulk of the members held aloof and remained disinterested.

Ald. Duffus — "Any organization that has turned over according to the treasurer's report, about $479 and yet saved the city $4,000, should not be allowed to drop. Get the young men and the mechanics into the organization and it will help greatly in my opinion."

Here Mayor Buller interjected a strong tribute to the worth of the working men.

They were just as good as the business men. The discussion was dropped, upon a motion that the Board go ahead with the business of electing officers.

The Officers.

The nominations for president were Mr. W. C. Ackerman, Mr. J. W. Worth and Mr. D. Hall. The former declined owing to lack of time, the second declined because of enforced absence from the city, leaving Mr. Hall's nomination standing. By a unanimous vote Mr. Hall was returned to the position for another year. For vice-president Mr. James Hamilton was re-elected without any other nominations.

Mr. A. N. Allison was re-elected secretary treasurer, the position being combined this year.

The business of electing a council of nine members and striking the standing comimttees will be left with the officers who are familiar with the names of the most active workers and who are suited to occupy positions on the various committees.

Under the head of new business came up the question of purchasing a cancellation stamp for the use of the Board. Postmaster Edgar stated he had been endeavoring to locate where such a stamp could be secured but as yet was unsuccessful.

Radial Railways Lines.

Mayor Buller also took the opportunity of bringing up the matter of the radial railway lines proposed for Peterborough. He said it was a live issue. Mr. T. F. Matthews who was chairman of this district intended to call a public meeting shortly to obtain suggestions from citizens concerning desirable locations for the radial lines. Mayor Buller firmly believed they would double the population in five years. The Board of Trade should assist in getting a large meeting and proffering suggestions.

Paris, March 15.—A Havas Agency despatch from Athens says: "News reaching here from Constantinople sets forth that the young Turks are beginning to find their position difficult and are preparing for flight. BRITISH RETALIATORY MEASURES ANNOUNCED

"39th" VOLUNTEERS DID NOT FORGET CHURCH SERVICE

If the local members of the 39th Battalion, prove as consistent in bowling over the Germans as they are in attending church services, the Kaiser will be short of men. It may be that Captain Spencer, who is also an Anglican clergyman, has been successful in encouraging his men to attend divine service—so successful in fact that they did not forget the Sabbath service, when he was called to Millbrook on Saturday, owing to the illness of Mrs. Spencer's mother. The men marched to All Saints' Church, Sunday morning, and surprised Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., who had not been notified that the volunteers would attend the service. Needless to say the boys were given a cordial welcome.

Hold up All Vessels to and From Ports of Germany

ALL CARGOES TO GO BEFORE PRIZE COURT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 15. — The British order-in-council decreeing retaliatory measures on the part of the Government to meet the declaration of the Germans that the waters surrounding the United Kingdom are a military area was made public today.

The measures are in brief as follows:

First — No merchant vessel which sailed from her port of departure after March 1st shall be allowed to proceed to any German port. Unless she has received a pass permitting her to proceed to some neutral or friendly port named in pass, her cargo must be discharged in a British port and placed in custody of the prize court. This cargo, if not contraband, or if not requisitioned for government use, shall be restored to the person entitled to it on terms to be decided by court.

Second — No vessel which sailed from a German port after March 1st shall be allowed to proceed with goods laden at that port, which shall be handed over to a prize court at a British or allied port and either requisitioned for government use or sold, the proceeds of the sale to be held by the court until the end of the war. Similar provisions are made for ships sailing from or destined for a neutral port, but carrying a cargo which is either the property of the enemy or destined for the enemy's country. These cargoes are to go into a prize court and be adjudicated upon by that court. Provision is made for redress to persons claiming interest in cargoes thus seized, provided they are not contraband. This order-in-council does not supersede, but merely supplements previous regulations.

Major Hall, whom Major Hilliard is succeeding, left this morning for Kingston, accompanied by three gunners.

Recruiting still goes on for the 39th Battalion. Capt. Spencer stated this morning that as many as possible will be secured, as it is the intention to use the surplus to form another regiment.

FIRE IN LIVERY BARN.

To thaw a drinking trough that had been frozen over, some straw in the livery barn at the rear of Dr. Johnston's office on Chambers street was set on fire, resulting in a little blaze early Sunday afternoon. The blaze got beyond the control of those looking after it, and caused them to send in an alarm. The department were able to extinguish it without using any water or chemicals. Very slight damage occurred.

APPRECIATION

Howick Hall,
Ottawa, March 12, 1915.

Editor, Review:
Peterborough:

Sir,—Permit me to express the hearty appreciation of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of "B" Squadron, 8th C. M. R., of the kindness and thoughtfulness of the ladies of the city when we were bidden God-speed by the Mayor and citizens of Peterborough, and to thank again the Women's War Committee, the Daughters of the Empire, and the Kitchener Red Cross League, and those ladies who assisted in the work. I assure you that all ranks carry away a very happy recollection of the feeling that prompted the action of these ladies, and the sincere desire, that is apparent in the squadron to buckle to the task that is before it, has, I have no doubt, been strengthened.

Mr. Louis Yeotes' gift of a package of cigarettes to each one was a happy thought and very acceptable. I am,

Yours truly,
S. T. MEDD,
Comd'g B Squadron,
8th C. M. R.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, MARCH 15, 1915

THE MATTER REMAINS WITH THE CITIZENS.

THE REVIEW has taken the position that the Helen Brown case should proceed, that the authorities should investigate it further, because the Review thinks it is in the public interest to do so. To show that people are in earnest, we have asked the citizens to express their opinion by means of letters to the editor, which the Review will publish.

Some have spoken to us about a petition to the Police Commissioners. If the citizens think that should be done, they would do well to express their opinion in print. However, it appears that the authorities have got into a strange state if it is necessary to get up a petition to get them to act.

The Review does not feel called upon to act as a detective in this or any other case, nor does it feel called to be a public regulator of morals. It has called attention to the deplorable state of affairs that has existed under the very noses of the authorities.

If the citizens want the case cleared up, they must impress on the authorities, by means of the press, or by petition, or otherwise, what the feeling of the public is. If responsible citizens are afraid or ashamed to express their opinion, if they would prefer to see a repetition of the Helen Brown tragedy, and not to see it cleared up, all the newspapers in the world could not improve the public morality of such a place. For private citizens to come to the Review office, as many have, and express their opinion as supporting the Review's contention, is good as far as it goes, but the police, the Police Commissioners and other authorities do not know anything about their opinion. To have effect, their opinion should be expressed in a way that the authorities will hear of it. No private citizen is called upon to lay a charge or complaint in this case. The police are paid supposedly for this work. The matter remains with the citizens of Peterborough to say whether this case should be dropped or investigated. We have done our part.

THE FRENCH QUESTION IN THE SENATE.

SENATOR DAVID'S speech in the Senate on the bilingual school question, while a strong appeal, will not likely further its object very much. Aside from the main point in the speech, which was in support of the French, Senator David made the claim that the Senate was within its rights in considering the question. This was far more important than the casual form in which he made the claim would make it appear. The Senate has no right to intervene in provincial affairs, but the first step in the establishment of a right to do so is to advance a claim. Senator David assumed full responsibility for his speech. For his private opinion, no matter what it is, he has a right to it, but he delivered his speech in the Senate, so that it is to all intents and purposes an expression of opinion by that body. Notice, that while he cleverly concealed the real weight and significance of his speech, he also rendered it singularly abortive for argumentative purposes by his initial declaration that he alone was responsible for what he uttered. This is not a fair way to meet a question, for it loads it with a lot of debating lumber that leads only to misunderstandings and to misrepresentation. Perhaps the Hon. Senator did not intend to do so, but the fact that he did so speak on this question shows clearly that it is beyond the province of the Senate and cannot be properly considered by that body.

As to his advocacy of the French cause, he added nothing new to the question. He quoted with discrimination, and ended his speech by an appeal to the generosity and patriotism of the people, a conclusion which carries on the face of it the impotence of the Senate to deal with the problem.

Commenting on Senator David's speech, the Toronto Globe gives the following emphatic and cogent conclusion to its criticism:

> "Nothing could be better calculated than Senator David's resolution to defeat his avowed purpose. Any expression of opinion on either side of the bilingual school question by either House of Parliament would at once intensify the cleavage he deprecates, and make it harder to find a friendly and final solution of a most difficult problem. If he is wise and well advised he will withdraw his resolution, which has served the temporary purpose of enabling him and others to make speeches on a dangerous subject quite outside the range of Federal politics. It can serve no good purpose, and it might be drawn into a precedent to justify some very bad ones.
>
> "It ought to be accepted as settled once for all, in the Senate and out of it, that for Ontario the bilingual school question is Provincial, not Federal. It also ought to be taken as settled that English, and English alone, is now and shall remain the official language of Ontario. It is settled, too, that competent instruction in English shall be given to every pupil and in every school in all parts of this Province. Adequate instruction in the French language, in the German language, or in any other language, may be given in any school by order of the responsible authorities and under the supervision of the Education Department. Other languages may be taught anywhere. The English language must be taught everywhere. That is Ontario's law."

DR. SHORTT'S REPLY.

WE HAVE ALREADY commented on Dr. Shortt's statement about the Civil Service. Here is his reply as it was given in the Ottawa Free Press (Liberal):

> "I have only this to say," replied Dr. Shortt. "The official return is there to speak for itself. It is dated March of last year. I was simply quoting from the return, and I have nothing to do with whatever interpretation Mr. Rogers or Dr. Pugsley may place on that return. I had no information other than was contained in the return—for instance, I had no information about resignations.
>
> "I made the statement that there had been two thousand odd dismissed and ten thousand odd appointed, not including the post-office department, merely incidental to a discussion of the outside service. Only two dismissals were reported in the inside service. I pointed out that this was not a matter of party politics so far as I was concerned. My remarks, as reported, were correct in substance. I repeat, they were founded solely on the information contained in the return, and nothing else."

Commenting on the above reply, the Montreal Mail rightly thinks Dr. Shortt made a partizan criticism, and reasons out its conclusion in this manner:

> "On the basis of Dr. Shortt's own justification of what he said, it would appear that a strong condemnation of his statement is perfectly justified. Dr. Shortt is chairman of the Civil Service Commission. As such he is entitled to have his statements taken as coming from an authority in a case of this nature. How he could make the statement he made, that ten thousand men had been appointed to replace two thousand dismissed, except in a very warm criticism of the present Government, is hard to imagine. Yet, on Dr. Shortt's own admission, as given above, he spoke practically at random, without information he should have had before him before referring to this matter at all.
>
> "Dr. Shortt says: 'I have nothing to do with whatever interpretation Mr. Rogers or Dr. Pugsley may place on that return.' But it was not upon the return but upon the statement Dr. Shortt made that Dr. Pugsley based his biting criticism of the Government. And the statement of Dr. Shortt, based though it may have been upon the return, was not based upon the comprehensive understanding of the whole matter Dr. Shortt should have had before he ventured upon gratuitous criticism of the Government. With but a casual understanding of the matter, on his own admission, Dr. Shortt made a bitter criticism of the Government, which was seized upon at once for exploitation by the political opponents of the present Administration.
>
> "In these circumstances, Dr. Shortt's statement, as was pointed out, was more 'dishonest, dishonourable and unfair' than 'accurate, actual and not unfair,' as it should have been."

Too Hysterical.

(Simcoe Reformer.)

There is no gainsaying the fact that the verdict permitting Carrie Davies to walk out of court a free woman leaves a bad taste in the mouth. There was altogether too much hysteria about the trial, from the judge down. It is all very well to extend sympathy to a woman, but how about the dead man, his widow, his son, his friends?

"Unless the neutral nations are prepared to assist in

There were never but two persons who knew the whole truth as to the murderer's story, and one of them was dead. And his name for all time is blackened — and neither judge, jury nor public can say whether justly or not. We wonder if any juryman remembered that if Massey treated the girl improperly, she was in a free country and there was nothing to compel her to go back to Massey's house.

Advice Not Needed.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

Bully for Sir Edward Grey. Britons everywhere will applaud his blunt and candid answer to the foolish proposal that the government should invite suggestions from neutrals for avoiding the further devastation of Belgium. There was but one fitting reply to such a proposal and Sir Edward Grey gave it:

throwing the Germans out of Belgium, no suggestions from them in the matter of preventing the further devastation of that country are wanted."

There is only one way to save what is left of stricken Belgium, and that is to throw the Germans out bodily.

Increased Production.

(The People's Press, Welland.)

While a great duty devolves upon the farmers at the present time, the opportunities are enormously great—so much so as to make townspeople envious in the extreme. W. Bert Roadhouse, speaking at Chatham, sized up the situation thus: "Increased production is not philanthropy. There is every indication that adequate prices will prevail this coming year. Market conditions give a basis for the conclusion that there will be a good demand for farm products at good prices."

Not Worth While.

(London News and Leader.)

It is easy to see that the United States, and, indeed, all neutrals, may view with uneasiness the prospect of a general assumption by threatened ships of colors other than their own. The use of neutral flags is an expedient to be adopted very sparingly, not so much because Germany has announced her intention of disregarding it, as because it may involve endless complications with the neutrals themselves. It is not worth this.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Fair today. Tuesday, northerly winds and a little colder with light local snow falls.

TO AMEND GAME LAWS

General Reduction in Bags is Likely at Present Session

TORONTO, March 15.—There is a possibility that after this year no wild ducks will be offered for sale in public markets of the province. A recommendation to this effect will be brought before the fish and game committee of the Legislature, which convenes this week. There are, in addition, several other radical suggestions which will be canvassed with a view to incorporation in legislation. One of these would make provision for a gun or general game license, the fee to vary from $1 to $5, and the age limit to be settled at 16 years. The use of the pump or repeating shot gun would be abolished.

During late years the fish and game committee has been considered as one of the lesser ones of the House, but this year a large number of important affairs will be handled. Game protective associations and individuals throughout Ontario have forwarded recommendations which will appear at the initial meeting to-morrow. In every case the number allowed to each hunter would be reduced.

ESKI SHEHR NEW CAPITAL

Turkish Officials are Packing up Archives for Shipment

LONDON, March 15.—A Reuter despatch from Sofia says:

"According to refugees who have arrived at Sofia from Constantinople work has been proceeding there for some time on the state archives which are being packed up and are to be sent away.

"Eski Shehr, in Asia Minor, it is reported, has been selected as the Ottoman capital until the fate of Constantinople is determined. Many valuables have already been sent to that town, where a number of buildings have been requisitioned for the purpose of housing the authorities.

"Owing to the disquieting situation many foreigners have left Constantinople. These include the families of the German and Austrian ambassadors.

Taylor Is Elected.

VANCOUVER, March 15.—L. D. Taylor, elected mayor of Vancouver at the recent municipal elections and unseated because of his lack of the necessary property qualifications was re-elected at the election on Saturday by a majority of more than 1,000 over the combined votes of his two opponents. The vote stood: Taylor 5,834, Hepburn 4,656, Whiteway 85.

Missing Commander May Be Dead.

LONDON, March 15.—Correspondent George Renwick cables The Chronicle from Athens: "Field Marshal von der Goltz, German commander of the Turkish army, arrived with a number of his staff some days ago at Smyrna under orders to stay for two months. Twenty-four hours later he left it is said by special train for an unknown destination. Since then no word has been heard regarding him. It is reported in the city and even believed by German officers that he met with a violent death."

Escaped From Burning House.

GALT, March 15.—Early yesterday morning fire completely destroyed the fine residence of Mrs. A. Newlands, 22 Middleton street. The fire was noticed at 5.45 a.m., and Mrs. Newlands and her daughter, Mrs. J. Chapman, awoke in time to make their escape in their night garments, the roof falling in shortly after they left the burning house. The origin of the blaze is not known. All that remains standing are the brick walls. The loss is estimated at about $9,000, and is partly covered by insurance.

LET not your left hand know what your right hand doeth. Some member of the family needs must be innocent and respectable.

"Who is?"

"She can't say very much."

"Why?"

"Because she has a little bit of originality and won't imitate, and I have already said about all the mean things about her that there are in the English language."

Seeing Ineffective.

"What is the matter with you?"

"I'm all run down."

"Have you seen a doctor?"

"Yes. I saw two of them, and it didn't do me a bit of good."

"What did they say?"

"They didn't say anything. We had not been introduced. I saw them as they went past."

The Real Thing.

The rich with all his store of wealth
One kind of pleasure misses—

Their Use.

"What cute little envelopes!"

"Yes, aren't they nice?"

"I should say so. They are made of heavy satin paper too."

"The very best."

"What are they designed for?"

Looks Promising.

"I wonder"—

"What do you wonder?"

"I wonder if my fiance will love me when I'm old."

"Well, he loves you now, doesn't he?"

The Back Number.

I am sitting in the twilight
Gazing at the passing throng
As in bunches and in couples
Down the street it moves along,
And I hear the constant babble
From the ceaseless human tongue,
And I watch the lovers spooning
As they did when I was young.

Here's a young and tender couple
Trading glances on the sly
Far away from home and mother,
Having dodged the watchful eye,
And I wonder as they wander
While they chat or softly sing
If they understand such antics
And the trouble they may bring.

How can children be so silly?
I was that way once, I know,
But I cannot be too thankful
I've outgrown it long ago.
They in fancy feel a blessing
Falling from the stars above,
When in truth the thing is only
But a case of puppy love.

Let them go if they enjoy it.
I can sit here with my pipe
Making comments philosophic
From experience more ripe.
Do I envy them their pleasure
As they sip the honey dew
From the lips on which it ripens?
I won't own it if I do.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

THE MOTH AND THE STAR

The Story of an Automobile Accident That Was Not Wholly Disastrous.

By Marvin Dana.

"One never sees you alone," I complained. "Always," I persisted, "you are in haste, occupied with a thousand things, with everything except me. To me you are unattainable as a star. Though I am near you often, really you are always remote. I can no more reach you than can a moth the star toward which it flutters."

"Yes," she said musingly, "I am a star. And, to tell you the truth, I like it. There is something about the center of the stage"—

But I interrupted rudely.

"You must understand that I require an opportunity."

"An opportunity?"

"In all this time I have had no opportunity. Your life is one wild whirl."

Elsa sat up straight and stared at me with all the ravishing beauty of the loveliest eyes in the world.

"No opportunity?" she repeated incredulously. "Now, what can you mean? Here you are alone with me in my drawing room while we are waiting for aunty to get her hat on. Here we are alone, I say. And you declare you have no opportunity! Opportunity for what?"

"Why, to declare my love," I answered indignantly. "Aunty, indeed! That's it—we're always waiting for her. She's pervasively present. I know she has planned deliberately to make me propose in her presence."

"What shall I do, then?" she questioned meekly as I paused.

"Just waive it all and be engaged," I suggested triumphantly. "Will you?"

"Yes, I think I will," Elsa said softly.

At that I had her in my arms and my lips met hers. My heart leaped with a joy new, dominant, complete. Beneath the mask of light words I had offered her my very soul.

Aunty entered the room. I went to her, gathered her up in my arms and kissed her with might.

We had been engaged three months when the inevitable serpent obtruded himself into our Eden.

I was in the orchestra the first night Elsa appeared in the role of Juliet. I was carried away by the simplicity and passion of her interpretation, its girlish purity, its womanly abandonment to love's dominion. Then, quite without warning, a pang of anguish pierced my heart.

The Romeo was an actor new to me, handsome, young, an ideal lover to the sight, and as Elsa looked adoration into his eyes the evil of jealousy entered my heart and remained.

That night after the play, at the gay supper party where I was with her, I remained sad and distraught. I forced myself to utter congratulations on the success she had achieved, but there was little heartiness in my words. She rallied me on my dull spirits, laughingly at first, then with kindly seriousness. But I could not shake off the gloom of my mood, which I explained by alleging an indisposition. Neither then nor after could I bring myself to confess my trouble.

A new play was put on, but it brought me no relief. On the contrary, my torture was increased. In the climax of the play the hero, he who had played Romeo, saved the heroine, Elsa, from great peril. She in an ecstasy of gratitude threw herself on his breast in complete abandonment of love. As she lay yielding in his arms, her head thrown back, her eyes burned into his with such fires of love I groaned aloud. The sight maddened me. I left my seat and the theater and did not see Elsa again that night.

I could not decide on my course, but in the morning I was calmer, and I set out with a fair amount of composure to fulfill an engagement with my fiancee. I had promised Elsa to take her in the auto out to Bronx park. I found her ready when I reached her house, and very soon we were rolling swiftly up Fifth avenue.

It was a perfect morning. The air was crisp with the chill of dawning winter, but not too cold. It set the blood coursing with new vigors and drove out sorrow from the heart. There, in the glory of the morning, in the pleasure of our smooth movement, with Elsa nestled close to my side, I forgot despair and reveled for the moment in the delight of it all.

"I love automobiling," Elsa said irrelevantly. "It is the lightest, daintiest movement, so—oh, subtle and, yes, aerial. I feel like a bird."

As we came to the open beauty of the Plaza I turned from the avenue into the park, and we went rolling along the gently undulating and winding driveway, charmed by the landscape on either hand.

As I ran the machine out of the park into Seventh avenue a carriage was passing, and I attempted to check our speed. To my dismay I found that there was no response to my effort. It was only by skillful guiding of the automobile that I escaped a collision.

Once free of that danger, I set myself to regain control of the apparatus. But my work was vain. Somehow the mechanism had gone wrong. I could only guide the automobile and pray for a safe issue. Unfortunately in the last stretch of the park I had increased the speed, and we were running fast.

"You are reckless this morning," Elsa said, with a laugh of pleasure, as we shot swiftly between two carriages, perilously close.

I made no answer, only prayed for a clear course. We were at One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street now. In a few moments we should reach the bridge.

And then the worst happened.

As we rolled toward the bridge Elsa clapped her hands gayly, like a child.

"Oh, see!" she cried. "We shall have to stop. The bridge is going to open!"

Horror closed in on me. I cast one searching glance about us, but there was no place to turn; in every direction the way was blocked. There was no choice possible. I must let the machine run straight on.

I knew then that I could no longer conceal the truth from Elsa. She must know the fate that threatened, looming ghastly, inevitable.

I turned and spoke to her softly, pityingly, a prayer for forgiveness in my voice.

"Elsa, dearest, I cannot stop the auto!"

In the one glance I gave her I saw the pallid agony of her face, and my heart was near broken with despair. One cry came from her lips, a sound, half sob, half moan, breathed and was broken. She had fainted, lying inert against me.

We were on the bridge now. The seconds of our time were numbered. Leaving the machine to run straight, with tense rapidity I threw myself over its back and rudely dragged Elsa to a place beside me on the box that contained the power. There I knelt, facing forward. Then, still kneeling, I gathered up my love in my arms, holding her close to my bosom.

There were shouts of wonder and alarm from others on the bridge. The time that now remained before the crash could be only seconds. I straightened myself on my knees, then leaned back abruptly, Elsa still in my arms. In an instant I was falling backward; then my feet touched the flooring of the bridge.

I fell heavily on my side. My last thought was that at all costs she must not suffer harm. Then blackness closed in on me, and I was lost in nothingness.

They told me afterward that the crash of the motorcar against the rail and its headlong rush into the river below were wonderful and terrifying. As for Elsa and me, we knew nothing of it all. When I regained consciousness, however, Elsa was kneeling by me, her eyes beaming tenderness and pity.

Clumsily I rose to my feet. I was aching in every bone, but I was not seriously harmed.

I was soiled with the dirt of the street, a little bloody from bruises here and there, very weak and trembling, but after a moment my brain cleared, and I was able to climb into a hansom. As I leaned wearily against the cushions Elsa's hand stole to mine and clasped it gently. She turned her face to me, and I saw that her eyes were filled with tears.

"Thank you," she said.

There was a beautiful kindliness in her voice, a soft, womanly appreciation of the service I had rendered, a restrained emotion of tenderness. But, weak, suffering, dazed, I yet perceived that here there was no passionate fervor.

I made a formal answer, then rested silent. Elsa, in sympathy for my mood, said no more.

The next morning I went to her. She met me with eager solicitude as to my condition after the accident. I answered briefly.

"Elsa, I come to release you from your engagement to me."

The color faded from her face, and she stared at me in amazement.

"Yes," I continued; "I believe you thought you loved me. You have been, you are, my friend, but I have seen the passion you can feel, the depth, the ardor, of your heart, and I know your love is not for me. So I release you."

"You have seen? Where? When?" she stammered wonderingly.

"I have seen you on the stage, in Ansteed's arms, his Juliet, his Margaret, in the new play. Oh, and it has broken my heart to see you lying so willingly in his embrace, your eyes blazing love into his! Yes, Elsa; it is death to give you up, but I know I have no choice, for your heart is not mine, but his."

Elsa laughed. I recoiled in mingled indignation and sorrow.

"You are amused by this!" I cried.

"Forgive me," she said very seriously. "But you are so foolish, dearest. Let me tell you something. You have given me the greatest compliment I have ever received as an actress. And you were really jealous! Oh, you darling! Almost I am glad of it. Hear me. On the stage I play my part—my part, do you understand? Nothing more. Off the stage, with you, I am not artificial; I am only natural. To my lover on the stage I am his heroine, silly, passionate, weeping, mad, anything the part demands—a thousand things. With you I am only one thing, natural, simple—a woman who loves, who loves—you! Are you content? With you I show only what I feel. Isn't that enough?"

Somehow, as she spoke, the scales fell from my eyes. I saw there in her gentle tenderness the profounder passion of sincerity, of abiding love. I drew her to me, my heart beating a reveille of joy.

"As to Ansteed, I have asked our manager to discharge him. He leaves this week. Oh, such a man! I'd rather rant to a stick! And you, sweetheart? Oh, I love you too much to be actress to you! Besides, really you ought to be content, for—well, just for this—I love you!"

And then my kiss silenced her.

Little Miss Brown All Ready For the Plunge.

Among a score or so of girl swimmers who took part in the racing and diving contests at the recent Sportsman's Show in New York city none attracted so much attention as Miss Catherine Brown. She was the youngest of the lot and surely the handsomest. Miss Catherine is only five years old, but she has been an expert swimmer ever since she was able to walk. Her father, Commodore Alfred Brown of the American Life Saving society, is a professional swimmer, and he used to take Catherine out in Flushing bay when she was a baby. In fact, she is not much more than that yet. But under his tutelage she has become an expert diver and is able to swim long distances. Her home is in Flushing, a part of New York city.

Going to the Front.

Four young soldiers in the uniform of the 48th Highlanders stopped at the corner of King and Yonge streets, Toronto, while one of them bought a newspaper. Just then a couple of young fellows of a size much larger than the soldiers walked past, and one of them exclaimed to the other: "Look at those specimens?" One of the young soldiers stepped forward quickly and prodded the speaker on the chest with a short, strong finger. "Stranger," he said, "I am going to the front," and he strongly emphasized the "I."—Toronto Star.

ALLEN McMULLEN INVENTOR OF HUMANE TRAP

Canadian Woodman Makes a Device to Prevent Suffering of Captured Animals

North of Sioux Look-Out about 200 miles, which is to say in the district of Patricia, formerly called Keewatin, Land of the North Wind, lives Mr. Allen McMullen, some time of the Peace, Athabasca, and Mackenzie River country, originally of British Columbia, and, during the gold excitement an active Klondyker.

Mr. McMullen has been trapping and prospecting in the far Northwest all his life, that is since at the age of fifteen he joined forces with his father in the Rocky Mountains of B.C. He came down into the James Bay country a few years ago, and finding that there were few white men in the region of Patricia, he settled down there for a while, with two or three pals of his. Allen McMullen has done what nobody else in all the years that trapping has been a feature of industry in this country has had the heart or the brains to do. He has invented a humane trap, a trap that catches the little furry animal and kills it instantly. It has been endorsed by the Humane Society.

For centuries men in the pursuit of fur have considered it quite legitimate to snare, or dead fall, or spring trap, irrespective of the fiendish cruelty involved. Animals are caught without compunction or protest in any convenient manner, so long as the method employed does not injure the fur. The common spring trap catches the animal by the leg and breaks it. Then the little animal must bear the pain for days until the trapper returns, or must die slowly of pain and cold.

Mr. McMullen has thought of these things in the course of his thirty years of trapping. He has seen animal suffering enough in that time, God knows. At any rate he has thought out a humane trap. The idea is a combination of the old-fashioned snare noose and a strong steel spring. A little box is used instead of the little Indian house of driven stakes. In the box is a hole about the size of a mink's body, and the bait is hung on a hook inside the box, at the back. The hook is a hair trigger, releasing the spring at the slightest touch. The spring draws up the noose of fine wire cable, which hangs around the edge of the circular doorway, and does so with such strength and force that the little animal's neck is broken instantaneously.

"My trap is rabbit-proof," said Mr. McMullen. "No rabbit is going into a place like that to eat fish and meat. A rabbit don't live on that kind of food. The trap is safe from the Whiskey Jack, too. No Whiskey Jack can get his head in far enough to set it off. Every trapper in the North knows what a cussed nuisance the Whiskey Jack is. He sets off about one trap out of every four. He goes pecking at the bait, and if he don't get caught himself, with his interfering with what don't concern him, he spoils the trap for any fur that might have got caught if he had let it alone. The fur is not injured by this trap. And an animal can't escape by eating his foot off, like they do sometimes in the steel traps."

Mr. McMullen is a big, fine-looking Scotch-Canadian bushman, with long, dark, wavy hair. He speaks English, Ojibway, Cree, and Siwash. He has lived so much with the Indians that he talks like them in short, jerky, low-voiced sentences, often without bothering to use the articles, auxiliary verbs, and other unessential parts of speech. This is not because he does not know how, for he has a wider knowledge and education than many a man who has spent all his life within reach of schools, libraries, and newspapers. It's because he thinks by short-cuts, and talks the same way. To the bush wise, much talk is foolishness, and a grunt expresses a whole lot to those with understanding.

One of Hook's Puns.

Theodore Hook, the inveterate punster, could pun with gayety upon matters that touched his own pocket. He enlivened the usually prosaic and unwelcome duty of paying his taxes by a word of advice to his neighbors to do likewise—which it is to be hoped the worthy Mr. Winter, the collector, found of some assistance:

Here comes Mr. Winter, inspector of taxes.
I advise you to pay him whatever he axes.
I advise you to pay him without any flummery,
For though his name's Winter, his actions are summary!

BOARD OF TRADE WOULD BE PREMIER ORGANIZATION IF ALL KNOCKERS JOINED

President's Address Points to Accomplishments of Patriotic Fund as Example of Harmonious Action

Resume of Year's Operations Shows Some Good Work Has Been Done

In his report to the Board of Trade at the annual meeting Saturday night, President B. D. Hall said:—

Another year has passed since we held an annual meeting, and we come before you to present our report which has just been read by your secretary, and which, I trust, will meet with your approval. The year has been one of exceptional di- difficulties with the Board. We commenced operations as an entirely new organization, and were faced to the problems which await all inexperienced bodies. However, thanks to the loyal support of the officers and council of the board, we have met the problems and have accomplished at least part of the program we had set before us at the commencement of the year. You will remember that at the first meeting after organization, I brought in a list of objects for the year, and it was decided to attempt to carry some of them to completion. These objects were:

1. To collect information of matters pertaining to the city and arrange them in accessible shape.
2. To assist manufacturers and merchants in solving problems confronting them.
3. To advertise the advantages of the municipality.
4. To open an office where information could be procured regarding civic matters, statistics, etc.
5. To establish a fund to be used in procuring new industries.
6. To urge the establishment of public parks, playgrounds, etc.
7. To correct any abuses in freight and passenger service.

We have not accomplished all these objects, but early in the year a booklet was prepared and published which contains a large amount of useful information about the city in concise form. In compiling this book it was necessary to photograph and have cuts made of our sources of power. This has, apparently, never been done. The cuts are now available for any further publication of the same order. The merchants and manufacturers did not avail themselves as much as they might have done of our desire to assist them, but on several occasions it has been our privilege, when they advised us of some of their difficulties, to be of assistance. We arranged for the manufacturers to meet Mr. H. M. Poussette, Canadian Trade Commissioner to Buenos Ayres, and so put them in touch with the idea of developing export trade. Through one of your officers, a local factory has commenced manufacturing a line never before considered by them, and I am informed this will be the means of giving employment to from fifty to seventy-five extra operatives at good wages. We have been called on by the merchants in regard to a grievance caused by the curtailment of the passenger service, and three of our executive, with the local member of the Legislature, had a conference with the general superintendent of the C. P. R. with a view to obtaining a remedy. No doubt sooner or later this will be given. We succeeded in having the Port McNichol train run to suit the convenience of local merchants for a time, but later the time-table was changed and our work undone. We endeavored to procure a special rate on the railroads to inaugurate the baseball season, and bring business to the city, but were refused the concession, as the railroads did not wish to establish a precedent in this regard. We expressed our belief that the abolition of Christmas shopping would react unfavorably on the merchants and citizens and bring the "Business as usual" sign out when it was most needed. We remedied the morning paper difficulty to some extent, and citizens can thank the Board of Trade for getting their papers before nine o'clock occasionally.

Ad. Club Convention.

Eight of our council, at considerable inconvenience and expense, personally attended the Toronto Ad. Club convention, at which some five thousand delegates from manufacturing concerns all over North America were present, opened the most attractive municipal booth there and showed views of the city and distributed booklets and information regarding it to the delegates. Whenever we have heard of a factory thinking of locating in Canada, we have written advising of the advantages of our city and sent our literature. In this regard, there is no reason why Peterborough should not be as well known as Saskatoon, Regina, Moosejaw, Hamilton or any other Canadian city outside of the larger places if a progressive campaign of advertising were launched, and I hope every member of this board will, whenever possible, place before his audience or his correspondents in other places, something that will cause Peterborough to appear as a desirable place to live and carry on business. Talk Peterborough, it's worth while.

We have not been able to open a permanent office yet, owing to lack of funds, and for the same reason have not commenced our fund for procuring new industries. It is to be hoped that before the next annual meeting such an office will be opened and such a fund started. The office is a vital necessity to a useful and successful Board of Trade, and it would be a good thing if in connection a meeting and reading room could be added where members could congregate and bring their friends for a monthly smoker and talk. In talking with officers of other Boards of Trade, I have been impressed with the idea that two prime requisites of a successful organization are:

1. Permanent quarters.
2. A substantial annual fee.

The question of establishing parks and playgrounds came up during the year, and we co-operated with the other bodies in an endeavor to have playgrounds and bathing places established. No doubt as the years go on these matters will receive attention, but we must keep agitating periodically or they are liable to be forgotten in the stress of other business.

The freight rates in certain localities have been considered, and we have promised to co-operate with an association interested in having them equitably adjusted, and are only waiting for a report and specific information to proceed.

The passenger service has been curtailed, and, following the action taken in presenting our protest in person, it is reported that a substantial remedy is being provided. In the early part of our year a vigorous protest was presented to the railway officials about the freight service, with the result that the service was much improved.

Nine Meetings.

We held nine meetings during the year, with an average attendance of sixteen. This small attendance, made up largely of the council of the Board, is rather discouraging to men who are trying their best to do their duty as citizens. If large attendances could be procured, the Board would like to invite speakers to address the meetings on matters of special interest, but when we had a speaker on a subject in which all citizens were interested, only twenty-eight persons turned out. The Board would like to receive communications from citizens with feasible ideas for the improvement of conditions for discussion at meetings, but these suggestions should be written out and posted to the secretary, who will notify the sender when the discussion is to take place. It fell to a few of the council this past year to make all suggestions, and no doubt there were many things omitted from the work attempted which might have been accomplished to the benefit of our city.

There has been a disposition on the part of a few citizens to criticise the Board and claim that it does not carry the weight it should. I submit it is a mistake to do this, nor can I see what is to be gained by it. If all the knockers in Peterborough would get out and join the Board of Trade and boost we would be the heaviest body in Ontario. Peterborough is very well thought of outside her borders, and there is no sense in depreciating ourselves even to ourselves. A great deal can be accomplished by harmonious action, as has been evidenced by the organization of the Patriotic Fund ommittee.

Incidentally, the Board last year increased its membership to about one hundred and forty. It is not big enough yet.

We obtained the use of the council chamber for the second Tuesday in each month, for which a vote of thanks has been given to the Mayor and Council. We have worked harmoniously with the Council, and I believe we can continue to do so as the Council are actuated with the same motives as ourselves.

We assisted the Stoney Lake Cottagers in obtaining the extension of the train service at Lakefield to the steamboat wharf, which has proved a great benefit to many of the citizens of Peterborough as well as to our visitors.

We were favored with an address by Mr. Peck, M.L.A., on recent legislation dealing with such questions as Hydro-Electric Power, the Workmens' Compensation Act, and others.

We had a discussion on Hydro Radials, and sent a delegate to the meeting at Toronto. Mr. Worth, who attended the first meeting, presented a very able and full report of the proceedings, which was fully published at the time it was given. One of the council, Mr. Matthews, has been appointed chairman of the committee on hydro radials for this district, and your president was appointed on that committee with the mayors of Kingston and Belleville.

$500 for Belgians.

We undertook the collection of Belgian relief in the city with the result that over $500 was collected and used in the purchase of 160 bags of Peterborough-made flour, which has been sent to help relieve the distress of these sufferers.

We took up the unemployment problem so effectively that over three hundred men have been given work and earned for themselves and saved the city between four and five thousand dollers.

The question of having a parks commissioner has been discussed and is to be considered more fully, and there are several other matters to be taken up by the new Board.

A very enjoyable luncheon was held in the Oriental, at which Rev. Dr. Gordon addressed over a hundred members of the Board on the "Relationship of a True Citizen to His City."

The result of the operations during the year is that your council and executive have had a useful and interesting training in Board of Trade work.

Some of the matters to be considered next year by the Board, if I may be permitted to suggest, are Good Roads, Hydro Radials, Increased Production, Advertising, and Means to Induce the Summer Tourist to come to Our Summer Resorts.

We sent a representative to the meetings of the Associated Boards of Trade in Toronto last month, at which about two hundred delegates were present from all parts of Ontario. We should have had five representatives, for the meetings were very interesting and instructive.

At this meeting, after the addresses of welcome by the mayor of Toronto, the Premier of Ontario and the president of the Toronto Board of Trade, who all spoke highly of the effective work being done by the association, we had an excellent address by the president, Mr. A. J. Young, of North Bay, who outlined the work done during the past year. He stated that the energies of the committee had been confined to measures dealing with relief for unemployed and war sufferers. He spoke of the work done by the Industrial Association of Ontario through which unemployment throughout the Province has been taken care of satisfactorily and the assistance given to the Belgian Relief Fund Committee by the different Boards. He referred to the growth of the demand for consideration in the hydro radial scheme and regretted that northern Ontario had been left out of consideration in this work. He believed that the carrying out of the scheme would be the greatest boon Ontario has ever received. He spoke of the formation of the Dominion Association of Boards of Trade, stating that the western associations were in accord with the proposition. He referred to the new Naturalization Act by which persons naturalized under its provisions becom British subjects throughout the Empire instead of in Canada only, as under the old system, and of the usefulness of the parcel post, and other matters favorably considered and featured by former meetings of the association. He suggested changing the date of the annual meeting to the Fall of the year, so that resolutions passed might reach the governments before their programs had been completed. He spoke of the need of funds by the Technical Education Association and of the good work it is doing, of the satisfactory value of Canadian securities, maintained in spite of the war, the strong condition of our banks, and the need of greater production and the fostering of food-producing industries. The agricultural committee reported on the cattle situation, giving the increase in the number of cows in ten years as seven per cent., and of their production sixty per cent., showing the quality is being improved. The value has increased from $27 to $42 in the ten years.

The resolutions were then before the house, and each was dealt with very carefully and impartially on its merits.

I cannot let this occasion pass without paying a tribute to the manner in which Peterborough has responded to the call of the Empire. Many of our citizens are now fighting for the rights of citizenship which we enjoy, many more are on their way to join the others, and so long as the war lasts and the need exists, Peterborough will continue to do its generous share, and in the meantime our factories are producing and will continue to produce our share of the supplies required, and there will never be any stigma attached to any goods bearing the label "Made in Peterborough."

REPORT PROGRESS AT CO-OPERATIVE STORE

The Peterborough Co-operative Society held its second annual concert and social in the Woodmen of the World hall, George St., Friday evening, the chair being ably filled by the Alex. Murray, President of the Society. Mr. Murray, who had barely recovered from illness made a sacrifice in turning out, but he was not to be denied the opportunity of showing to the public deep interest in the welfare of the society. He dwelt with pride on the fine progress co-operation has made in Peterborough since the days of its inception, he himself being one of the founders of the society. Although he made these remarks in modest terms, neither he or his co-directors ever received one cent for their services. The society's successful progress was uppermost in their minds. He dwelt on the great and lasting good co-operation had bestowed upon Peterborough and although opponents had only given the young society six months to get down and out it was still in existence and flourishing as was evidenced by the large audience present which filled the hall on this occasion to its utmost capacity. The program was as follows:—

Chairman's address.
Instrumental—Mr. R. Devey.
Song—Veteran's Song—Mr. Bartley.
Reading—He Tried to Tell His Wife—Miss Carter.
Song—Will O' the Wisp — Mr. T. Ward.
Song—Motherland—Mrs. Burrell.
Conjuring act—Mr. H. Carte.
Duet—A Country Courtship—Mr. and Mrs. Devey.

Song—Garden of My Heart—Miss D. Rathbone.
Duet—Life's Dream is O'er — Misses Cole.
Song—Mr. Bartley.
Ventriloquist—Mr. Cole.
God Save the King.

The artists who were well received rendered their parts in first class style and delighted the audience. The refreshments were a great credit to those responsible for the catering. Mr. Rogers, in a brief address, surveyed the great benefits derived from co-operation and pointed out that from every view point it would prove the salvatioin of the people of this country as it had done to the people of Great Britain and he urged the members to be loyal to their own store, to their own interest and their own benefit.

BETTER AN EYEGLASS THAN A GLASS EYE

"Putting it off till tomorrow" is neither wisdom nor economy where the safety of your eyes is concerned. Little eye troubles lead to big ones, usually, unless steps to correct them are taken. By means of scientific instruments we can tell you whether glasses will do much or little for you. Even if you do not need glasses, our assurance is worth vastly more than the time required to be examined. Why not be sure that your eyesight is safe?

We manufacture and fit PEBLO glasses exclusively.

PLOWING MATCH FOR NEXT FALL

Several Fields Have Been Offered for Competition

DIRECTORS MEET

A meeting of the directors of the County of Peterborough Plowman's Association was held in the office of Farm and Dairy on Saturday afternoon. Preliminary arrangements for next falls match were completed. The match held last fall was so successful it has been decided to enlarge the match this year to include additional classes.

It was reported that several fields have been offered for the next match. A committee composed of H. G. Webber, North Monaghan; S. Matchett, Joshua Smithson, Reeve W. A. Anderson for Otonabee; C. E. Moore and Geo. Cockburn for Smith; Max Brown and Wm. Knox for Asphodel, were appointed to ascertain what fields in their respective townships are suitable and available for the match. It is thought that it might be well to move the match around each year so as to increase the interest in different parts of the county.

President Garbutt reported that he and Mr. Smithson had waited on the County Council and received a special grant of $100. Mr. Smithson stated that he had some correspondence with Andrew Hood of Guelph and Mr. McLean, two former provincial champions, who had intimated that they will endeavor to be present at the next match. It was suggested that they would make good judges as they are possibly the two most experienced plowmen in the province.

The suggestion was made that it might be a good idea to hold a banquet after the next plowing match and present the prizes on this occasion. This matter will be considered later when the place for holding the match has been decided upon.

The following additional committees were appointed: Finance, J. H. Garbutt, H. B. Cowan, and F. L. Campbell; Prize List, Joshua Smithson, J. Gillespie and J. L. Hatherley; Mr. C. E. Moore was appointed chairman of the subscription committee which will be composed of the members of the directorate.

The directors present were: President, J. H. Garbutt; vice-president, J. Gillespie, and Messrs. J. L. Hatherley, C. E. Moore, H. B. Cowan, R. H. Harrison, Max Brown, Joshau Smithson, and Secretary F. L. Campbell.

DR. GRAHAM AT CHARLOTTE ST. CHURCH

"Wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times and the strength of thy salvation." This was the passage from Isaiah that the Rev. Dr. Graham, Secretary of Education of the Methodist Church, took for the text of his sermon in Charlotte Street Methodist Church Sunday evening. It was a forceful, interesting discourse and the church was filled to capacity to hear it.

Dr. Graham said that his work had taken him over a very large part of Canada. This is a great and beautiful land. He had seen the pleasant places in Newfoundland, the wonderful Anapolis valley in bloom. The prairies were not monotonous to him. Out West they burn their straw stacks, and, to the poetic mind, these fires on the prairie appeared like the beacon light of a greater civilization to come. He would not describe the Rockies because they beggared description. The Alps did not equal the sea of mountains on the western coast of Canada.

The beauty of this country is equalled by its natural resources such as timber, coal, iron, nickel, silver and gold. The dairy wealth of Ontario was great; of th immense wheat belt in Canada the soil was so rich, the speaker said, that it had but to be tickled to laugh in harvest. Now, I am not boasting. The Jews spoke of Judia as a land flowing with milk and honey—then Canada is a land flowing with cream and honey. Judea was not to be compared to Canada yet the Jew was proud of it and why should not we be proud of Canada?

We must become as great as our country. Our greatest wealth is not in our farms but in our farmers; not in our capital, but in the men who work in our factories and workshops; not in the great universities but in the students—that is men. The greatest wealth of a nation is its youth and the great problem of modern democracy is Christian education. Government by the people depends on the electorate. The youth must be trained in citizenship. The public school is at the very basis of the nation's life.

Lift up the Ideals.

The speaker didn't believe in education to produce sheer efficiency. It ought to lift up the ideals of the nation. Germany has developed only along the lines of snear efficiency. In some respects Germany has not failed. She has efficiency. She has come up because of her education. Moltke said at the close of the Franco-Prussian war, "The schoolmaster has won our battles."

FARMER CALLED TO POLICE COURT

Charged With Cruelty Toward Cattle and Swine

Three calves, a cow and one pig formed the basis of a county police court case this morning, when Barnard Navin, a North Monaghan farmer, was arraigned on a charge of cruelty to said cattle and swine. The cruelty was alleged to consist of failing to provide them with sufficient food. The charge was laid by High County Constable Archie Moore, who received information relative to the condition of the animals and journeyed out to look them over. Constable Moore declared in court that he had found the animals in a dark corner of a barn. The pig was looking sad and wallowed in considerable water in its pen, and he failed to find much feed for it. Later he ordered some from Mr. Roland Denne, which was delivered shortly after. Constable Moore said the cattle were scarcely strong enough to move.

There was quite a stack of witnesses for the crown. Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution and Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for Nevin.

The case adjourned at 1 o'clock till 4 o'clock this afternoon.

TWILIGHT MUSICALE.

An al Irish program was presented Saturday afternoon in the Conservatory of Music hall at the "twilight musicale." A program of selected Irish numbers was supplied each of which was received with great applause.

Mrs. Perrin rendered "Macushla" in excellent voice and made this sweet Irish melody one of the most beautiful of the program. Mr. Wood contributed a French horn solo, and Mr. W. A. Dygan recited "The Irish Philosopher," in his customary acceptable style. The singing of "Danny Boy," by Miss Florence Scott was also warmly received.

Mrs. Perrin sang the "Irish Lullaby, and Mr. Otto Gliddon contributed "Long Long Ago," on the clarionet, both numbers taking well.

The orchestra numbers were in keeping with the program and won their share of the applause throughout.

The accompanists were Miss Dean and Miss McKee.

The next "twilight musicale" will be held on Saturday, April 10th.

STRENGTH

Without Overloading the Stomach

The business man, especially, needs food in the morning that will not overload the stomach, but give mental vigor for the day.

Much depends on the start a man gets each day as to how he may expect to accomplish the work on hand.

He can't be alert with a heavy, fried-and-potatoes breakfast, requiring a lot of vital energy in digesting it.

A Western business man found a food combination for producing energy. He writes:

"For years I was unable to find a breakfast food that had nutrition enough to sustain a business man without overloading his stomach, causing indigestion and kindred ailments.

"Being a very busy and also a very nervous man, I had about decided to give up breakfast altogether. But luckily I was induced to try Grape-Nuts.

"Since that morning I have been a new man; can work without tiring, my head is clear and my nerves strong and quiet.

"I find that Grape-Nuts, with a little sugar and a small quantity of cold milk, makes a delicious morning meal, which invigorates me for the day's business."

COMPLETE VICTORY IS WON AT NEUVE CHAPELLE

British War Office Says Counter-Attacks Delivered by the Enemy on Saturday Were all Repulsed and Prisoners up to the Present Are Over 1,700—Germans Rushing up Reinforcements to Scene.

LONDON, March 15. — The War Office last night made the following announcement, presumably with reference to the operations at Neuve Chapelle, near Lille:

"A heavy counter-attack delivered by the enemy Saturday afternoon and several minor counter-attacks earlier in the day all were repulsed.

"Judging by observations on various positions of the field of battle and by statements of prisoners, of whom there are now 1,720, the enemy's losses must have been very heavy, and cannot have fallen far short of ten thousand men within three days.

"A train at the Don station was blown up by our aircraft Sunday morning."

Gen. Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the British forces on the continent, sent the following despatch to the War Office on Saturday:

"A little further progress in the war was made to-day (Saturday) by the Seventh Division in the direction of Aubere. The fighting has been very severe, as the enemy was strongly reinforced this morinng, opposite my right, by at least two divisions. We captured 612 prisoners, however, and I hear there are more to come in.

"Our air craft have been very active, and the railroad junctions at Don and Doual have been destroyed."

The following official statement regarding the Lille operations was issued by the War Office last night:—

"The British air squadron has effectively bombarded Westende.

"The success gained by the British armies at Neuve Chapelle proves to have been absolutely complete. They advanced on a front of about three kilometers (about two miles), with a depth of from twelve hundred to fifteen hundred metres, capturing successively three lines of trenches and a fortified work to the south of Neuve Chapelle. Counter-attacks delivered by the Germans with great violence were repulsed.

"The enemy suffered great losses, and left in the hands of our allies prisoners to a number considerably greater than at first reported.

"The British heavy and field artillery very effectively prepared the way for and supported the vigorous action of the infantry."

A Rotterdam despatch says that information received here from the frontier indicates that the British success at La Bassee has thrown the whole German right wing into a remarkable state of activity. Men are being hurried from all the garrisons in the rear of the line and some from the coast towns to stop the advance of the British.

Official advices from the front, describing the occupation of Vauquois, in the Argonne region, by the French, say:

"After several days' desperate fighting the French troops took possession of the plateau and half the village of Vauquois, on the eastern outskirts of the Argonne, and have been able to prevent the Germans from making use of this important strategic position to their own advantage."

FOUR STEAMERS SUNK BY FOE'S SUBMARINES

German Under-Sea Craft Have Torpedoed and Sent to the Bottom the Indian City, the Invergle, the Auguste Conseil and the Swedish Steamer Hanna—Loss of Life is Small.

LONDON, March 15.—Activity of German submarines within the past few days is admitted in a British Admiralty report last night. At least four vessels are known to have been sunk, while the fate of several others attacked is in doubt. Few lives were lost. The record is:

Torpedoed and sunk:

Steamer Indian City, of Glasgow, 2,921 tons, off Scilly Islands, on March 12; the vessel had a cotton cargo and was bound from Galveston to Havre; crew safe.

British collier Invergyle, of Glasgow, 1,141 tons, off Cresswell, Eng., on March 13; crew safe.

French steamer Auguste Conseil, 1,852 tons, off southern end of Devon, on March 11; the vessel was bound from Cardiff to Rouen with a coal cargo; crew safe.

Swedish steamer Hanna, off Scarborough; six lives lost.

Torpedoed, probably lost:

British steamer Florazan, on March 11, while crossing English Channel from Havre; one of crew reported drowned; vessel was set on fire, and was probably lost.

British steamer Andalusian, off Scilly Islands, on March 2; crew safe.

Steamer Hartdale, reported sunk off South Lock, in the Irish Channel, with a loss of two lives.

The steamer Adenwen was towed into Cherbourg after being torpedoed in the English Channel on March 11.

A Bordeaux despatch, via Paris, says the steamer Auguste Conseil, from Cardiff for Rouen, with a cargo of coal, was torpedoed by a submarine off the Start Point, near the southern extremity of Devon, Eng., on Thursday afternoon. The crew of 28 men are reported to have been saved by a Danish steamer and taken to Falmouth.

An eye-witness of the torpedoing of the British steamers Indian City and Headlands, off the Scilly Islands, says:

"About eight o'clock Friday morning a German submarine torpedoed the steamer Indian City, off Biddeford, within sight of Hughtown, on St. Mary's Island. The submarine remained in the vicinity about an hour, and was an object of keen interest to the islanders, who watched developments as the crew of the steamer rowed their boats toward the shore.

"After evading the patrol boats the submarine sighted the City Headlands of Hartlepool and went in pursuit of the ship. The chase was brief. The German easily overtook the steamer when seven miles had been covered. Both vessels were seen to be constantly turning and manoeuvering as a result of the merchantman's attempts to escape destruction. Finally the steamer stopped and a large quantity of steam was seen escaping from her safety valves. Then it was noticed that preparations were being made to leave the steamer and a few minutes later the crew was observed in a lifeboat pulling away."

The Headlands was then destroyed.

The crew of the British steamer Florazan, which was torpedoed at the mouth of the Bristol Channel, March 11, arrived here yesterday. The men say that their cargo of cotton had been discharged at Havre and the steamer was crossing the channel to England. No submarine had been seen.

The Admiralty last night issued a report giving the total number of British merchant and fishing vessels lost through hostile action from the outbreak of the war to March 10. The statement says that during that period 88 merchant vessels were sunk or captured. Of these 54 were victims of the hostile cruisers, 12 were destroyed by mines and 22 by submarines. The gross tonnage totaled 309,945.

In the same period the total arrivals and sailings of overseas steamers of all nationalities, of over 300 tons net were 4,745.

Forty-seven fishing vessels were sunk or captured during this time. Nineteen of these were blown up by mines and 28 were captured by hostile craft. Twenty-four of these captured were caught on Aug. 26 when, it is understood, the Germans raided a fishing fleet.

NO QUARTER WAS GIVEN

Bayonet Fight Was a Sanguinary One

GENEVA, March 15.—(Via Paris.) Details received here of the engagement fought between the French and Germans for the possession of the heights at Reich Ackerkopf stamp it as one of the most sanguinary of the war in Alsace. Many regiments were used on both sides, and they frequently were reinforced.

"Gen. Deimling personally directed three German counter-attacks against the crest of a hill which had been captured by French Chasseurs and Alpine troops.

"According to reports no quarter was given and none was asked. Few shots were fired, for most of the work was done with the bayonet. The Germans, it is said, after four repulses retired to Muehlbach, leaving 900 dead and three times that many wounded. Grim bravery was shown by the troops on both sides.

"The success reported by the French gives them a position commanding two valleys for their artillery."

Plans for Stricken Cities.

PARIS, March 15.—A commission of French architects, comprising building experts from the cities and towns destroyed by Germans, some of which are called like Rheims, Arras, Senlis and Roye, the "assassinated towns," have already drawn up plans for rebuilding on new, larger and better scale.

Meat Long Since Gone.

VENICE, March 15. — (Via London.)—Private letters received here from Vienna say that the poorer classes in that city are suffering acutely on account of the scarcity of food. Meat has long since disappeared from their tables. Bread is scarce and high in price, it being almost impossible to buy flour.

Four men, employes of the Drew Levick Co., who owned the tank, were reported missing.

The tank was partly underground and was said to have contained 11,000 gallons of oil. The force of the explosion shattered windows for a radius of several blocks.

The four boys killed were playing near the tank and met instant death. Those injured were passersby in the street, who were knocked down.

German Street Names Stay.

LONDON, March 15.—The London County Council is not encouraging the changing of German street names. Despite the face that the borough council of Stoke-Newington requested that Wiesbaden road should be re-named Beatty road, after the naval hero, the local government committee in its report, which will be submitted to-day, says it is not satisfied that sufficient cause for the alteration has been made out. Recently the county council decided to take no action with regard to renaming Berlin road Gatford. Suggestions have been made by many citizens to change the name of Hanover square and St. Petersburg place.

BRITISH FIRE IS TERRIFIC

In Thirty-five Minutes, it Obliterated Enemy's Trenches

EYE-WITNESS STORY

LONDON, March 15.—The British offensive, which resulted in the capture of Neuve Chapelle and the country beyond it, began early in the morning of March 10 with a bombardment by a large number of guns and howitzers, according to an eye-witness with the British Expeditionary Force in France.

"Our men in the trenches," he says, "describe this fire as being the most tremendous, both in point of noise and in actual effect, they have ever seen or heard. The shrieking of shells in the air, their explosion and the continuous thunder of the batteries were all merged into one great volume of sound. The discharges of the guns were so rapid that they sounded like the fire of a gigantic machine gun.

"During the 35 minutes it continued our men could show themselves freely and walk about in perfect safety. Then the signal for the attack was given, and in less than half an hour almost the whole of the elaborate series of German trenches in and about Neuve Chapelle was in our hands.

"The columns of prisoners as they marched back, threading their way through ambulances and transport and between the waiting ranks of our reserves, afforded no little encouragement. The faces of many of them were bright yellow from the effects of the lyddite; the majority looked shaken, and all admitted that the attack had come as a complete surprise.

"Our success does not lie in the fact that we have gained an extent of ground probably greater than has ever before been gained in the space of so short a time since the commencement of the present form of trench warfare, but in that our men, in spite of the disheartening effects of months of inactivity in the trenches, have shown the utmost dash throughout these operations."

Military Cowardice

Punishment for cowardice in the German army at the time of the Thirty Years' war was so severe as to be ferocious. In the year 1642 the Swedish General Torstensson stormed Leipzig. A force under the command of the Grand Duke Leopold gave him battle before the gates of the city, but during the engagement the Madlonische regiment became suddenly panic stricken and fled.

Punishment immediately followed. When the regiment had again assembled six other regiments surrounded it and tried it by court martial in the open field. The verdict was that the colonel and the captains should die by the sword and that every tenth man among the noncommissioned officers and men should be hanged.

The stern verdict was carried out to the letter, except that at the request of Leopold the men were shot instead of hanged. Colonel George Madlonische was beheaded after he had sought in vain for a pardon. The survivors were consigned to quarters with other commands, and the regiment never regained its name or former prestige. In those days there was no alternative but to be brave. Cowardice meant either death or everlasting disgrace.—Youth's Companion.

Poetic Justice.

A couple in a certain village, each the parent of six children, had meted out to them a kind of poetic justice in which they failed to see the poetry. The woman, a widow, pleading that she had no home and was therefore unable to care for her children, induced the local authorities to admit them to an orphan asylum. The man, a widower, pleading he had no housekeeper and therefore no one to care for his children, induced the authorities to admit his six also. Thereupon, being freed from all incumbrances, these two married.

All went well for a few months, when the authorities, learning of the situation, promptly dispatched the twelve children back to their parents, and, the woman no longer able to represent herself as homeless or the man as without a housekeeper, they were forced to receive them.

If you want to make $10 don't fuss and figure how to get it outside, just look around INSIDE,

That old lamp in the basement, that old trunk (before you get the new one), and that iron bed in the storeroom (and the springs are perfectly good), all it needs is enameling; and the wardrobe in the basement; and that broken set of the old dining-room chairs (three of them are as good as new), etc., etc. Those are the things in your house right this minute, that are worth $10, and more than $10, and yet you never think of them. You never think of quietly slipping a little Want Ad. in The DAILY REVIEW and grouping them at a bargain offer. Why not? Hundreds of uses for them! MRS. WISENEIGHBOUR says:
"I should have told you the other day, when I was speaking of 'Eddy's' Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an Indurated Fibrewear Tub to hold your clothes, if you want to make a success of wash-day."

MRS. NEWLYWED says:
"I've heard of 'Eddy's' Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between fibre and wooden ware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece. It cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters, wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

AN EDITORIAL may stimulate thought. It may arouse men to action—but usually its value lies principally in its ability to entertain—to inform on general or specific questions.

¶ An advertisement—nine out of ten times—contains more information than an editorial, and in addition answers either a social or an economic question.

ALL-STARS FROM THE WEST WON FROM THE EAST BY 6-4

Fast Exhibition by Speedy Junior O.H.A. Players Brought Toronto's Season to a Close

Toronto, March 15.—There are exceptions to every rule, and the same applies to sport. It is a well-known fact that it is hard to attract the public to exhibition games, no matter in what line of sporting activity, because, as a rule, they are a failure. However, the All-Star O.H.A. junior annual exhibition game at the Arena on Saturday night was one of the exceptions. The Western representatives won 6 to 4.

As the name implies, the teams, representing on one side Toronto and east, and on the other side the west and north, were composed of the best players which could be found on the O.H.A. junior teams in these parts. Those on the Selection Committee certainly made no mistake. The sixteen players who took part in the game on Saturday are all stars at their respective positions.

Toronto was represented by five players, all on the East team, but, despite this, the majority of the spectators seemed to favor the West. This perhaps is accounted for by the fact that the East right at the start took a two-goal lead, but the steady work of the west for the balance of the game brought them victory and the sympathy of the crowd.

It was an excellent exhibition, and the closeness of the score throughout kept the spectators on edge all the time. A number of the players resorted to too much individual play, and thus spoilt their team's chances, but at all times there was some clever combination shown by both teams, despite the fact that neither of the sevens had had any practice together.

The teams:—

East—Goal, Hayton (Simcoe); defence, J. Sheldon (Univ. of Tor., captain), and R. Rerguson (Kingston C. I.); rover, R. Gouinlock (Univ. of Tor.); centre, H. Watson (St. Andrew's College); left wing, A. Carew (Lindsay); right wing, W. Stratton (Univ. of Tor.). Spare—W. Cook, Kingston, Frontenacs.

West—Goal, Chilton Childs (Woodstock); defence, A. H. Parker (Hamilton R.C.), and Armos Arbour (Victoria Harbor); rover, Reg. Noble (Collingwood); centre, Dalton P. Meeking (Barrie); left wing, Allan Shirk (Berlin Union Jacks); right wing, M. J. Phillips (Western University of London, captain). Spare—W. Schnarr (Berlin Union Jacks).

"JERRY" COUGHLIN TURNS PROFESSIONAL HE HAS SIGNED WITH THE SHAMROCKS

"Jerry" Coughlin, the well known hockey player who broke into the game wearing a Peterborough uniform has at last turned professional. He has been flirting with N. H. A. magnates for the past couple of seasons and on Saturday evening he stated that he had signed with the Shamrocks. He is to report to Manager Livingstone next season although he may possibly figure in the proposed exhibition games between the Shamrocks and Toronto in Cleveland and other American cities.

Jack Coughlin or "Jerry" is known to his intimate friends played with the Grillers, Peterborough's junior septette in 1910-11, the year following he played with the Intermediates and the next year with Peterborough Seniors. On leaving here he played with Ingersoll last season in the Intermediate series and this year lined up with Haileybury. He was one of the best forward men Peterborough ever produced and there is no reazon why he should not make god in the ranks of the professionals.

HELPING MARTY WALSH.

OTTAWA, March 16. — The Ottawa hockey team has voted $200 for the Marty Walsh benefit fund. Walsh is in poor health at Muskoka Sanatorium, and it is hoped to realize enough money to enable him to take special treatment.

Frank Patrick, president of the British Columbia Hockey League, sent a cheque for $200. All the individual players in the local club will also subscribe. The fund trustee is Dr. J. J. Harty of Kingston.

B. C.-CHAMPS WERE ORILLIANS.

Black Brothers' hockey team, champions of British Columbia, made a strong bid for victory in the elimination game for the Allan Cup. They played the Edmonton Eskimos, champions of Alberta, at Regina. The Eskimos succeeded in winning by 12 goals to 11. The Black Brothers, several of whom play on the team, are natives of Orillia and learned to play the game there. They left Orillia a few years ago for Vancouver.

BILLY ROSS HAS BUT ONE HNAD

Billy Ross, who plays goal for the Melville team, holders of the Allan Cup, is an Orillia boy. He is a son of Mr. John Ross, who was a resident of the northern town for a number of years. The family moved to Weyburn, Sask., a few years ago. Billy had his left hand severed in the Eaton factory several years ago, but in spite of this handicap he is a fine goaltender.

There is a deal on foot between Ottawa and Fort Worth, of the Texas League, in which Artie Lage may go to the Lone Star circuit. The Texas League is a fast class B league and Lage was recommended to Fort Worth by a scout. Ottawa are asking the same price they paid Birmingham for the little backstop.

OTTAWA WON N.H.A. HONORS

Shaughnessy Cops Another Championship—Wanderers Outgeneralled

Montreal, March 15. — Allowing the Wanderers to wear themselves down in the early stages of their almost superhuman efforts to get on even terms in the N.H.A. championship game here Saturday night, the Ottawas retained sufficient of their four goal margin to give them the coveted championship. The Wanderers won the final game of the home-and-home series for the honor by the narrow margin of one goal to nothing. To Donald Smith, a substitute, goes the honor of scoring the only goal of the game. The total on the round of two games was 4 to 1 for the Senators.

The Wanderers were not only outgeneralled on the ice, but the judgment shown by those in charge of the players on the Ottawa bench offset every move made by the local management. When a Wanderer regular was relieved for a resting spell there was also a switch made on the visiting team. The visitors, with their four-goal margin, could afford to wait and allow their opponents to carry the play to them, and the locals were forced to be the aggressors at all times.

OWNER OF CARRUTHERS' MEDAL.

Kingston, March 15.—M. P. Reid of the Kingston Curling Club has become the owner of the Carruthers Medal, which has been in the possession of the club for over forty years for competition. He has succeeded in winning it two years in succession, a feat which no other Kingston curler had ever been able to accomplish.

FIRST SACKER GYGLI MAY MANAGE GUELPH

Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator:—There is a chance that Youngstown cannot land First Sacker Gygli from Erie. George O'Neil of the Laketown team is said to be considering sending "Gyg" to Guelph to direct his Canadian League club this summer. Manager Blount is pulling wires to get "Rebe" Keene from Wheeling.

Boston Journal—Dick Rudolph has everything this year, including an ability to fill a flush any time he draws.

Outfielder Harry Liebold, who was purchased by Cleveland from Milwaukee in 1913, has jumped to the Buffalo Federals. His contract with the Cleveland team holds over the present season.

"Germany Joe" Schultz, formerly of the Leafs, with Rochester last season, is now picked to play third base for Brooklyn. He appears to be a better hitter than Getz, but no better in fielding.

Catcher McCarthy, now with Brooklyn, formerly of Newmark, has signed a two-year contract with the Dodgers, with an option on his services for another year. It looks very much as if he would be the first-string catcher this season.

FINAL WON BY MOORE

Was up 15 in Last of Inter-rink Games

In the play-off between the winners of the two groups in the inter-rink games on Saturday night at the curling rink, A. Moore's rink winners of group one, defeated J. E. A. Fitzgerald's rink, winners of group two, by 21-6. The Fitzgerald rink was skiped by Vice-Skip R. Best. The ice was a little heavy, yet in remarkably fine condition, considerng the weather. The winers curled well all through the match, which accounts for the large score. The rinks:

J. McCabe	E. Warne
E. Sloan	R. Dobbin
G. Hill	W. D. Campbell
A. Moore, sk. 21	R. Best, sk. 6

Score by ends—

Moore	3212x12x2222x2—21
Fitzgerald ...	xxxx4xx1xxxx1x— 6

In the play-off between the two runners-up, Dr. Wightman's rink succeeded in vanquishing D. Davidson, and his three assistants, by 14-12. The winners made five points in the last two ends and nosed their opponents out after being behind all through the game.

The rinks:

C. G. Graham	J. W. Koster
Dr. Tennant	F. Cressman
W. H. Collier	G. Benore
Dr. Wightman	D. Davidson
Skip 14	Skip 12

Score by ends—

Wightman ...	xxxx42x2x1xx41—14
Davidson	1131xx1x1x31xx—12

The prizes, as well as others won this season, will be presented tonight at the annual meeting of the Curling Club.

COLLEGIATES AT BASKETBALL

Defeated Maple Leafs in Hard Fought Game

The Collegiate boys succeeded in downing the Maple Leafs Saturday night in a hard fought game. The Collegiates have lost only one bame in their division, and if they succeed in winning against the Boosters on Wednesday night they should make a good bid for first place in the "B" class. Jobbitt's and Caniff's ability at caging the bal' proved the downfall of their opponents, as these two men did all the scoring. Jobbitt in particular had his eye on the asket, scoring sixteen points. The Collegiate got off to a good start, but Capt. Richards' braves proved they had good chasing ability and had the students on the go all the time. All the men of the Maple Leafs succeeded in scoring one or more baskets, Chuck Horsfield being high man. The Maple Leafs have their eyes on some new recruits and will give a good account of themselves in the remaining games. The final score was Collegiates 24, Maple Leafs 16.

The line-up:

Collegiates—Jobbitt, Canpiff, Stuart, Lewis, Austin.

Maple Leafs — Horsfield, Dunsford, aTylor, Cowan.

Referee, Dobbin. Scorer, Carson.

There are three big games on for Wednesday night, which should draw a big crowd when the Boosters meet the Collegiate, De Laval vs. Unknowns, and Cressmans stack up against the Junior Business Men. Any one of these teams are liable to break up the others' calculations, and they are all games that will be well worth seeing.

COMMENT As You Like it

IMPORTING HOCKEY PLAYERS will hardly be in order in Peterborough any more. After all, when you recall a few of the imports we were never very lucky along that line. Harvey Sproule rung down the curtain on one dark horse two years ago and this year's efforts haven't been what one would call successful. Peterborough doesn't need to gather in hockey players. We raise them here byt he battalion and just as soon as they start to show real class they are permitted to flirt with out-of-town jobs and the other stuff that goes with these jobs. The hockey players, who are budding, should be cared for and held right here. Clarence Morgan of Picton advanced a good argument when up here for the first game of the play-off. He said, "Well you can't blame a town for getting in a man if they only have six players but for a place like Peterborough where there are several good substitutes, to start importing, it's hardly giving the smaller towns in the district a fair shake." That's about right when the matter is fully considered. This year Kenneally and Rose were available when Moinse rapped at the door. The stranger was taken in and now—oh what's the use of thinking about it?

CHARLIE QUERRIE SAYS:—

There is a strong feeling that the O. H. A. imagine that they are the only amateur association in the hockey world, and every other league should do as they say. They may be right, but in suspending the Victorias they acted rather hastily.

His line hardly looks right from here. The O.H.A. have taken the right stand in the present wrangle and are not merely trying to "buck" other amateur organizations. The Ontario association warned the Victorias to avoid the very thing they did and there was nothing left for the association to do but to suspend them. Querrie also romarks that Jack Gooch and Hugh Aird are among the best amateurs in the O. H. A. They are in the same box as Grover Halpin and Maurice Park of the Peterborough team. The O.H.A. cannot suspend a team and exempt two or three players.

TOM FLANAGAN writing for the Toronto Telegram comments thusly on the recent meeting of the O.H.A. executive:—

The O. H. A. executive certainly cleaned the slate up in their meeting Thursday. The Allan Cup stand has been outlined for some time past. The action with regard to the alleged ringing at Peterborough is strong, but a good lesson will stop crookedness. If Peterborough used a ringer they are entitled to all the consequences.

THE FANS were wondering if the hockey season would slip by without Riordan, the former Oshawa player, getting a little prominence through rought work on the ice. No more need of wondering along that line. Riordan and Butterfield mixed it proper in the consolation game between Waterloo and Preston on Friday evening. The bad feeling existing between the two players since the Junior O.H.A. between Oshawa and Orillia last year was much in evidence.

CHILTON CHILDS of Woodstock played defence for the Western All-Stars on Saturday evening has been on the All-Star team three years in succession. He is also eligible to play Junior next year.

TO WITHDRAW from the C. A. A. U. seems to be the only thing left for the O.H.A. to do. The O. H. A. was dragged into the Canadian Association to assist it in a sadly needed uplifting of western hockey, which had been running riot against all amateur rules. Apparently they don't want any uplifting and the O. H. A. must leave them to continue on their own chosen course.

KEEP BOOSTING the lacrosse. The future of the game depends on the amount of boosting it gets.

Jim Gilmore intends to fine pitchers $200 every tme they use the emery ball; at which rate he can finance the Federal League another year.

A Muscatine man fell dead when he made a difficult pool shot. Most of us would have pretended to be indifferent and argued that we called the ball for that pocket.

Thanks For Relief.

OTTAWA, March 15. — The Government is receiving the warmest expressions of appreciation and gratitude for supplies that have been voluntarily sent by the Federal and Provincial Governments and the people of the Dominion for the relief of distress in the United Kingdom.

These supplies, included the flour sent by the Dominion Government and the Province of Ontario, the cheese sent by Quebec, potatoes from the Maritime Provinces and vegetables, fruit, etc., from all parts of the country.

They were divided among relief committees in various countries of both Great Britain and Ireland. The Belgium refugees in England also benefited.

Second Contingent In Camp.

LONDON, March 15.—The second Canadian contingent, which arrived in England last week without incident after a ten days' voyage, is now in camp. Although the men have not completed their full course of training, they have shown such remarkable aptitude that they will soon be ready to take their places on the firing line.

The behavior of the Canadians since their arrival has been exemplary.

$780 From Sale of Shamrocks

The sum realized by the sale of shamrocks on Saturday by the ladies' aid society of St. Peter's Cathedral was approximately $780. The amount last year was $861, but considering the many demands upon the public at the present time the ladies in charge are elated over the result of their efforts. The ladies are thankful to all who assisted them in any way, the Radial Railway Co. and the Police Department in particular, also those who hadn't change but gave a smile.

VIOLENT ATTACK

the bottom, according to an Admiralty announcement made today.

The Daily Express despatch from the Belgian frontier says: "Convincing indication of the demoralization of German troops, which bore the brunt of the five days' onslaught by the British, is the arrival at Ghent and Brussels for trial by court-martial of parties of soldiers sent under escort from the trenches for having failed to respond to an order to make counter attacks with sufficient enehusiasm. In some coses, it is said, they even failed altogether to advance. Wounded and captured Germans testify to the terrible accuracy of the British shell fire."

A despatch from Rotterdam says the British success was largely due to the perfection of their aerial scouting, by which every German move was detected. German officers in Bruges admit their air service is hopelessly outclassed.

VON HINDENBURG'S ADVANCE INTO POLAND.

LONDON, March 15. — Mystery envelops the progress of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's latest advance into Poland, but it is the opinion of British observers that vast forces along the line from the Niemen to the Vistula cannot much longer be kept from decisive contact, unless the direction of the German offensive undergoes a radical change.

Meagre information coming through indicates that the Germans have been successful in the forest of Augustowo, whence the Russians have fallen back under the guns of Grodno.

Further to the south, in Mlawa region, the German advance has been checked and the Russians are initiating an advance on the northern bank of the Vistula in the direction of Plock.

In the Carpathians, the Russians apparently are abandoning their defensive attitude, for they are making desperate counter attacks on the Austrians.

TALES FROM THE GERMAN WAR OFFICE.

BERLIN, March 15. — The German war office reports that baths at Westende were shelled yesterday without effect by two gunboats of the enemy.

The German attack on the heights south of Ypres occupied by British troops is making good progress.

Partial attacks by French troops north of LeMesnil in the Champagne district have been repulsed. The enemy sustained heavy losses.

In the Vosges fighting continued at stated places.

The number of Russian prisoners from engagements to the north of the Augustowo forest has been increased.

Strong Russian attacks to the north and northeast of Przasnysz have resulted in failure, and the enemy's losses were heavy.

South of the Vistula there has been no change.

CONTINUE EFFORTS TO REVITALIZE

The Mayor also mentioned the opening of the Trent Canal and thought arrangements should be made to fittingly celebrate such an important occasion. The Board would be quite in order if they got busy working out some details for such a celebration. It would be money well spent. It was also suggested that a public holiday be declared on that day.

Mr. G. N. Gordon asked the Board to endorse a bill recently brought into the House by Archibald Lampman favoring the placing of all steamboat lines and steamboat transportation matters under the jurisdiction and control of the Dominion Railway Board. His motion was:

"That the Board of Trade is favorably disposed to this bill to place in the control of the Dominion Railway Board all steamship lines, and that its support be given as far as possible, consistent with the opinions of the local member."

Mr. Gordon stated that he understood Mr. Burnham was favorably disposed to the bill.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood however objected to the Board passing such a motion yet. It was a question that should be given a great deal of earnest consideration, and he doubted whether it would be a success. Mayor Buller agreed with this view and favored letting it stand over. Mr. James Hamilton however thought it would be a good thing to let the Railway Board have some control of such matters. It was decided to let it stand over.

Treasurer's Statement.

The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $31.18, but bills outstanding of $75.00. During the year the Board turned over $459.18 altogether.

Secretary Allison's report reviewed some of the activities of the Board for the year and showed what had been accomplished.

CHANGE AT HUDSON BUSINESS COLLEGE

Mr. G. S. Hudson has disposed of the Hudson Business College to Messrs. King and McDougall, of Hamilton and Brantford, who have had a good deal of experience and no doubt will continue to expand the good work of Mr. Hudson, who takes over the Brantford National Business College.

We are sorry to lose Mr. Hudson from Peterborough. He has been a good citizen while here. Besides taking an active part as a member of the George St. Methodist Church choir he has busied himself in other good works, and he leaves Peterborough with the very best of wishes.

Mayor's Scheme to Provide Work

Another plan to provide work for the unemployed! Mayor Buller has thought out a new scheme whereby the out-of-works will be given "work" not charity. His Worship intends proposing to the Peterborough Branch of the Patriotic Fund Association and Peterborough Relief Association, a scheme by which their funds will be used to carry out much needed local improvements and thus provide employment. The idea is to commence work as soon as the spring opens, on the long talked of concrete wall around the side of Crescent St. next the Little Lake. The wall would start at Lake Street and continue to the gate of the Little Lake Cemetery. Between the wall and the street could be filled in and the surface terraced off and sodded. Undoubtedly it would be a big step along the lines of beautifying the city and would also provide considerable work.

ST. ANDREWS BY THE SEA

Nature has done much for St. Andrews. No prettier place can be visited by the tourist or the summer vacationist. It is the most popular of Canadian seaside resorts, and it is now chosen by large numbers of summer visitors from New York and Boston who desire to get away from the overcrowded resorts of the United States.

There are excellent sea bathing facilities at half a dozen places in the neighborhood.

The Canadian Pacific has rebuilt the large Algonquin Hotel, while the "Inn" affords accommodation for those who desire the quietness of cottage life.

The Advantage

of the Toric lens is, that it is ground exactly to fit the curve of the eye, thus saving the strain of accommodating the vision, which has to be done with a flat lens when looking anywhere, except straight ahead, they are also neater in appearance and cost very little more.

JOHN REDMOND.

One of the most familiarly known residents of the city passed away yesterday in the Protestant Home in the person of Mr. John Redmond. He was 85 years of age, and had lived most of his life in Peterborough. He was born in Ireland and came here early in life. The funeral was held this afternoon at two o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

The late Mr. Redmond died from old age, and had no relatives save one son, R. J. Redmond, living in Chicago.

CHARLES LEAITCH.

The death occurred on Thursday morning, March 11th, of Charles Leaitch, one of Asphodel's most respected citizens, at the ripe old age of 82 years. Deceased had been ill only a fortnight. He is survived by six children, Mrs. Norman Brackenridge, of Monaghan, Mrs. David Brackenridge, of Westwood, Mrs. Harry Fife, of Otonabee, and Mrs. Wesley Manly, at home, Alex. of Peterborough, and James, at home.

The funeral on Saturday to Westwood cemetery was conducted by the Rev. T. W. Goodwill, and was largely attended, showing the high esteem in which the deceased was held in the community.

DR. SAMUEL GOWAN.

The Brockville Times of Saturday says:

The whole community of Brockville was deeply shocked this morning by the announcement of the death of Dr. Samuel Gowan, L. D. S., one of the most prominent and highly esteemed citizens of Brockville. He died at 5.30 this morning at the General Hospital after an illness which began late in January with typhoid fever. General and heartfelt sympathy is felt for the bereaved family and relatives in their misfortune. Dr. Gowan was not only clever in his profession and a man exceptionally well read, but was endowed with a prepossessing disposition and a high character, — one whose untimely death is a distinct loss to the community. He was born at Creemore, Ontario, where his aged parents still reside and first came to Brockville as a student in the dental office of the late Dr. Bruce. He graduated from Toronto University in dentistry in 1902, and came to Brockville to practice, taking over the business of Dr. Kenny on Court House avenue. In the year 1905 he formed a partnership with Dr. Clarke which has been continued up to the present time. Dr. Gowan took an active interest in municipal affairs, and served three years in the town council, being at one time chairman of the board of works. He was an Anglican in religion, member of St. Peter's Church, a member of Salem Lodge, A. F. & A. M., the Brockville Club, and was vice-president of the Brockville Rowing Club. Nine years ago Dr. Gowan was united in marriage with Miss Lillian Mae Fitzsimmons, daughter of the late Robert Fitzsimmons, and is survived by his wife and three children, Allan, Honor and Mary, also by his father and mother at Creemore, two brothers, Dr. W. C. Gowan, of Peterborough, and Dr. T. J. Gowan, of Horning's Mills, Ont.; three sisters, Miss Rebecca Gowan, of Hornings' Mills, and Mrs. Huxtable, of Outlook, Sask.

Dr. Gowan was one of the victims of the typhoid fever epidemic which has raged in Brockville in the past two or three months, and though at first his illness seemed of a light type and not enough to cause serious anxiety, it developed in its stages into a bad case, and the end came this morning. His many old friends can hardly realize that they have lost their cheery associate, but his memory will long remain pleasantly in the minds of a wide circle of friends.

The funeral will be held privately on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

PREPARATIONS ON AN ENORMOUS SCALE FOR GENERAL OFFENSIVE

Will Begin as Soon as Fields are Dry and Artillery Can be Moved --- Tens of Thousands of Automobile Trucks---French Divisions Higher Than Normal Strength

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 16. — Present plans are that a French and British general offensive will begin as soon as the fields are dry and artillery can be moved over them. Preparations have been made on an enormous scale. The French artillery probably now has a store of twenty-five million shells and can sustain a prodigious expenditure in ammunition for two or three months. To overcome any disadvantage resulting from the destruction of railway lines, the French and British have accumulated tens of thousands of automobile trucks.

Every one of the French one hundred divisions of troops has been brought up to higher than the normal strength of twenty thousand, and British troops in France and Belgium are said to number three-quarters of a million.

Similar extensive preparations have been made in hospital accommodation.

LONDON, March 16. — The only military activity along the East Prusian front appears to be the resumption of the German bombardment of Ossowetz. At this point, attacking batteries have been brought closer to the fortress, the reason being, according to official reports from Petrograd, the ineffectiveness of their shell fire at longer range.

Russian reports maintain that attacks on the fort have been successfully countered.

Petrograd claims that the Russians are holding their antagonists on almost the entire Przasnysz front, where the Germans are keeping up a violent artillery fire.

In the Carpathians and in Galicia it is the usual story of attack and counter attack, with Vienna claiming slow advance after sanguinary assaults on the mountain tops held by the Russians.

The Russians, on the other hand, maintain they are more than holding their own in these regions.

Weather conditions in the Carpathians, where the snow is deep, make the movements of troops difficult, men on skis being the only forces able to operate freely.

The Russians are bombarding Przemysl with heavy batteries while the Austrians are still hammering away in their efforts to relieve the fortress.

FRENCH REVERSES ARE EXPLAINED IN OFFICIAL REVIEW

Deals With Operations in Early Stages of the War

ONE LEADER RELIEVED OF COMMAND

Successful Advance in Lorraine Was Halted "By the Default of Certain of Our Units"

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 16. — A French official review of the war in the western theatre from the commencement of the war up to the end of January has been given out. The first chapter, rather more than two large newspaper columns in length, covers events up to September 5th, explaining fully the reasons for retreat before the German advance on Paris, and more than hints at the reasons for initial French reverses.

Thus, speaking of the early advance into Alsace, with the occupation of Mulhausen, it says: "This operation was badly carried out by a leader who was at once relieved of his command.

Again, a successful advance in Lorraine was halted August 20th by the power of the enemy's artillery operating over ground previously carefully surveyed by them and "by the default of certain of our units," and on the twenty-second, "in spite of the splendid behaviour of several of our corps," the French were compelled to retire to the south. A general offensive was postponed first by the impossibility of the British forces to arrive in time and difficulty in getting necessary alignment along the front, and later by the extraordinarily rapid advance of the Germans, and it was not until September 4th that the commander-in-chief was able to issue the command, "The hour has come to advance at all costs, and to die where you stand rather than give way."

PETERBOROUGH SOLDIERS BEHAVED WELL IN THEIR FIRST SCRAP WITH FOE

Letter From Major Mills Tells of Initial Fighting

HIS SON BRUCE WAS SLIGHTLY WOUNDED

Mr. B. D. Hall has received a letter from Major Jos. Mills, who is with the Peterborough soldiers who are now in France. Major Mills' letter deals with the behaviour of the boys when they first took part in actual fighting, and is as follows:

Flanders, Feb. 22, 1915.

Here we are in foreign lands and fighting over the famous territory known as Flanders. Where we are and how we got here, we are not at liberty to tell, but it was very tiresome and the night we left Salisbury plain we will never forget. It just rained in torrents as its good-bye to us. Then there was the long march through the mud to the train, a ride in cold cars, then on the transport, which had no accommodation for either officers or men, then into freight cars with no seats or lights; so we were glad when it was over, but are pleased indeed to be away from Salisbury plain. We then marched to our billets some 14 miles from this place. After a few days' rest we were ordered to the front. It was a long march over rough cobble-paved roads, which were hard to walk on. Then we went into the trenches, a half battalion at a time, with the North Staffords and the Rifle Brigade (regulars). Bruce got a wound over the eye, but he did not stop shooting until he emptied his magazine. Then he got his eye dressed and is, I am happy to say, all right. The officer of his platoon is greatly pleased with him. We lost two men killed in action and our colonel's servant was killed by a dug-out caving in on him, so we did not come out of our first action too badly. A shell dropped near us when we were getting supplies with the result that two horses near us were killed. It so unmanned one of our drivers that we had to replace him. Your first thought is of home when you get the first shell near you and after a few you don't mind it. The night before the Peterborough boys went to the trenches, I visited them and all were very keen for the work; and none showed the white feather. We

When the Court House Was a Log Building

Another interesting souvenir of by-gone days in Peterborough reposes in the public library, through the kindness and generosity of His Honor Judge Huycke. It is a picture of the old Government House dating back to 1832, when the said Government House was not a fine imposing public building, but a little log cabin with a closed porch in front. It had a sun dial in the space at the front. At the rear through the trees can be discovered the tower of St. John's Church peeping through. The picture which looks as if drawn from a sketch bears the signature of Mary Sanfort, in one corner.

Judge Huycke's gift is gratefully received by the public library board. It will hang in a prominent place in the reading rooms probably underneath the picture of Peter Robinson, the founder of Peterborough.

APPEAL WON BY THE C.P.R.

Action of Arthur Sharpe for Damages is Dismissed

At Osgoode Hall, Toronto, yesterday, Chief Justice Meredith, Justice Garraw, Justice MacLaren, Justice Magee and Justice Hodgins of the Appellate Division, gave judgment allowing the appeal and dismissing the action with costs, in the appeal by the C.P.R. against judgment made by Justice Britton on November 2nd; 1914, at the Fall Assizes here, by which Arthur Sharpe of this city was awarded $1000 as damages from the C.P.R. for the death of his son, Thomas Sharpe, in Hamilton, about two years ago. The action was originally brought against the C.P.R. Co. and the T.H. and B. Railway Co. but the action against the latter was dismissed by the trial judge.

F. D. Kerr, of the firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, acted for Sharpe and J. D. Spence of Toronto for the C.P.R.

OFFICIAL STATEMENTS

PARIS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 16. — This afternoon's official statement says: "The Belgian army has consolidated its gains of the past few days. The British army, after having retaken St. Eloi, has also recaptured trenches to the southwest of the village and has compelled the enemy to evacuate trenches to the southeast of the same point which have been completely demolished by artillery.

"In the Champagne, fresh progress has been made to the northeast of Souain.

"In the forest of Le Pretre we have recaptured from the Germans the remainder of the trenches won by them yesterday morning, or to be more precise, the site of these trenches for defensive works has been completely shattered by mine explosions.

"On the southern slope of great Reichackerkopf, an attack by the enemy yesterday morning carried a trench. We have retaken it and made some prisoners."

BERLIN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, March 16. — The German war office reports the English position on a height near St. Eloi, south of Ypres, has been taken by the Germans. Fighting for the possession of this location has been going on since the day before yesterday.

In the Champagne, several partial attacks delivered by the French troops broke down in the face of the German fire. French losses were heavy.

"To the north of Beausejour German troops took possession of several French trenches.

"An engagement begun yesterday in the Argonne continues today. Also in the Vosges there are several places where fighting is still going on.

"On the Orzyc, to the northeast of Przasnysz, Russian attacks everywhere have been repulsed. There was an especially violent engagement for the possession of Jednorozek. Two thousand Russians were taken prisoners.

"South of the Vistula there is nothing to report."

A NICE NEST EGG FOR CITY FATHERS

The most interesting piece of information gained from the city hall, in some time is the reported discovery of between $19,000 and $20,000, which it appears had been overlooked during the hurry and turmoil attendant to the administration of this great and growing city.

It is understood that the find was made as a result of the recent audit of the books of the several departments.

Prussian Losses Total 1,050,029

The last four lists include the names of 11 airmen killed, four wounded and two taken prisoners. These do not take into account 160 Bavarian, 136 Wurttemburg, 119 Saxon and 20 Navy lists.

Twenty-one Years as City Solicitor

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Wodostock, March 16.—Joseph P. Nellis, who recently resigned as city solicitor, after twenty-one years service, died last night, aged seventy-six.

At a meeting of the fruit growers of Lincoln and Welland at St. Catharines, it was decided to protest very strongly against any increase in railway freight rates.

INCENDIARISM IS SUSPECTED

Frame House on McGill Street Destroyed by Fire

Incendiarism is thought to have caused a fire last night which burned down an unoccupied frame house on McGill Street shortly after twelve o'clock. The building was outside the fire limits and burned so swiftly that by the time the department hove in view, it was practically destroyed. Houses in the vicinity were protected however. The house is one of the smaller kind in the south end and cost about $500. It was owned by Mr. Biglow.

The alarm was turned in from box 13, by a party whose name is not known and who was awakened by the bright illumination of the burning building shining into his bed room nearby. He got up and before turning in the alarm awakened neighbors to their danger. He then walked to the nearest fire alarm box which was at the corner of Lock and McGill. Owing to no water supply being available they could do very little, the house being too far gone as it was.

Pte. Griffiths Among Wounded?

The latest list of wounded among the Canadians gives the name of Pte. J. H. Griffiths, 2nd Battalion. This may be T. H. Griffiths, who left Peterborough with the local volunteers of the First Contingent. His wife has returned to England.

Men Tried Their Hand at Millinery

The men proved themselves adept in the art of manufacturing millinery at a congregational rally in All Saints' parish hall last night. The contest was for men only and as might be expected every move was a laugh. Finally, however, the men managed to make something that resembled a hat and the prize was awarded to Mr. C. E. Sisson.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, MARCH 16, 1915

GET AFTER THE BUSINESS.

OWING TO THE FACT, that European travel will be practically nil this year, so far as tourists are concerned, the coming season will likely be one of the greatest ever known in this country. The district around Peterborough is known to be a desirable place for tourists. It has beautiful lakes, wild country, a picturesque waterway in the Otonabee, pleasant farm lands, a progressive city — everything necessary for an ideal summer resort business. This year is the year of opportunity, for there will be many who formerly went abroad and who will turn their eyes to places nearer home. Last year several millions of dollars were spent in European countries, and this year the money will be spent in Canada and the United States. Already some resorts have done considerable advertising, while others are booked to capacity. Newspaper advertising could be used very effectively to make known the good points of this district for tourist purposes, because more people will be studying the advertising to see where to go. This matter should be given careful attention by the City Council, the Board of Trade and others who are interested in the development of Peterborough and the surrounding country.

THE FASCINATION OF THE MOVIES.

MANY PEOPLE were disposed at one time to condemn moving picture theatres, and the condemnation was not unmerited in a great many cases. It was charged that immoral subjects were portrayed, that children were influenced by the representation of robberies, hold-ups, wild west thrillers, and that the vibration in the pictures caused diseases of the eye. We remember one case in Ontario where a boy, influenced by his visits to such shows, shot his play-fellow. But these criticisms, which were thundered from pulpits and written about in newspapers, failed to kill the movies, because these defects were not fundamental, and because the fascination of the movies was superior to frontal attacks.

Nevertheless, this adverse criticism was of greater use than if it had influenced public opinion to banish movie theatres, for it led to reforms and mechanical improvements. Moving picture machines have been greatly improved, so that the old vibration that used to cause eye-aches is pretty well eliminated from the best theatres. Then, the creation of a censorship has caused the weeding out of objectionable plays, while many theatres now exercise a censorship of their own in selecting subjects that are devoid of objectionable features. The managers recognize that, if they want respectable people to come to their moving picture theatres, they must cater to a refined element. It costs more money to exhibit these refined plays, but experience has shown that the people will pay the price. Moving picture theatres no longer appeal solely to sensationalism, vulgarity and the morbid interests of the lowest class of people. They have taken a definite place, and church and press recognize that fact, even to the extent of utilizing moving pictures for religious purposes.

The point is, why has this fascination carried the movie theatre triumphantly through the storm of protest with which it was first assailed? It is the old charm, as ancient as man, for some new thing. It is the attraction for something diverting, transient and brilliant, for the passing show, for something that appeals to the imagination and visualizes the things that dreams are made on. Out of early religious festivals grew poetry, particularly lyric poetry, art, drama, and dances, like those in the famous Greek choruses. For centuries, living persons acted on real stages, so that the stage became the one place for seeing life not only as it is and was, but as we would like it to be. The cost of these performances has, in these late days, made them prohibitive to what is called the working man. A large number of people cannot afford to pay two or three dollars for one evening's entertainment, and possibly instruction. Hence, when the moving picture machine was invented, it made theatres for the working classes possible. That there was a want to be filled is evidenced by the success of these theatres and by their popularity.

These theatres have changed life, or are influencing it in several ways. They have increased the cost of living by opening up one more popular method of spending money, a characteristic that, at the same time, militates against the independence of the working man, because it prevents him from saving a competence. That means that one more demand is made on the self-restraint of the masses. These theatres also add to city life another of those attractions that are constantly drawing people from rural to urban communities. On the other hand, they provide another means of employment, for a large number of people are employed in the business of providing the pictures for these theatres, besides those who work in the theatres themselves. They are a strong educative factor, quickening the imagination and providing instruction on current events, geographic and scientific subjects.

At bottom, it is the fascination of the movies that gives them their hold on the public; but, at the same time, the possibilities for good inherent in them are such that they should be utilized as much as possible. By providing good shows that are clean and elevatnig, moving picture theatres can exert a great, beneficial influence on the public by creating a taste or desire for higher things. The movies should be enlisted in those things that assist progress and uplift. By adopting a reasonable attitude towards them and by patronizing good shows, improvement should follow.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

FROM the society columns of the New Hazelton Omineca Herald: "Pete Slavin, Buck Flats, was a visitor in town this week." Although the Herald refrains from details, we presume there was something doing.

THE OMINECA HERALD of New Hazelton, B. C., has again reached the Review office, and as usual presents a clean and business-like appearance. How could it be otherwise? The proprietor of this newsy little journal was once a trusted member of the Review staff.

DURING the debate on the Budget it was shown by Finance Minister White that the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was a most extravagant one,—and no war on then, either,—borrowing, in a period of fourteen years, $110,000,000 in the London market. "I may hold the record as a war borrower," said the Finance Minister," but the late Finance Minister carries off the blue ribbon as a peace borrower."

THE COMMANDER of the German cruiser Prince Eitel Friedrich sank the American ship Wm. P. Frye because the sailors did not shovel the wheat overboard fast enough. Now he has to put into an American port for repairs, while some British cruisers are waiting outside. If Uncle Sam doesn't take action against her, those British cruisers can be trusted to give her the proper wallop.

THE SINKING of the German cruiser Dresden was a welcome piece of news. It leaves really only one vessel to be feared on the high seas, the Karlesruhe, for the Crown Prince Wilhelm is a converted vessel that is a danger only to commerce. If these two can be captured or sunk, Germany will be practically without cruisers, and the high seas free from hostile ships. It should also be noted that the Dresden was the first warship to raise the white flag in the present war.

A NEW DAILY NEWSPAPER is shortly to appear in New York, backed by $2,000,000, in order, as announced in the prospectus, "to do justice to the German cause, to fight all British influence, and to strive for real neutrality and for true American independence." The suppression of all British influence and the cultivation of German sympathy looks like real neutrality, doesn't it? New York will no doubt appreciate a two-million-dollar joke, for a little while, at least.

MYSTERY.

(E. B. Browning.)

We sow the glebe, we reap the corn,
We build the house where we may rest,
And then, at moments, suddenly,
We look up to the great wide sky,
Inquiring wherefore we were born—
For earnest or for jest?

The senses folding thick and dark
About the stifled soul within,
We guess diviner things beyond,
And yearn to them with yearning fond;
And strike out blindly to a mark
Believed in, but not seen.

Journeys at Home.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

It is said that five thousand pleasure trips are made every year to New York, Boston or Philadelphia to see the theatres, the stores and the crowds. If the people who go on these trips averaged a hundred dollars apiece that means five hundred thousand dollars carried out of this country. The suggestion is made that for the present at least this money might be spent in Canada. Canada needs the money, and it would do the people of Canada no harm to get acquainted with the scenic beauty of their own country.

A Practical Sign of Brotherhood.

(Lowell, Mass., Courier-Citizen.)

Christian Scientists did the handsome thing by sending a cheque for five hundred dollars to the First Baptist Society of Malden to help rebuild its beautiful church, destroyed by fire. Religious denominations of all kinds are more charitable to one another today than they used to be, and that fact has been conspicuously illustrated in the Malden case. The Scientists, the latest among them, were the first to show that "money talks," though all the religious societies in the city hastened to express practical sympathy.

The Short Man to the Front.

(New York Herald.)

The distinguished physiologist who in a recent discussion before the Royal Sanitary Institute insisted that the short man is a more efficient fighting machine only emphasized what has been the growing conviction of scientific observers in late years. The small man presents less of a target to the foe, eats less, has usually a higher vitality and better resistance of infections, all of which are eminently desirable qualities in the soldier.

A Glorious Patrick's Day.

(Catholic Register.)

The world is sore oppressed this Patrick's day and Ireland's sons are in the thick of the fight, but somehow or other it is a glorious Patrick's day with England and Ireland reconciled and both contending in healthy emulation for the civilization both did so much in other ages to engraft upon the world.

EUROPEAN WAR EASES UP MONEY SITUATION IN CANADA

European war eases up money—SF5 Influx of Foreign Cash Reflected in Increased Sale of Motor Cars, According to E. P. Clarkson, Canadian Representative for Dodge Brothers

Purchases amounting to millions of dollars, by agents of the British and French Governments in Canada, have resulted in greatly relieving the financial situation in the Dominion, according to E. P. Clarkson, Canadian District Representative for Dodge Brothers. Mr. Clarkson is visiting the factory in Detroit after a tour through part of his territory.

"Canadian business men have more available ready cash right now than they have had for five years past," says Clarkson. "This is all due to the immense influx of foreign cash for purchasing war materials, including everything from food and clothing for the armies to the supplies of ammunition to keep the big guns at work.

"The automobile business has been one of the first to benefit by the changed conditions. Not only has there been a big increase in sales of cars to farmers, due to the high prices and big profits on grain, but a healthy impetus has been given the trade all along the line.

"One of our big implement makers recently received an order for 1,000,000 shovels from an agent of a European power, and every factory is working overtime on orders of similar magnitude. Much of the ammunition, purchased from the big American makers, is sold to the British government through Canadian brokers, and here, again, a vast sum of cash is involved.

"Although the Canadian buyer has been one of the best customers of the American automobile manufacturer, the trade between the two countries should be greatly increased during the coming year, due to the inability of British makers to furnish cars. I look for a record year in the sale of motor cars throughout the entire country."

Goeben Is Out of Business.

PARIS, March 16. — The Havas Agency publishes a despatch from its correspondent at Athens reading as follows:

"News reaching here from Constantinople sets forth that the young Turks are beginning to find their position difficult and are preparing for fight.

"The Sultan Selim, formerly the German cruiser Goeben, undoubtedly is out of commission. There is a rent in her armor eighteen yards long, said to have been caused by a Turkish mine."

Sunk Thirteen Ships.

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 16.—Thirteen merchant ships have been sunk by the German auxiliary cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm, since she began her career as a raider, according to information received here yesterday. There are 500 German sailors on the Kron Prinz Wilhelm. Information of the activities of the German ship was received from passengers of the French steamer Guadaloupe, which was sunk by the Kron Prinz Wilhelm off the eastern extremity of Brazil.

A MISER'S MONEY

And How It Was Turned to a Useful Purpose

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

John Borlan was a country boy who had gone to the city to make his fortune. He had parted, the night before leaving home, with Mabel Burroughs at the gate of her father's home, both pledging themselves to be true to each other till John's return, when he had become successful, and they would be married.

Mabel was a practical girl. She had known of other young men going to the city to make their fortunes, some of whom had come back threadbare and hungry and some remained away, but she had never heard of any of them making fortunes. One had been crushed under the wheels of the juggernaut car that rolls over those who fail in the struggle in a great city. While John was picturing to her how he would work early and late, saving all he made except for a bare living, she listened doubtingly.

"Anyway, Johnny, whether you come back rich or poor, you'll find me here waiting for you, and I'll welcome you just as heartily if you are poor as if you are rich. But against one thing let me caution you. If you find that the battle is going against you come back. Don't stay in the city to be crushed."

John promised, and with a long embrace they parted.

When John rolled on the raised tracks through the outskirts of the city and saw the miles and miles of houses, the throngs, the traffic, his heart sank within him. But he repressed the feeling of despondency, gritted his teeth and resolved that he would succeed. He had read the story of Whittington, who went to London a poor boy, became discouraged at the sight of the great city in the distance and resolved to go back to his home. But he heard the bells ringing, and they seemed to say, "Turn again, Whittington, lord mayor of London." He entered the city and became enormously rich.

This story, familiar to many a schoolboy, came back to John Borlan and gave him courage. When he alighted from the train he felt strong enough to breast the tide that seemed rising to oppose him.

The game of life is similar to a game of cards. If we have good cards, which is the same as having good luck, we win. A few there are with such aptitude for the game that they may win with poor cards; but, generally speaking, poor cards mean the loss of the game. In other words, success comes with opportunity.

John Borlan found one bit of opportunity in the city or, what is the same thing, a bit of luck. But this did not come to him for several years after he had entered the fray there. On his arrival he spent a month looking for a job and just as his money ran out found one in running an elevator. A gentleman whose business was in the building took a fancy to him and gave him a subordinate position. But this man failed, and John was thrown out. Again he walked the streets hunting a job.

John's hardships are not interesting, and I will pass over them for his opportunity. After drifting a long while, sometimes earning a few dollars a week and sometimes hungry for food, when in the latter condition he remembered his promise to Mabel that if he found the battle going against him he would go back to the country. At the time of his arrival he had put away enough to pay his fare on the train, but he had spent it for sustenance. He had no money to take him home, but he resolved to keep his promise and would set out the next morning to tramp the distance.

To one person in the metropolis he resolved to say goodby. That was the man who had given him a position when he was running an elevator. On his way to this friend he saw at his feet on the sidewalk a pocketbook. He picked it up. It was rectangular in form, about six inches long by three wide, just large enough to hold a bank bill not folded. Opening it he found a number of such bills inside. He closed the pocketbook without counting them and looked about to see if any eye was upon him. Since no one seemed to be observing him he thrust his find into his pocket, for he desired to have time to think over what he should do in the premises. Finding a place where he would be alone he counted the money he had found. There was $354.

Johnny was one of those men who cannot bring themselves to appropriate anything belonging to another. Besides, he had the sense to discover that anything so appropriated would do him no good and might do him harm. He certainly could not return to Mabel without an effort to find the owner of this money for she would condemn him if he did. He knew that the owner would advertise the loss of his property, and it was his duty to look for such advertisement.

The next morning he went to a newspaper stand kept by a man he knew and received permission to examine the principal journals. He found a notice of the loss and the offer of half the contents for the return of the pocketbook at a given location.

Johnny went to the place named and found a seedy looking man who proved to him that he was the owner of the pocketbook by giving the exact number of bills it contained. John was about to extract the reward when the owner said to him:

"There were certain vouchers in the pocketbook which are more valuable to me than money. Are they with the bills?"

"There are no vouchers and were none when I found the pocketbook," was John's reply.

The man began to storm at John, calling him a thief, and while doing so attempted to snatch the pocketbook. John resisted, and a scuffle ensued. Tenants in rooms adjoining came in and, seeing what was taking place, called the police, and the two opponents were arrested and taken to a station.

When the case came up for examination the justice directed that the owner of the property in question bring suit against John for the recovery of his property. This having been done, the justice assigned John counsel, and the case of Hargrave versus Borlan was tried at once.

Hargrave told how he had lost his pocketbook. He had been walking the street when he was jostled by some men. He shouted for the police, and the men ran. On reaching home he discovered his loss. He supposed that the robbers had dropped the pocket book in their flight.

John's counsel, a lawyer named Dexter, advised his client to summon as many persons as possible who knew him to testify to his honesty. This was done, and quite a number were present. After taking their testimony Dexter called Hargrave to the stand.

"Why did you not mention in your advertisement," asked the lawyer, "the vouchers you claim were in the pocketbook?"

"Because they were not money and of no value to any one but me."

"What was the nature of the vouchers?"

The witness hesitated, then claimed that they were receipted bills for money expended.

Before the case went to the jury Dexter claimed that he had proved John's good character and that there was neither any evidence that he had stolen the vouchers nor any necessity for such evidence, because if he had been a thief he would have taken the money and left the vouchers instead of taking the vouchers and leaving the money. He also claimed that his client had a cause of action against Hargrave for slander and that the evidence had shown the plaintiff to be a miser. To this the judge added instructions that were favorable to the defendant.

When the verdict was brought in the foreman said that the jury had found for the defendant. Since the pocketbook contained other articles than had been mentioned by the advertiser, it could not be the one for which he had advertised. Therefore the property belonged to the defendant until a claimant for it could prove that it was his.

Before John and his counsel had left the court Hargrave's counsel came to John and offered, on behalf of his client, all the money that was in it and $100 for the book. Dexter at once became suspicious and made an examination of the pocketbook. One side being remarkable for its thickness, he inserted his knife between it and the lining and took out seven $1,000 bills.

He at once called his client to him for a private conference and showed him the find. John was astonished, but he had decided to return both the money he had found and the pocketbook to Hargrave, to whom he believed it rightfully belonged. He now took the same ground with respect to the concealed bills.

"You will do no such thing," said the lawyer. "I am acting in your interest, and it is my business to protect you in your rights. The miser tried to beat you out of the reward offered and accused you of being a thief. Leave the matter to me and I will make an equitable settlement for you."

John finally consented to abide by whatever his counsel did in the matter, and after a long conference with Hargrave's attorney John's lawyer announced that a compromise had been effected by which one-half of all the contents should go to John and the rest to Hargrave, this being the reward offered in the advertisement for the property.

"And now, young man," added Dexter, "I would advise you to take the money that has come to you and go back to the country. You are not fitted to make your way in the city. There is plenty of honesty here, but there is a lot of sharp practice. You would be better where you were born and raised. If you remain here this money will soon slip through your fingers."

When John asked his lawyer for his bill for legal services he was surprised at the modest charge of $10.

John returned to the country with his capital and found Mabel waiting for him. Notwithstanding his lawyer's opinion she did not like to have him take money that he had found. After much conference they decided to use it for a starter and, if they succeeded in rolling up a snowball to resign it. John bought a farm. They were married and prospered. At the end of five years they inquired for the miser from whom it had been derived and, finding that he had died, gave the funds to charity.

It was thus that John Borlan found his opportunity. But he never referred to it with pleasure and felt relieved when he turned it over to those who he considered had a better right to it than himself. To this his friends assert that Providence designed him as an agent to turn it into a useful channel.

Education.

Education is the instruction of the intellect in the laws of nature, under which name I include not merely things and their forces, but men and their ways, and the fashioning of the affections and of the will into an earnest and loving desire to move in harmony with those laws.—Huxley.

HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES

ENAMELING A BEDSTEAD.

How to Do Over an Old One to the Best Advantage.

If you wish to enamel an iron bedstead first rub the marred paint smooth with fine sandpaper. Do this gently, so as not to roughen what paint remains upon the iron. If you can get it all off it will be better, for then you will have a uniform surface. This done, go all over the bedstead with white enamel paint, which is sold at paint shops and by some druggists. Use a broad brush and sweep it smoothly and evenly over the iron until all is covered.

Let the first coat get perfectly dry before applying the second. Three coats may be necessary to make the whole of the dark iron white. The advantage of a white enamel apart from the pleasing effect is that it may be renewed when it becomes defaced and that it will be the better for each renewal.

Workmanship Counts.

The best designs in smart jewelry are remarkable even more for exquisitely delicate workmanship than for the mere size and quality of the gems. Quite inexpensive stones, such as amethysts, peridots, aquamarines and rock crystals, which are extremely fashionable, are set with as much care as if they were diamonds or pearls, emeralds or rubies "worth a king's ransom."

The newest earrings and pendants are light and fine as possible, little swinging chains weighted with a solitaire stone or a cluster of tiny gems.

SMART FASHIONS.

The pointed corsage is promised for the near future.

In jewelry cut steel and cut jet are being combined.

Some of the new skirts are picoted around the edge.

Tailored costumes for street wear are simply designed.

Coats for sports wear are almost invariably of the army order.

The skirts of children's party frocks are usually plaited or flounced.

Open and closed neckwear of lace and net is among the favorites.

A pretty cotton waist has the fullness shirred in around the waist.

Dotted swiss is to be worn in the spring, and so is embroidered organdie.

VODKA'S BITTER FOE.

The Man Who Brought About Its Prohibition In Russia.

Michael D. Tchelisheff, the man responsible for the present governmental ban on vodka, the demoralizing Russian drink, is a peasant by birth and originally a house painter. Then he became mayor of the city of Samara and is now a millionaire. Physically he is a giant, standing over six feet four inches in his stocking feet and of powerful build. Although he is fifty-five years old, he looks much younger.

Eleven years ago he began the campaign which resulted in the official order against liquor soon after war was declared. Following his term of office as mayor of Samara he was elected to the duma on an anti-vodka platform and managed to secure the passage of a bill bearing on the question, which was finally tabled in the imperial council.

Nothing daunted, he secured an audience, after a time, with the czar and has at last seen his efforts crowned with success—for the period of the war at least.—Argonaut.

I have recommended Gin Pills to some of my friends who are troubled in the same way. I never intend to be without them as I have tried so many other pills and got no results."

KIDNEY TROUBLE AFFECTED HIS SPINE

Suffered For Forty Years Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives"

BRONTE, ONT., OCT. 31st. 1913.

"For about forty years, I was troubled with Lame Back brought on by Kidney and Bladder Trouble. I was never confined to my bed with the trouble, but it affected my spine and I had to rest for a time. I took advertised remedies which never did me any good. Then I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decided to try them. They did me more good than any other remedy.

My son suffered from the same trouble and frequently had to leave off working, but "Fruit-a-tives" remedied it for him. I would strongly advise anyone suffering from Kidney and Bladder Trouble to use "Fruit-a-tives".

SNARED BY AN ECLIPSE.

Superstition Caused the Death of Two Athenian Generals.

In the old days eclipses were looked upon with superstition and dread, and more than once they were factors in battles. A lunar eclipse was the final undoing of the Athenian general Nicias and his supporting general, Demosthenes. The Athenians attacking Syracuse had won encouraging preliminary successes and at one time almost had the city in their power. Indolence or overconfidence held them back when breaks in the defense invited them, and before the opportunity was improved a Spartan general with a small force made his way into the city and encouraged its militia to new efforts.

Nicias and his supporting general, Demosthenes, who had come with reenforcements, decided to abandon the campaign and go home while they still had control of the sea. Nicias was sick and discouraged. On the eve of sailing a total eclipse of the moon disturbed him. It was regarded as an inauspicious sign, and Nicias waited a month for a more favorable omen.

In that month the Syracusans barricaded the Athenian fleet in the harbor. A futile effort was made to break through, and then a wretched army undertook an overland march, was pursued, surrendered after three days' attack, and Nicias and Demosthenes were put to death.

Child Discipline.

It is bitter medicine, but the one thing needed most in the human soul is discipline.

It is well to have force, genius, vigor, enthusiasm, love, power, but you may have them and be a criminal, a maniac or a cad. You become great only when to these you add self control.

The latest movement in education is toward developing the initiative of the child. This can hardly be carried too far. And the old, stupid method of thwarting, denying and browbeating little ones just for the sake of discipline cannot be too roundly condemned.

But for all that there is danger that in our new eagerness to find and bring out the child's forces we may forget the prime need of strengthening his self denial.—Dr. Frank Crane in Woman's World.

Encouraging.

A lady advanced in age and in a declining state of health went, by the advice of the physician, to take lodgings in a village near the metropolis. She agreed for a suit of rooms and, coming downstairs, observed that the balustrades were much out of repair.

"These," said the lady, "must be mended before I can think of coming to live here."

"Oh, no, madam," replied the landlady, "that would answer no purpose, as the undertaker's men in bringing down the coffin would break them again immediately."

Motors Inaccessible Now.

Makers of motor cars were advertising a few years ago automobiles in which all parts were accessible. Today they are carefully inclosing all vital parts of their cars to make them inaccessible. This is because the machinery of a motor car should not be touched by any one except an expert machinist, and the "accessible" cars were too great a temptation to inexperienced owners, who often damaged them with their tinkering.

The Lincoln Highway.

The Lincoln highway from New York to San Francisco has progressed so well in a year's time that we may reasonably believe that it will be finished without national aid. Ohio has completed over three-fourths of her part of the highway, and in many other states the work is going forward. The whole road is already in such condition that automobiles can make the transcontinental trip in less than a month.

Antiquity of Beads.

Beads are certainly the most ancient of all forms of the bedecking of the body unless we except the field and forest blossoms. Nobody knows who first invented beads. Perhaps it was some primitive savage who found nuts or oak balls in the forest, drilled by the woodworm, and threaded them together on a stalk of grass. Anything and everything with a hole in it served at the beginning for beads—cowrie shells, fish teeth, claws of beasts, striped and spotted seeds and the like. But the great age of beads began with the invention of glass, and the Egyptians, Carthaginians and Phoenicians generally were skilled craftsmen at bead making.

Points for Mothers

Consideration For Others.

Train a child to notice and respect the employment of another. If it be merely a game there is no need thoughtlessly, therefore rudely, to interrupt it. A little politeness one to another, a little observance of the wishes of others, will put aside sullen looks and bad tempers.

We know ourselves how disagreeable it is to have the table shaken when we write, to have a door left open or loudly banged, to have some one crossing between us and the light or to be constantly interrupted. Our children cannot like this more than we do. Yet we need not lose our tempers. A smiling protest, a caressing request, a little joke over the annoyance, will prevent its repetition better than a sharp rebuke.

When children are taught to notice these trifles they learn to avoid them. A child is pleased when you apologize to him for unintentional awkwardness. The little seeds sink in his mind. Tomorrow he will avoid that small offense. Rough movements, unpolished speech, detract from rather than increase a child's pleasure. And it is these small trifles that make up the comfort of our homes.

Having the Eyes Examined.

If a child screws up its eyes when looking at a distant object or, when reading a book, has to bend closely over it a defect in vision should be suspected. Sometimes the child complains of headaches or eye ache, the former usually referring to the forehead. There may be at times a slight squint. These are also suspicious signs. Eye strain also gives rise to inflammation of the lids—hence styes—and if this condition is constantly recurring the sight should be properly tested.

Unskilled advice in the matter of the eyesight should be avoided, for permanent injury is easily effected if wrong measures are taken. No child should ever be allowed to wear glasses until a doctor has examined the eyes and has recommended the use of such.

To prevent eye strain the position in which a child does its home work—in regard to the lighting of the room—should always be borne in mind. Any glare on the book or paper should be avoided, and the light should fall obliquely from behind.

Envelopes.

When the envelope was first offered to the public it was looked upon with distrust in many quarters. The introduction of the new idea was greatly opposed by most of the old firms, and for fear the envelope would be thrown away and all traces of posting be lost the juniors were instructed to pin the envelope to the letter. This practice was quickly abandoned, however, and "the little bags called envelopes," as Rowland Hill quaintly termed them, were not long in winning their way into popular favor.—London Express.

Municipal Councils

(The Municipal World.)

Owing to the system of annual election in Ontario municipalities, the personnel of the representatives is constantly changing, and it is not unusual to find councils with a large percentage of new members who have had no previous experience. The fact that a man has been elected to represent a municipality does not give him all the information necessary for the proper discharge of his duties. There are many matters pertaining to procedure, precedents, and municipal law that he must have become acquainted with. The permanent municipal officials are usually relied upon to supply these deficiencies, the result being that they are often referred to as dictators in control of the proceedings of a council.

The members of most councils know on whom they can depend for advice, and the officials alone know the extent to which their experience is responsible for the brilliant career of many a representative. The officials have their parts to play. They are necessary in every municipality, and the more experience they have the better for the council. They go along for years doing what is required of them. Sometimes they are appreciated, often they are not. In the latter case, their presence and work are taken for granted, and they become the accustomed cog in the wheel, a proper note in the harmony of our municipal institutions.

Sometimes, but seldom, these experienced officials go on strike for recognition. They tire of the long years of easy acceptance of all they do for others, and insist on a reasonable recompense. They are like Mrs. Sarah Penn in Mary E. Wilkins Freeman's famous story: "The Revolt of Mother," who worked for forty years without a protest until "father's" disregard for her desire for a new house, for which she had longed and worked and prayed, brought on a revolution. "Father" wanted to put up a new barn instead.

If there is in your municipality an experienced official by whom the members of the council have been guided for years, appreciate him. Don't bring on a revolt. Members of councils should apply the golden rule, and extend to officials the treatment that they would expect if similarly situated.

Municipal office has few rewards commensurate with its duties and responsibilities. Many long terms of service go unrewarded, unless the fact that the man was an official should be considered sufficient.

Look where we will, we find that there is a general tendency among employers to regard the efficiency of their employes as entitling them to recognition. Nothing should interfere with the duty every councillor owes the officials and his constituents in this respect.

The Hamilton hydro board announced a new scale of rates for light and power, which amount to aout ten per cent. less than the former rates.

BRITISH TROOPS IN CENTRE OF MANY HARD BATTLES

Day's Fighting on the Western Front Shows a Record of Sabstantial Gains For the Allied Troops and Severe Fighting is Reported From Many Points—French Troops Make Progress North of Arras.

PARIS, March 16.—St. Eloi, from which the British army had been compelled to fall back before German attacks, was recaptured with almost all the neighboring trenches yesterday afternoon despite several stubborn counter attacks of the enemy, while the advance was in progress. St. Eloi is south of Ypres and has been the point where some of the heaviest fighting of the war has taken place. The Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry were in the trenches for several weeks at this village and it is believed that they took part in this engagement.

Fifty dead Germans were left on the ground as a result of an attempt to capture a redoubt near Lombaertzyde in Belgium which had been taken from the Germans a few days ago. The French losses in repelling this attack were insignificant.

Three lines of trenches were captured by the French infantry in a brilliant attack on German positions north of Arras on the spur of Notre Dame de Lorette. The French troops have now reached the edge of the plateau in this region. In this action they took 100 prisoners, several officers, destroyed two machine guns, and blew up an ammunition store. Further south of this point they blew up several Greman trenches near the road to Lille at Ecurie and Rocklincourt.

The Germans exploded a mine under a French trench near Carnoy, Albert district, and occupied the position, but were driven out. They came back and were driven out again, and the French troops have since firmly established themselves on this ground and put all their defensive works in order.

Near Vaasens, in the Aisne Valley, two German companies (500 men) were caught by French fire and suffered heavy losses.

Ground was gained in the woods northeast of Souain and northwest of Perthes, in the Champagne district, by French soldiers, who also repulsed two counter-attacks on a bridge northeast of Mesnil, where a trench mortar was captured and the position extended.

A blockhouse was demolished near Bagatelle, in the Argonne region, and the site occupied by French infantry, who also repulsed two attacks by the Germans. Two attempts of the Germans to take the French lines between Four de Paris and Bolant were also checked, as two others earlier in the day had been.

The infantry in the French army operating near Vauquois succeeded in an attack on that village, and last night occupy the western part of it. They took a considerable number of prisoners in the fighting.

The Daily Express correspondent on the Belgian frontier telegraphs:

"The sudden offensive of the allies, from Champagne to the sea, resulting in gains at many points, seems to have taken the Germans wholly by surprise.

"A convincing indication of a partial or temporary demoralization of the troops which bore the brunt of these five days of successive onslaught is the arrival at Ghent and Brussels, for trial by court-martial, of parties of soldiers sent under escort from the trenches for having failed to respond to the order to make counterattacks with sufficient enthusiasm, in some cases, it is said, they even failed to advance at all."

PORT SECRETS ARE GUARDED

Crews of Neutral Ships Entering Harbors Are Locked Below

WASHINGTON, March 16. — Extraordinary precautions adopted by German port authorities to prevent foreigners learning anything about their coast defences, or havens of the German navy, are described in a communication which Washington officials have just received from an officer of an American steamer.

The official states that before entering the port of Bremerhaven his vessel was boarded by about sixty Germans, who took complete command of the ship, sending the captain and everyone of the officers and crew down below, where they were shut in with closed ports until the vessel was at its berth.

The movements of both officers and crew afterwards were closely restricted as long as they were in port. Nevertheless this officer speaks of the extraordinary number of submarines he saw, some of them very much larger than anything he had ever seen in this country. He says he was told also that the Germans were turning out these vessels at the rate of one a day.

GERMAN RAIDER YIELDS AFTER FIVE MINUTES

DRESDEN FLEW THE WHITE FLAG

British Admiralty Announces a Naval Engagement, in Which the Cruisers Glasgow, Orama and Kent Overtook the German Warship and Shelled Her Until Latter Surrendered.

LONDON, March 16.—"The Dresden has been sunk."

This was the headline which attracted the chief attention of the English people yesterday.

The announcement of the sinking of the German cruiser Dresden came after nightfall, but the news spread quickly through the theatres and restaurants, and there was much rejoicing that the commerce raider, whose whereabouts have been a mystery since her escape after the Falkland Islands engagement in December, had at last been sent to the bottom.

The fact that all the crew of the Dresden were saved sets a new record for rescue after an action at sea, and a naval battle of five minutes' duration is probably another record. The details furnished by the Admiralty are scant, but apparently the British ships were not even hit, as no damage whatsoever is recorded.

The British Admiralty's statement is: "On March 14, at 9 a.m., H.M.S. Glasgow, Capt. John Luce, R.N.; H.M.S. auxiliary cruiser Orama, Capt. J. R. Segrave, R.N., and H.M.S. Kent, Capt. J. D. Allen, C.B., R.N., caught the Dresden near Juan Fernandez Island.

"An action ensued, and after five minutes' fighting the Dresden hauled down her colors, and displayed the white flag. She was much damaged and set on fire, and after she had been burning for some time her magazine exploded and she sank.

"The crew were saved. Fifteen badly wounded Germasn are being landed at Valparaiso.

"There were no British casualties and no damage to the ships."

British and Japanese warships have been in quest of the Dresden since the German cruiser escaped the fate of the Scharnhorst, Gneisnau. Leipzig and Nurnberg, in the naval battle with Sir Frederick Sturdee's squadron off the Falkland Islands early in December.

The Dresden, which was of 3,000 tons, was 395 feet long and carried 321 men. Her armament was ten 4.1-inch guns, eight 5-pounders, four machine guns and two torpedo tubes.

The Dresden was sister ship of the Emden, which was sunk off Cocos Island, in the Indian Ocean, by the Australian cruiser Sydney after an adventurous career. The sinking of the Dresden leaves at large — on the high seas, so far as is known, only the cruiser Karlsruhe, last reported as operating in the West Indies, and the auxiliary cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm, which is still raiding commerce in the South Atlantic.

KING CONFERS WITH WILSON

Labor Views Are Exchanged

WASHINGTON, March 16. — Hon. Mackenzie King, ex-member of the Canadian Parliament and formerly Minister of Labor at Ottawa, conferred yesterday with Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor. Later Secretary Wilson said the meeting was purely for an exchange of views on labor questions generally and that "there was no particular matter up."

HON. MACKENZIE KING.

ARE ALMOST AT PRZEMYSL

Russians in Blizzard Force Way Through Defence Ring

PETROGRAD, March 16.—All the middle Carpathian passes are still locked in a snow blizzard and the Austrians are making desperate efforts to extricate themselves from the choked ravines among the river sources flowing into the valley stretching to the region of Przemysl, the Stryj river and Lemberg which are stormswept in this region also. The Russians promptly seized their advantage amid the hurricane and snow to charge into the chief eastern defence of Przemysl, only three miles from the heart of the fortress. The position here is held by a strong force of infantry and artillery, but the vehemence of the Russian onslaught was such that an entire battalion surrendered at the first charge. The others maintained a confused resistance, frequently shooting their comrades. Then they fled in a panic, leaving many guns imbedded in the snowdrifts. The siege ring is now drawn much tighter.

The Germans in the north evidently dread the possibility of a thaw. Their forces on the border of Poland have been practically halted. The weather would permit of a general battle with the movement of artillery and heavy cavalry, but the season has reached the time when a complete thaw is probable. This would prove a disaster, if it caught the Germans in a half-developed movement near the swamps near north Narew.

Turks Falling Back.

PETROGRAD, March 16.—Russian forces operating in the trans-Tschorokh region are advancing, and because the Turks are falling back it is reported from Russian headquarters at Tiflis in the following official despatch:

"Our troops, having consolidated themselves on the approaches to Dzanbul Pass, are advancing vigorously by roads leading from that point toward Khopa. The Turks have been dislodged from their positions. Attempts by the Turks to undertake the offensive in certain directions failed."

Canadians Discriminated Against.

BERKELEY, Cal., March 16.—Officials of the University of California denied yesterday the charge made by William Gray, member of the Canadian Parliament, that 28 professors and instructors in the university here were unable to receive their salaries because they were not American citizens.

The university officials said their legal advisers had instructed them that the recent opinion of the state attorney-general, to the effect that it is illegal for aliens to draw state funds as teachers, did not apply to the university. It was said all Canadians and other aliens have received their salaries regularly.

NEUTRAL SHIPS TO FARE WELL

Britain's Blockade the Most Remarkable in History

LONDON, March 16. — Great Britain made known to the world yesterday in a formal order, signed in council by the King and issued from Buckingham Palace, how she proposes to sever all the arteries of sea commerce to and from Germany during the period of the war.

As in Premier Asquith's speech forecasting the order, the term "blockade" is not used and no prohibited area is defined. Nevertheless the extent of the order makes plain Britain's intention to prevent commodities from reaching or leaving Germany during the war.

British officials last night frankly called the movement a blockade, the Foreign Office describing it as an effective blockade, differing from the effective blockades of history only in that the property seized will not be confiscated outright, but sold, the proceeds eventually going to the owners.

In the last clause of the proclamation is the proposal most interesting to neutrals. This is the flat agreement to lift the "blockade" in case any nation will certify that the ships flying its flag shall not carry goods to Germany, or originating therein or belonging to subjects of the German Empire.

It is notable that the order declares no intention to capture ships of Germany's allies, Austria and Turkey, the reason being, no doubt, that the measure is avowedly a reprisal against the German submarine warfare. However, a cordon of ships will be maintained to shut off the commerce of German ports and regulate trade in the war zone, although ships voyaging eastward across the Atlantic will, it is expected be seized before they reach the North Sea.

When a neutral vessel is held up, in all cases except where there is a false declaration of destination, or other attempt at subterfuge, the cargo only will be seized, provided it is not contraband.

SUPPLIES ARE INADEQUATE

Britain not Making Munitions Fast Enough to Suit Kitchener

LONDON, March 16.—"Our progress in equipping the new armies has been seriously hampered by the failure to obtain sufficient labor and the necessary plant for the supply of war material," said Lord Kitchener, Secretary for War, in the House of Lords last evening.

Lord Kitchener held excessive drinking partly to blame for this condition, which, he said, was causing him "serious anxiety."

He urged the passing of a bill authorizing the Government to take over factories for the production of war material, and recommended that men who had served their country in making this material receive field medals like the soldiers at the front.

"Notwithstanding our great efforts," he said, "we have unfortunately found that the output of munitions of war does not equal our necessities and does not fulfill expectations. A very large number of our orders have not been completed on the dates for which they were promised.

"The supply of material for the next two or three months is causing me very serious anxiety. The enormous output which we require to place our troops in the field thoroughly equipped and with sufficient ammunition is undoubtedly possible, but can only be obtained by careful and deliberate organization. We must develop all the resources of the country and enable each competent workman to utilize in the most useful manner possible all his energy in the common object that we all have in view, which is the successful prosecution of the war to a victorious termination."

Referring to the Canadian division the speaker said:

"They have shown their mettle and received the warm commendation of Fjeld Marshal Sir John French for the high spirit and bravery with which they have performed their part."

Seventy recruits have been sent from Brockville for service in the third overseas contingent.

The judgment rendered in the recent arbitration between the Lake Erie and Northern railway and the Brantford Ice Co. will be appealed by the railway company. The damages with costs involve $55,000.

Drugs Are Harmful!

If a tea or coffee drinker, have you stopped to think that, with every cup, you are taking from 1½ to 3 grains of caffeine, a slow, but powerful, drug?

According to medical authorities, caffeine is a cause of nervousness, heart trouble, indigestion, constipation and other ailments. It's a cumulative drug, and what's more, a habit-forming drug.

Some time, when the drug gets in its licks, you'll realize the harm it does; but wouldn't it be better to avoid trouble—stop both tea and coffee now and use Postum!

It is a pure food-drink, made from selected wheat and a little wholesome molasses, carefully roasted, ground, and skilfully blended. This gives Postum a snappy, delicious flavour, but it is absolutely free from caffeine or any other harmful ingredient.

Postum comes in two forms:—Postum Cereal—requires boiling—15c and 25c pkgs. Instant Postum—a soluble form—no boiling required—made instantly in the cup with hot water—30c and 50c tins.

The difference is only in the form. Both kinds are equally wholesome and delicious and the cost per cup is about the same. Be sure to ask for the kind you want.

SPECIAL PRAYERS FOR RESTORATION OF PEACE

In accordance with a decree recently issued by His Holiness Pope Benedict, all the Catholics of the world, with the exception of those in Europe, will offer up special prayers and supplications on Sunday next that peace might be restored. The Catholics of Europe united in praying for peace on February 7th. Thus the members of the three Catholic churches in Peterborough will take part in solemnizing next Sunday as Peace Sunday. At the St. Peter's Cathedral the Masses will be at eight o'clock and at ten-thirty. The latter will be a High Mass, followed by exposition of the Blessed Sacrament. The Blessed Sacrament will remain exposed on the altar all day for adoration and in the evening special prayers and litanies will be recited, followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. At the Church of the Immaculate Conception there will be two Masses at eight-thirty and ten-thirty. The remainder of the program of service will be similar to St. Peter's. At the Church of the Sacred Heart the societies will receive Holy Communion in bodies and as is customary when the societies are present there will be three masses. The first will be at seven-thirty at which the T.A.S. and the C.M.B.A. will receive, the second will be at eight-thirty at which the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary will receive and the last Mass will be at ten-thirty. After the High Mass the Blessed Sacrament will be exposed as in the other churches.

Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart in exhorting his parishioners to do their part in observing Peace Sunday, remarked the deplorable condition of the world today and the wide area over which war is being furiously waged. God, and He alone can stop it, and for this reason the Pope, Christ's vicar on earth, has called upon his 300,000,000 people to storm heaven with prayers and supplications to God that he might restore the blessings of peace.

Assisting the French.

It was announced in the three churches, that material has been received with which clothes are to be made for the people of France suffering because of this war. The Catholic ladies of the city met in St. Alphonsus Lyceum this afternoon with the necessary sewing equipment.

In the three churches on Sunday the priests thanked the parishioners and citizens in general on behalf of the St. Vincent's orphanage for the handsome sum realized on "Shamrock Day." The amount was $770.13.

Wednesday will be St. Patrick's Day. The Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral will be at seven, eight and nine o'clock. The last will be a High Mass at which a sermon will be preached on St. Patrick by Rev. Father Leonard. At the Church of the Immaculate Conception a High Mass will be sung at seven o'clock, while at the Church of the Sacred Heart a High Mass will be celebrated at eight o'clock.

Friday will be the Feast of St. Joseph and the novena being made to St. Joseph will be brought to a close. The Masses at St. Peter's will be at five-thirty, six forty-five and eight o'clock. The Masses at the Church of the Immaculate Conception will be at five-thirty and seven o'clock and the Masses at the Church of the Sacred Heart will be at five-thirty and seven-thirty.

Beauty plays a large part in the owner's pride of possession. One reason why this car has appealed to the public is that its appearance invariably inspires admiration.

YOUNG MARRIED WOMAN TAKES HER OWN LIFE

Her Mind Had Been Impaired by Illness

(Lindsay Warder.)

With her head in an opening in the ice, the lifeless body of Mrs. Joseph McAssey was found on the Scugog iver, near Parkins' mill, on Sunday morning about 7.30 o'clock.

The unfortunate woman had been demented for some time, owing to ill health, and was therefore closely watched, as it was her physician's opinion that she planned self destruction.

The woman, with her husband, lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Johnston, on William St., her mother keeping a watchful eye upon her at all times.

Sunday morning she arose out of bed, and after dressing slipped quietly away from her friends. It could not have been more than two or three minutes after leaving the house that she was missed by her mother, who at once instituted a search around the premises, but she could not be found. During the time her friends were searching it is thought that she sought seclusion in the lumber piles until the opportune moment arrived, and unobserved threw herself head foremost into the opening in the ice, which was only capable of admitting her head and neck to the shoulders.

The body was found in this sad plight by her mother, who gave the alarm and had it taken to the mill nearby, afterwards being removed to her father's home.

Coroner Dr. Blanchard was notified, but did not consider an inquest necessary, as it was evident the woman committed suicide while temporarily insane.

The dead woman's husband was an employe of the Fox Brick and Tile Works for some years, and is now engaged as hostler at the Maunder hotel, William St., south.

The deceased was 21 years of age, and leaves besides her parents and husband to mourn her sad end a little baby boy five weeks old. Since the birth of the latter the dead woman's mind has been impaired, which accounts for the sad occurrence.

AGAINST AID TO GREAT BRITAIN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, March 16.—La Fortune, Liberal front bencher, spoke for three hours this morning and opposed further aid to Great Britain in the war. So far the opposition has furnished the only two objectors.

The Hamilton veterans of 1866 held a meeting and decided to join with the veterans of Toronto in any celebration they may arrange for the celebration of the battle of Ridgeway on June 2nd.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN DUNLOP.

A former resident of Peterborough, Mrs. John Dunlop, passed away in Toronto yesterday morning after a lingering illness. The deceased moved from here to Toronto some four years ago. She was a resident of Peterborough for about seventeen years previous to that living in Otonabee.

She is survived by her husband, three daughters, Ida, Minnie, and Mrs. F. Stockdale, four brothers, Richard, George, John, in North Monaghan, William in Chicago, and three sisters, Mrs. Robert Morrison, of Peterborough, Mrs. Thomas Johnston, of Otonabee, Mrs. George Lockie of Vancouver.

The body of the late Mrs. Dunlop will arrive in Peterborough tomorrow noon on the C.P.R. train, the funeral being conducted from the station to Little Lake Cemetery, with Rev. J. P. Wilson officiating.

MISS CATHERINE HERBERT.

Miss Catherine Herbert died in St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday at four o'clock, after an illness of a few weeks in which pneumonia gained the upper hand. She was a good-natured, kind-hearted native of Ireland, and had for many years acted as domestic in the homes of some of the most prominent families of the city.

She visited Clones, Ireland, her birth place, twice since coming to Canada twenty-five or thirty years ago.

Some time ago she was unfortunate enough to sprain an ankle while coming from the Sacred Heart Church and was taken to the St. Joseph's Hospital. She recovered and had been brought home, but contracted a cold which developed into pneumonia to which she succumbed.

She has one brother living on the family homestead in Ireland.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from McFadden's undertaking parlors to the Sacred Heart Church and the Roman Catholic cemetery.

I am writing this in a beautiful mansion, where I am billeted with some of the officers of the North Staffords. Tomorrow night I will have the best bed [illegible] humble home of a poor villager. These French people are very kind to us and do all they can for us. They have to house us. We provide the rations, and everything we want to buy from them the price is reasonable, which is quite different from Salisbury. We will all appreciate Canada after this and will be perfectly satisfied with the climate and everything else.

EVIDENCE IS CONFLICTING

Hearing of Charge Against Barnard Navin is Adjourned for One Week

Widely conflicting evidence by witnesses for the Crown and the defence featured the hearing yesterday of a charge of cruelty to animals laid against Mr. Barnard Navin, a farmer of North Monaghan, which came up before County Police Magistrate Langley. It was started in the morning, adjourned at one o'clock till four, and is now laid over till March 22nd.

The case while presenting no sensational or particularly important features is interesting nevertheless owing to the different stories told by witnesses regarding the condition of the cattle in question. In the neighborhood of ten witnesses were subpoenaed in the case and the adjournment was allowed by the Magistrate to permit Prosecutor Hatton to secure further evidence of an important character. The cattle which are alleged to have been neglected and illy fed, consist of three calves, a cow and one pig.

At the afternoon session the first witness called was David Tully, a farmer of North Monaghan. He said he saw the cattle in question. They were certainly thin cattle, but not thinner than what might be expected at this season of the year. He would not say from looking at the cattle that they had been ill-treated for want of food. He didn't think the hog looked as if it had been ill-treated either. He claimed that he had kept cattle in as bad condition as were those owned by Mr. Navin. One year old cattle were liable to be thin and were hard to fatten.

Ernest Kelk's Evidence.

Ernest Kelk, a farm hand, said he knew how stock should be cared for. The cattle belonging to Mr. Navin were neither fat nor thin. Year old cattle were usually in the same condition as those in question. The hog had not been in too good a shape. He would not gather from their appearance that they had been harshly or cruelly treated. The boards they were lying on were high and dry. Often cattle were not straw bedded. Cattle should be bedded, but it was not necessary if they were dry and on boards. Mr. Kelk said some of his own cattle were not in any better condition than those of Mr. Navin.

Magistrate Langley remarked upon the widely conflicting character of the evidence submitted by the witnesses for the Crown and defence. Witnesses for the crown had stated that the cattle were emaciated and skin and bone.

Mr. Kelk said it would take about one month's good feeding to make any difference in the appearance of the cattle.

Magistrate Langley said it was a pretty close case as far as the evidence went. Mr. Gordon did not wan an adjournment of the case to suit Mr. Hatton, as there was no reason why the crown should be granted an adjournment. Mr. Gordon said it looked like giving to crown an opportunity to get additional evidence to bolster up the case. Mr. Hatton said he had additional evidence to bring in, in rebuttal and therefore was entitled to the adjournment.

Magistrate Langley said he wanted to be fair to both counsels and would adjourn till any day to suit them. It was decided to let the case stand over till March 22nd. Mr. Gordon somewhat warmly remarked that if he were successful he intended to ask for costs in the case for his witnesses. The Magistrate said in future he wished counsels to be ready to go on with the case for both prosecution and defence without asking for an adjournment.

Serve Writ on Council

Wood, Gundy & Co., have served a writ on the Council of South Vancouver, claiming damages for an alleged breach of contract involved in the proposed sale of $790,000, 3-year 6 per cent. treasury certificate to Toledo financiers. The Toronto firm understood that they were fiscal agents for the municipality and were negotiating for the sale of the debentures at a price several points above that at which the deal with the Toledo house was made. They now claim one-eighth of one per cent. on the $790,000, their main purpose being, possibly, to assert the binding force of fiscal agency agreements.—Financial Post.

Captain Garnet Greer Has Had His Taste of Trenches

Was First Soldier From Peterborough to Have the Experience

Mr. Paul Trebilcock has received the following very interesting letter from Dr. Garnet Greer, son of Dr. T. N. Greer of this city, who is attached to the 2nd Battalion, 1st Brigade, now in France:—

February 22, 1915.

Dear Paul:

I sure wish you were here with us, as we are having a wonderful experience. We left Salisbury Plain rather in a hurry and went to a place from which troops had never embarked before, though the transports and supplies went from there. Our transport was an Indian freighter running from England to Calcutta, and as we had no cargo to speak of you can imagine how she rolled and pitched. We took a rather round-about course and were three nights and two days on board. The saloon was about the size of your dining-room, and it was very funny to see about twenty of us sleeping on the floor, benches, table, or anything one could find, and when the ship rolled, well, a football scrim, is about what things looked like.

Anyway, in spite of the Kaiser's boast that the Canadian contingent would never reach France, we arrived safely in the port of ———. We were given about three hours to unload, and then entrained for ———. It was a very tedious journey of two nights and one day and a half. I slept on some straw in a cattle car. Great sport. When we reached ———, we were billeted, and remained there for a few days, resting. We could hear the guns and see the shells bursting over towards ———, about twelve miles away. Like a bolt out of the blue the order came to move, and here we are. We marched to ———, and were attached to the ——— ——— Regiment of British regulars. I never hope to meet a finer set of officers. After a night's rest we moved on to the trenches, and the platoons went in at intervals. Then companies as a whole. The troops relieved at ———, but the staff went out earlier. My dressing station is a little farm about 400 yards from the first line trenches. I was the first person from the old home town to get into the trenches. Col. Rogers got in the previous night with another regiment, but he is not a Peterborough man. Anyway, we are both from the 3rd. I shall never forget my first trip from the farm to the trenches. The communicating trenches are full of water, so had to go over ground. I went in company with Major W———, second in command of the regulars, a fine man, D. S. O. No. 6. He tells me that the snipers were more active that night than he has experienced for months. Probably they knew the Canucks were making their debut in the trenches, as it were. They turned a maxim on the road twice, and it would have made a pretty picture to see the major and the M. O. scrambling into a ditch. The bullets make a fierce row going by, and the feeling the first time is indescribable. But they say the ones you hear never hurt, and it must be right.

The "Jack Johnsons" were bursting in the field all around the farm on Saturday, and they put the fear into one, I can tell you. But you get accustomed to anything, and I don't mind them much now at all. The other day one came through the roof of the farmhouse, and a few burst in the yard, but no damage to amount to anything was done. I must, according to orders, embody my address in the letter proper, so here it is:

Capt. G. C. Greer, M. O.,
British Expeditionary Force,
First Canadian Division,
First Brigade,
Second Battalion.

That is sufficient. No country is necessary.

I have collected some nice souvenirs of the Boschers, fuses of "Jack Johnsons," and some bullets picked out of the walls of the room in which I sleep. I must get a helmet, and then I shall be happy. We have been in the trenches for the past four days, and come out tonight for I don't know how long. The First Brigade are the only Canadians in the trenches so far.

Drop me a line occasionally, as it is a bit lonesome over here when the excitement is over. I have had very few casualties and nothing serious at all among the Peterborough boys.

Your old pal,
DOC.

P.S.—There go the big guns again. Until now they have been silent today, 11 a.m.

SANG DURING THE CHARGE

Canadian Troops Defeated Enemy With Little Trouble

LONDON, March 16.—The following authentic particulars of last week's heavy fighting by Canadians are supplied to-day by an officer returned from the front:

The Canadian infantry, consisting of three battalions, two from Ontario and one from Winnipeg district, first advanced towards the Germans' front last Tuesday. Previously, the Canadian artillery had poured in a tremendous fire, which had gone on for about six hours, and it was evident that the enemy were thrown into a state of partial demoralization. The Canadian infantry then got the word to advance, the splendid shooting of the artillery having cleared the ground of a good deal of the German defences.

The Canadians raced forward, cheering, laughing, and singing, and hurled themselves into the first line of trenches. Here they met little resistance.

The Canadians paused to make good the ground gained and allow for reinforcements to come up later in the day. The same tactics were again adopted with complete success, not, however without serious loss, of which Canada at the time of cabling knows more than I do. By nightfall the Canadians were in possession of the whole of the enemy's trenches immediately in front of their previous positions.

Hospital Ships To Straits.

PARIS, March 16.—Telegraphing from Athens the correspondent of the Havas Agency says the French hospital ship Canada has arrived to take on provisions, and that she will leave immediately for the Dardanelles.

It is reported that there are 30 convalescents on board the Canada, but none from gunshot wounds. In this connection the statement is made here that since the beginning of the fighting in the Dardanelles not a single French sailor has been struck. It is a fact, nevertheless, that the aim of the Turkish gunners is improving.

From several sources news is reaching Athens, the correspondent continues, that the agitation by the Mussulmans against the Young Turks and the Germans is increasing.

Wm. Campbell, operator at the Hydro-Electric Commission's transformer station at Fall's View, Niagara, received a 12,000-volts shock and was rendered unconscious. He quickly recovered, but is in the hospital.

The mills of the Spanish River Lumber Co. at Cutler, on the north shore of Lake Huron, were destroyed by fire.

SMUTS AND RUSTS OF GRAIN CROPS.

It is estimated that the losses sustained from smuts in Ontario grain crops amount to $2,720,000 annually, about two-thirds of which occur in oats, wheat being the next greatest sufferer. To cope with this danger, Bulletin 229, entitled "Smuts and Rusts of Grain Crops," prepared by J. E. Howitt and R. E. Stone, has been issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, for free distribution to those who may apply for it. This very practical bulletin goes fully into the cause and cure of smuts and rusts and gives a number of ways of treating seed grain in order to avoid or lessen injury to grain crops from these causes. Practical farmers will hail it as a valuable adviser regarding relief from these two common grain troubles.

Frederick Kebler, a well-known shoe merchant of Berlin, died suddenly while walking to his store.

Col. M. Hendrick, formerly U. S. Consul at Belleville, has been appointed consul-general at Plauen, Saxony.

DANCING ON 17th BANNED

Hamilton, March 16.—An order issued by Bishop Dowling, and commented upon in all the Catholic Churches, is causing a great deal of discussion among the Catholics of Hamilton. It puts the bann on all dancing on March 17, after arrangements had been made for some big balls. It was opposed that such things were opposed to the regulations of the diocese, which forbade Catholics to participate in them during the Lenten season.

The members of the local diocese who are affected by the order are complaining because it is a local matter and does not affect outside parishes. However the order will be obeyed.

In speaking of the matter in St. Mary's cathedral Monsignor Mahoney stated that the affairs would not be termed as dances, but as midnight orgies and he expressed the hope that none of his people would be present at them. He also stated that the last had not been heard of the matter.

Dean Craven, in speaking in St. Patrick's church, said that the curse of God would be upon the heads of all who attended such affairs.

The Catholics have heretofore held big celebrations on the seventeenth of March, but in speaking of the order the clergy said that in olden times the people did not spend that day in dancing, but rather in solemn reverence.

Increase In Lesser Crimes.

An increase of petty crimes is noted in the annual report of Provincial Police Inspector Rogers, which appeared recently. In all 1,599 cases were handled, and this shows an increase of 343 on the previous record. Convictions were secured in 1,172 cases, the percentage being slightly greater than before. Fines came from 754 persons, 244 went to prison, and 174 were released on suspended sentence. The fines imposed amounted to $54,571, as compared with $17,109.50 of last year, but much of this is uncollected pending a Privy Council judgment on the Hudson Bay Co. in the matter of selling furs.

The Liquor License Department was assisted by the arrest of 232 persons. Two hundred [illegible] 32 imprisoned. Large seizures of liquor were made.

Under game and fishery regulations, 147 persons were prosecuted and 120 convictions were made. Considerable trouble was experienced during the year with vagrants at the border line and many of them were deported.

MUST FACE THE ISSUE

Increase in Taxation Inevitable Says Sir George Foster

OTTAWA, March 16.—In the budget debate in the Commons yesterday Sir George Foster was the chief speaker, and his contribution to the discussion occupied the greater part of the sitting.

For the present financial situation in Canada Sir George argued that no person nor any Parliament party was entirely responsible. The situation would have to be squarely faced, however, if Canada was to do her part in the present struggle, and the people in this country must realize that they could not save Canada and the Empire without some increase in taxation.

It was ridiculous, he said, for the Liberals to oppose additional taxation by suggesting "economy and retrenchment," which were virtues preached by the Liberals in opposition but never practiced by them in power.

Referring to the charge that the tariff changes would not produce revenue, Sir George said that last year goods entered Canada free of duty valued at $208,000,000. Upon similar imports under the new budget we would collect duties at the rate of 5 per cent. on British imports, and at the rate of 7 1-2 per cent. upon foreign imports. The British goods would have a preference.

Sir George said he regretted placing a tax on raw material and regretted the necessity for any increase in taxation, but the people of this country must realize that they could not save Canada and the Empire without paying anything.

Mr. Carroll (Lib., S. Cape Breton), who represents an industrial community, complained that the new budget bore oppressingly upon the consuming classes. He took issue with Mr. White's statement that the Canadian manufacturers had agreed not to raise prices in consequence of the tariff increases, and to prove his contention, quoted from circulars sent to the trade by various manufacturers, announcing higher price for their products in consequence of the tariff changes.

J. A. Descarries (Jacques Cartier), Mr. Hughes (King's, P.E.I), and Mr. Lafortune (Montcalm) also spoke.

Patriotism and Production.

The patriotism and production campaign planned by the Federal Government is fast rounding int. shape. The western provinces have been thoroughly organized, and arrangements are being made to launch the machinery as soon as possible. Dates are now being arranged in every province from Nova Scotia to British Columbia, and specialists are studying out the production programs for each section. Appeals will then be made from practical and imperial standpoints for the greatest output of live stock and food products that Canada has ever experienced.

One of the first ambitions of the Government experts is to see the west grow more cattle and Ontario more wheat. The fact that the tendencies of the agricultural districts in each place has been to the contrary, strengthens the appeal. It is pointed out that it will be much easier for Europe to renew her crops than her live stock, as much breeding stock will necessarily be killed off for food and at a much younger age than usual. This provides an opportunity for Canadian farmers in the west to cultivate an industry hitherto neglected in favor of cereal growing. In Ontario an attempt will be made to develop the wheat-growing sections that have not been exploited thoroughly of late years.

A. P. Westervelt, who is in charge of the organization of the provinces, stated recently that there is an inclination among western townspeople of means to place their capital in farm lands, and to aid in the general production. It is also expected that the work will be well worth while because of the good prices expected next year.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, March 15.—Wheat opened ⅝c to 1⅜c higher, oats 1c to 1⅜c higher, and flax 3c to 4¼c advance. The market for wheat futures was fairly active and in sympathy with a firm Liverpool market prices advanced further on wheat. May oats advanced, while July declined. Flax made considerable advances over opening points. Nearing noon the market was dull and values holding about the high points.

In cash circles the demand all round is exceptionally keen, but little actual business is being carried thru, owing to the abnormal scarcity of offerings.

Wheat futures closed 1⅜c to 2⅝c up, cash 2¾c to 3c up, oats 1⅛c to 1⅜c up and flax 5c to 6¼c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, March 15.—Business in grain over the cable today was dull, there being no firm cables received from foreign buyers. In sympathy with the advance in prices for oats in Winnipeg, a stronger feeling prevailed on spot, and prices were marked up 1c to 2c per bushel, but the demand from all sources was slow and trade quiet. The tone of the market for spring wheat flour is stronger, and the prospects are that if present prices for wheat in Winnipeg are maintained values will be advanced in the near future. Millfeed is in fair demand. Butter quiet and easy. Cheese firm. Eggs easy and slightly lower.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, March 15.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.56⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.55⅝; No. 2 northern, $1.48⅝ to $1.51⅝; May, $1.52⅞; July, $1.47⅝.

Hogs.

Selects, weighed off cars, sold at $8.25, and $8 fed and watered, and $7.60 f.o.b. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 15.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, altho the offerings of cattle were a little larger than this day a week ago, there was no actual change in the condition of the market, prices being maintained. Choice steers sold at $7.75 to $8.00; good at $7.25 to $7.35, and medium at $5.75 to $6.50 per cwt., while small lots of picked stock brought from 10c to 15c per 100 pounds more.

The feature of the trade in small meats was the weaker feeling in the market for calves, and prices, as compared with last week, show a decline of 1c to 2c per pound, owing to the increased supplies coming forward, and the prospects are that they will go still lower in the near future. The demand was fairly good, and sales of choice stock, weighing from 90 to 100 pounds each, sold at 8c per pound, live weight. The tone of the market for sheep and lambs is firm, owing to the continued small receipts, and small lots of the former changed hands at $5.75 to $6, and the latter at $9 per cwt.

Hogs unchanged, prices being steady under a fair demand, and sales of selected lots of average weights were made at $8.50, and lightweights at $8.30 to $8.40, while sows brought $6.30 to $6.50, and stags $4.30 to $4.50 per cwt., weighed off cars.

THE NAPOLEON OF THE WEST

Sir Clifford Sifton Has Found Life Work in Conservation

In the career of Sir Clifford Sifton, who received a knighthood at New Year's, we have again the drama of "Milestones," the old-new story of the radical in youth grown conservative with years, says The Toronto Star Weekly.

This Napoleon of the West, as he used to be called, was born in London, Ont., 54 years ago, and he was educated at Victoria University, Cobourg, Ont. He became a lawyer and went West, settling in Brandon. He first made his appearance in politics when he was elected to the Manitoba Legislature in 1888. At a critical period of the Greenway Administration he took the office of Attorney-General and Minister of Education. That was his office when in 1896 the Laurier Government went into power and he was called to Ottawa by Sir Wilfrid and given the portfolio of Minister of the Interior, being especially charged with matters relating to the West and the Yukon and unorganized territory. It is interesting to recall that he was given the Federal seat of Brandon by acclamation through the courtesy of the late Dalton McCarthy, who that year was elected both for Brandon and North Simcoe.

In 1898 Mr. Sifton introduced legislation giving responsible government to the Northwest Territories. He devoted special attention to the question of immigration. He was appointed by the British Government to act as British agent before the Alaska Boundary Tribunal under the treaty of January, 1903.

He was re-elected to the House of Commons in 1900, 1904, and 1908. He resigned from the Laurier Government in 1905 on account of differences of opinion over the educational clauses of the bill making Alberta and Saskatchewan autonomous provinces. He was one of Canada's representative commissioners at the International Conference of Conservation of Natural Resources, held in Washington in 1908. In 1909 he was appointed chairman of the Canadian Conservation Commission and still holds that position.

Clifford Sifton made his final break with the Liberal party when he strenuously opposed reciprocity with the United States. He now spends considerable time on the work of the Conservation Commission, but he has very large personal interests to take care of, as he is one of the wealthiest men in Canada. He lives in Ottawa, but spends a good deal of time in England, where he does a lot of motoring.

He is keenly interested in all outdoor recreations, and is owner of one of the finest stables of saddle and show horses in America, including some of the best and most celebrated jumpers in the world, such as "Hercules" and "Confidence." Sir Clifford is a member of many clubs in Canada and in England.

"Ah, weel, it's no good enough to catch a train or that sort o' thing, but good enough to get up to yer breakfast wi'."

Mr. James Kent

THE astonishing growth of the telegraph in Canada is summarized in the career of Mr. James Kent, whose retirement from the management of the C. P. R. Telegraphs is announced, after long and faithful service extending over a period of twenty-nine years. Mr. Kent, who has been identified with telegraph work all his life, was born in Montreal in 1854, and when old enough he entered the services of the Montreal Telegraph Company as a messenger. Since that time Mr. Kent has had the unique experience of having occupied every conceivable position in connection with telegraph service, from the lowest to the highest, and it was only hard work and faithful service that gained for him these merited advancements.

It was in the year 1886, when Mr. Kent was officiating as wire chief to the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company, the C. P. R. opened up its telegraph service from Montreal to the coast, that he was invited by Mr. C. R. Hosmer, then manager of the company, to join the service as chief operator at the Montreal office. At that time the company worked in a somewhat delapidated building situated on the same site as the present one at the corner of St. Francois-Xavier Street and Hospital Street, and the staff consisted of six operators, where to-day there are over one hundred. Subsequently, the office was transferred for a time across the street, and in 1900 the C. P. R. purchased the old site and erected the present substantial telegraph offices for the down town business.

In 1890, Mr. Kent was appointed superintendent of the Eastern Division, which extended from Fort William to Louisburg, Cape Breton, and nine year later, on the retirement of Mr. C. R. Hosmer, he was advanced to the position of manager of the C. P. R. Telegraph Service, from which he now retires. Ever since its inauguration the telegraph service of the Canadian Pacific has not only been used for the dispatch of trains, but for commercial work, too, and has grown to such an extent that it is now practically the largest dispatch service in the world, controlling as it does, in addition to the telegraph wires, over six thousand miles of track passage by telephone. The tremendous increase in the wire mileage has come about during the last five or six years. Great strides have been made in the dispatching of trains by telephone. The first experiment was made between Farnham and Montreal, and it was attended with such success that the telephone is used all over the system at the present time. During the management of Mr. Kent every improvement in telegraph science that has seen the light of the world has been tried, and, if successful, introduced. Prior to the opening of the through line between Montreal and Toronto messages were transmitted through Ottawa, but to-day through wires are installed which are operated by means of the printing arrangement, which is the latest improvement in telegraph science. This method is also used in the receipt and dispatch of messages from Montreal to Winnipeg, demonstrative of the great strides that have been made for improving the telegraph service throughout the Dominion of Canada by the Canadian Pacific. The extension of the telegraph throughout Canada has been far ahead of railway construction, and the service between Winnipeg and Edmonton was in operation for twenty years before the railway was built. At that time the only way to reach Edmonton by rail was via Calgary.

CURLING CLUB ELECTS J. E. A. FITZGERALD TO PRESIDENT'S CHAIR

Felix Brownscombe too Good a Man to Lose, is Re-elected Secretary — Another Trophy is Donated and Prizes are Presented to Successful Rinks

After a season of the brightest and most gratifying character, in which more genuine enthusiasm has been displayed than ever before and in which local curlers have covered themselves, if not with glory, at least with highest honor, the Curling Club wound up its affairs for 1915 last night at a live and most successful annual meeting. A constant stream of complimentary remarks, speeches and eulogies circulated the whole evening, and when the meeting broke up at ten there was a general opinion that the grand old winter game was well and truly worth the candle. The presentation of cups, trophies and prizes was carried out amid much good-natured chaffing and amid amusing reminiscences of how such trophies were lost and won.

Officers for the next year were elected, and here again it looks as if a wise selection had been made. Under the business-like direction of last year's officers, with Mr. H. R. H. Kenner at the helm as president, the club's record is certainly an envious one. For the ensuing year, Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald will assume the office of president, while his predecessor will fill the position of honorary president, which was decidedly popular with the members on hand.

New Officers

Hon. President—H. R. H. Kenner.
President—J. E. A. Fitzgerald.
Vice-President—J. H. Ferguson.
Sec.-Treas.—Felix Brownscombe.
Committee of Management—W. H. Taylor, W. G. Ferguson, Robt. Neill, W. D. Campbell,
Auditor—G. H. Giroux.
Representatives to the Ontario Curling Association Convention—W. G. Ferguson and W. G. Morrow.

Motions of appreciation were tendered to President H. R. H. Kenner for his indefatigable efforts to make the season a success; to Mr. Angus McIntosh for the excellent ice he had provided all winter, and to the Press.

A New Trophy.

President Kenner and Vice-President J. E. A. Fitzgerald presented to the club for competition a beautiful silver cup which must be competed for on January 1 each year, open only to local curlers. The cup was really a handsome contribution and the generosity and the motive which actuated the donors was fittingly acknowledged. It was received by Mr. Brownscombe on behalf of the club, who expressed their appreciation and hoped that Mr. Kenner would be spared for many years to come to participate in the club's activities.

Mr. J. A. Cameron, a veteran curler, also acknowledged the presentation and lavished praises upon Mr. Kenner for his active interest and assistance.

Presentation of Prizes.

A large table in the room was the resting place for a wide asortment of prizes, cups and trophies of all descriptions, and great interest was taken as each gift found its way to whom it belonged. Every presentation was accompanied by a speech, while there was no escape from a speech on the part of the recipient. There were a very few members of the club who escaped this arduous duty, but all acquitted themselves well. The prize winners were as follows:

Inter-Rink Matches; Group Winners

1st prize, caseroles, won by A. R. Moore's rink.
J. T. McCabe, lead,
W. B. Sloan, second,
Geo. Hill, vice,
A. R. Moore, skip.

2nd prize, safety razors, won by J. E. A. Fitzgerald's rink.
E. V. Warne, lead,
Ross L. Dobbin, second,
W. D. Campbell, vice,
R. P. Best, skip.

Mr. Fitzgerald, the regular skip, being unable to play on account of illness, his vice-skip, R. P. Best, skipped the rink.

Inter-Rink Matches; Runners-up.

1st prize, pocket knives, won by Dr. Wightman's rink.
C. G. Graham, lead,
Dr. Tennant, second,
W. H. Collier, vice,
Dr. Wightman, skip.

2nd prize, four razor strops, won by Dickson Davidson's rink.
W. J. Koster, lead,
F. C. Cressman, second,
Geo. A. Benore, vice,
Dickson Davidson, skip.

Local Bonspiel; Primary Competition

1st prize, cut-glass decanters, won by H. R. H. Kenner's rink.
A. N. Allison, lead,
F. Brownscombe, second,
M. S. Tooley, vice,
H. R. H. Kenner, skip.

2nd prize, cut-glass cream and sugar bowls, won by Dr. Wightman's rink
W. J. Koster, lead,
W. J. Padget, second,
Alex. C. Kay. vice,
Dr. Wightman, skip.

Consolation Competition.

1st prize, cut-glass water pitchers, won by Geo. H. Giroux's rink.
G. W. Fitzgerald, lead,
Adam Hall, second,
A. W. Archibald, vice,
Geo. H. Giroux, skip.

2nd prize, brass jardinieres, won by Thomas Brightman's rink.
J. J. Murphy, lead,
A. Davidson, second,
J. S. Knapman, vice,
Thos. Brightman, skip.

President's Address.

In his address to the club, Mr. Kenner referred to the development of young players in the past season. Peterborough had reason to be proud of its curling accomplishments this winter. They had landed the Orillia Cup, and the Primary in the open bonspiel, as well as the Seymour Power Co. Cup in Campbellford. Mr. Kenner stated that he believed the best criterion of a club's success was in how successful were the inter-rinks matches and to what extent new players were brought out. He thanked the executive committee for their splendid efforts, and as for the secretary, he thought there was not a better one in the province. This was received with great applause. He wished them all a most succesful season in 1915-16. He also referred to the creditable records of Dr. Wightman, Mr. Stubbs, H. F. Foot, and J. E. A. Fitzgerald in going through the season without a penalty for not having all their players on hand for every game.

Acknowledgment was also made of the actions of Major S. T. Medd and Lieut. Ross Cameron, two of the club skips, in volunteering for active service. Photographs of these two skips will be secured to adorn the gallery of curling notables that already hang in the club rooms.

A photo of Mr. Kenner will also go to join this collection.

Ladies' Curling Club.

Mrs. V. Eastwood was elected president of the Ladies' Curling Club at the annual meeting.

Reports of the past year were presented by the president, Mrs. Sanderson, and the secretary-treasurer, Miss Florence Gladman.

The season just concluded has been a most successful one. Indications of progress were found in the membership and in the growing popularity of the game and the skill of the members.

The officers elected for 1915 are:
President—Mrs. V. Eastwood.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. A. H. Stratton.
Secretary—Miss Morrow.
Treasurer—Mrs. Harry Thompson.

On account of the extension of the club during the year it was decided to divide the office of secretary-treasurer.

An interesting feature of the meting was the presentation of prizes. The president's prize was won by Mrs. Sanderson's rink, each member of which received cut-glass salt cellars with gold-lined silver spoons. This rink was composed of Mrs. H. Thompson, Miss Gladman, Mrs. W. H. Hill, and Mrs. Sanderson (skip). The vice-president's prize, silver bonbon dishes, went to Mrs. A. E. Coulthard's rink, as follows: Mrs. George Burnham, Mrs. A. P. McLean, Miss Gladman and Mrs. Coulthard (skip). The club presented Miss Gladman with a handsome watch, suitably inscribed, in recognition of her efforts as secretary-treasurer.

WANTS UNITED STATES TO PROBE

British M.P. Asks Regarding Treatment of Prisoners

LONDON, March 16.—Baron Newton suggested in the House of Lords yesterday that the American Government be asked to make enquiries concerning the treatment of British prisoners in Germany.

Earl Beauchamp, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, speaking on behalf of the British Government, said there was reason to hope that the German Government would sanction this Government's proposal that United States officials should supervise the distribution of relief provided by Great Britain for British prisoners in Germany That, he thought, would constitute a better guarantee of proper treatment being accorded British prisoners than would the cursory inspection by American officials of the detention camps in Germany.

Charlie Ebbetts made a speech at Daytona, Fla., and when someone grinned he responded and made it a doubleheader.

COMMENT As You Like it

JACK GOOCH has the Melba fever too. Here's what he has to say in reference to the O.H.A.-Victorias' squabble:—

"The O. H. A. are cutting off their nose to spite their face. The St. Michaels have declared that they will not have a team in the O. H. A. next year, as the majority of their players have retired. The Toronto Rowing Club will not play in the senior O.H.A. next season, and if Vics are thrown out it will be another team less in the senior series. For myself, I announced as I donned my uniform to play the Winnipegs in Winnipeg on Friday last that it was my last game of hockey, so I should worry."

THE RECENT sale of Directum I., the pacing champion, for a sum said to be close to $45,000, brings to mind the remarkable gain in speed mad by the side-action racer in recent years. A study of the records from 1866 to 1915 shows that in this period of 49 years the mile records made either in competition or against time has been reduced from 2.21½ to 1.55, a gain of 26½ seconds. Directum I. holds the race record of 1.58, made at Columbus, O., on September 30, 1914, and Dan Patch the against time record of 1.55, made at St. Paul, Minn., on September 8, 1906.

MANAGER McGRAW of the Giants suffered a tremendous loss when George Burns, his great outfielder, dislocated his ankle at Dallas on Saturday, and was carried off the field unconscious. He will be out of the game for months.

Burns batted for a percentage of .303 in 1914, being the only Giant regular to win a place in the select circle. He scored 100 runs, leading the National League players in this respect, as he did in stolen bases, for which his total was 62. His fielding average was .950.

LISTEN! Here's one. Harvey Sproule handed out to the unsuspecting public last night through the columns of the Star:—

Frank Heffernan, the Victorias' defence player, has ambitions of becoming a professional baseball prayer, and may go south with the Torontos. He is a great first-sacker, and was a hard hitter in the local amateur ranks.

SUNDAY, April 4th, is now definitely announced as the date of the Johnson-Willard fight. Governor Bustillo says he will not interfere.

Thirty Thousand Japs For China?

TIEN TSING, March 16. — Pekin is considerably alarmed and excited by reports that thirty thousand Japanese, under convoy of a naval squadron, have left for China. There is nothing in the diplomatic situation to justify the despatch of troops at this juncture. Indeed, such a movement may precipitate international troubles in China, where feeling reaches a dangerous pitch.

LOOK UP JOBS

Ontario Government Will Send Out Agents to Farmers

TORONTO, March 16. — With a view to approaching the unemployment problem from a new angle Hon. James Duff will send special departmental representatives to different parts of Ontario, to bring the farmers into close touch with working people in the cities. The first of these men will leave this week for London, and by a special system of advertising will endeavour to find agricultural positions for many of those now unemployed.

These officials will have an accurate knowledge of the number of positions available and will come into direct contact with the situation. Concrete propositions will be offered and contracts will be made.

An endeavor will be made to find places for mechanics who have had practically no farming experience, although those who have done work in the field are necessarily more in demand.

Local Musician at Port Hope Church

Mr. Cyril H. Devey, of Peterborough, who presided at the organ in St. Paul's church yesterday, made quite a favorable impression, says the Port Hope Guide. He has unusual musical talent for one of his years, and should have a good future before him. In the short recital given at the close of the evening service he elicited much favorable comment. Mrs. McCarthy, always a favorite, sang very sweetly the solo, "My God My Father While I Stray." The organ numbers were:

TAX RATE NOT YET DECIDED

Finance Chairman and City Treasurer Will Make Report

Whether or not the city's tax rate for 1915 will be lower than that of last year has not as yet been decided. The Finance Committee met yesterday afternoon and talked things over, looked over the estimates and then left it in the hands of the chairman, Ald. Stratton, and City Treasurer Frank Adams for a report. The balance from 1914 amounts to $11,860.94, which, with the increase in taxes on account of the increase in assessment, will care for the war tax levied by the Provincial Government, the $10,000 for the Patriotic Fund, the increase in the upkeep of the public schools and the Collegiate Institute, the increase in the expenditure of the Charity Board and the increase in the upkeep of the Fire Department. Last year the amount of assessed property was $11,372,394, while the amount for 1915 is $12,853,685.

Last year the amount raised by the 12.13 mills rate (not including the amount raised by the fixed rate of 13 mills) was $123,681.89. This year the amount to be raised will, according to the present estimates, be $131,545.78. The following would be the amounts raised by three rates:—

11½ mills	132,520.00
11 mills	126,959.00

It was the unanimous opinion of the members of the committee that the rate should be lowered, but, with the estimates so high and the grant to the patriotic fund and the war tax to be considered to lower it would be impossible. The possibility of doing away with the grants was discussed but nothing definite was arrived. Some $5000 is given annually by the council, which amounts to about half a mill. City Treasurer Frank Adams will go into the matter with Ald. Stratton and report to the council at a later date.

CAPTAIN PEARSON WRITES OF WORK

Camp Meetings Well Attended by the Soldiers

Captain H. A. Pearson, Y.M.C.A. secretary now at Salisbury Plain, and formerly of Peterborough, writing of his work among the soldiers, says the Association men have received a royal welcome not only from the English Association men but from officers and men everywhere. Some of their branches were officially opened by colonels and staff officers and the troops appreciated very much the conveniences which the Association was able to bring them.

In regard to the meetings each night he states they are marked by the same splendid enthusiasm which marked the work at Valcartier and at every centre, men were being won from the power of sin to the King. There being practically no place for the men to go at nights but to the meetings the tents were crammed till no more could enter. They had no piano but the old songs rung out across the camp ground and the men had a great time. Chaplains and Salvation Army men made these camps their headquarters, and many groups of men were doing personal work. Men accepted the invitations to meetings every time they were extended and they had splendid gatherings with hundreds of decisions. The men were easy to approach and seemed to welcome any opportunities of gaining information in regard to the way to Salvation.

The Toronto Young Men's Christian Association is co-operating with the National Council in support of the Association secretaries at the front and they require financial assistance. Contributions may be sent to G. A. Warburton, general secretary, 36 College Street, Toronto, or John A. Tory, chairman.

Since the above letter was written by Captain Pearson he has been moved to Northern France.

Three $25 subscriptions together with a number of smaller contributions have been made in Peterborough to support the Y.M.C.A. work among the troops. Other contributions may be handed in at the office of the local Y.M.C.A.

FIGHT IS HOT AROUND YPRES

Bloody and Determined Fighting for Possession of St. Eloi

DEAD SERVED AS BARRICADES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROTTERDAM, March 17. — German wounded arriving at Bruges declare that desperate fighting continues southwest of Ypres. The fight for St. Eloi was bloody and determined. Every cottage was a fort and every corner a death trap. Dead were piled so high in the sterets that they served as barricades for the living.

The Germans, strongly reinforced by fresh troops from Bruges, converged in great strength on St. Eloi. The British fought stubbornly against heavy odds, and being well supported by artillery, mowed the Germans down in swathes, but the weight of numbers prevailed. The British fell backk to the protection of small canals, but, reinforced in their turn flung themselves upon St. Eloi, carrying it at the point of the bayonet. The slaughter was terrible.

The Germans again summoned more reinforcements from nearby villages and for two days the battle raged around St. Eloi hill.

LONDON, March 17. — Official announcement was made today that the British steamers Atlanta and Fingal have been torpedoed. They are small ships.

The British steamer Atlanta, 519 tons, of Glasgow, was torpedoed by a German submarine off Inishturk, on the west coast of County Galway, Ireland, about noon on March 14th. The crew was landed on Inishturk Island and the vessel is now in the harbor.

The British steamer Fingal, of Leith, Scotland, was torpedoed and sunk at 10.50 a.m. an March 15th off the Northumberland coast. Twenty-one members of the crew were landed at North Shields, but six lives are reported lost, includng the chief mate and the stewardess.

North Shields, March 17. — Survivors of the Fingal, were landed here today. Casualties on board were due to the fact that the vessel went down before the starboard could be freed. The Fingal as she sunk, dragged this boat under with her, leaving the occupants, including the captain, struggling in the water. A port boat picked up the captain and several others but six men lost their lives. The Fingal was proceeding in a northerly direction with fine weather when she was struck by a German torpedo. She at once began to settle and went down quickly.

QUEEN'S CANADIAN MILITARY HOSPITAL

At a patriotic tea held by the ladies at the Temperance Hall, Fourth Line, Smith, the sum of $48 was raised for the Shorncliffe Hospital, and remitted to the Peterborough Progressive Club, who yesterday sent a money order for this amount to Dr. Donald Armour, Shorncliffe Hospital, Kent, England.

This generous contribution was much appreciated, and will prove most useful in providing comforts for the wounded Canadian soldiers, who are being treated at Shorncliffe.

CHEQUE ARTIST UNDER ARREST

Man Who Operated Here is Landed at Port Arthur

Trading on the uniform of a lieutenant to ply his business, a young man who swindled several George street merchants out of various sums of money, has fallen into the hands of the police at Port Arthur, and is being held there. He operated in several Canadian cities besides Peterborough, and Chief Thompson, upon being apprised of his operations here, sent out circulars describing his appearance.

It appears that his mode of operating was to tender cheques, usually drawn on the Bank of Commerce, to merchants in payment of purchases, but these cheques, upon being presented for redemption, proved worthless. By this plan he stung merchants on George streets for amount ranging from ten dollars down. Among those unfortunate enough to be victimized were E. V. Warne, Thomas Barrie, Trebilcock Bros., and Jordan Bros.

The young lieutenant travelled under various aliases, some of which were James C. Gillespie, Harry F. Finly, Harry R. Ferguson, Harry Kirby, William McKenzie, and Wm. C. Marsden.

He registered at the Empress Hotel in Peterborough during his stay. Most of the swindling was carried on Saturday night here, and before the parties who had suffered reported their losses to the police the bogus lieutenant had left for other fields. He was a conspicuous figure on the streets, cutting quite a dashing appearance in his full khaki uniform, and looked quite prosperous and intelligent.

Just what his real name is was not determined. He is believed to be a native of Montreal, where he was arrested some time ago for forging cheques and sent to jail. In August he was given a three months' term in Calgary for obtaining goods under false pretenses.

Chief Thompson received a letter from the Montreal department in reply to his circular, to the effect that the Montreal chief constable had already received notice from places in this vicinity in reference to the man. He will be tried in Port Arthur, and afterwards may be brought to Peterborough to stand trial for his swindling operations here, if proven to be the same party.

FAILED TO PASS THE MEDICAL EXAMINATION

Four Battery Recruits Have Returned From Kingston

Four disappointed battery recruits returned from Kingston last night, they having failed to pass the medical examination, although they got through on the examination here.

Company Sergt. Major Wilford who is expected to be back to assume the duties of Capt. Spencer during his absence has not arrived yet. Lt. Cameron is in charge.

Recruiting is going on rather slowly this last few days. Eight battery men are awaiting orders to go to Kingston. Men of the 39th Battalion with experience in batteries are being transferred to the 26th.

Sergt. Battley, the two Ptes. Leal, and Pte. Rogers. 21st Battalion, 4th Brigade, of the Second Sontingent forces, encamped at Kingston, are home for a few days. Pte. Rogers informs the Review that everything is running along smoothly at Kingston. The food still continues to be "plain but substantial."

ARTILLERY FIRE ON BRITISH FRONT

Enemy is Unsuccessful in Counter Attack on Trenches

IMPORTANT POSITION OCCUPIED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 17. — (Afternoon official statement.) — "On the Yser, the Belgian army has made fresh progress and has repelled German counter attacks.

"On the British front there has been violent artillery firing.

"To the north of Arras, the enemy unsuccessfully attempted late in the afternoon to deliver another counter attack on trenches on a spur of the Hill of Notre Dame De Lorette.

"Soissons and Rheims again were bombarded, two shells striking Rheims cathedral.

"In the Champagne, north of LeMesnil and west of Hill 196, we have taken posession, along a front of some 500 metres, of an important eminence held by the enemy.

"In the Argonne, several German counter attacks between Rolane and Four de Paris have been repulsed.

"There has been an artillery duel in the Woevre district. One of our aviators dropped bombs on the barracks at Colmar."

STATEMENT FROM GERMAN WAR OFFICE.

BERLIN, March 17.—The German war office today gave out an official report on the progress of the war, dated March 17th, and reading as follows:

"The contest for the possession of an eminence on the southern slope of Lorette heights to the northwest of Arras, has been decided in favor of the Germans.

"In the Champagne district, to the west of Perthes and north north of Leaminl, the French yesterday delivered several unsuccessful attacks.

"North of LeMesnil, attacks were renewed with stronger forces, and engagements still continue.

"In the Argonne, fighting has not yet come to an end. The French forces have been driven back from the slope to the southwest of Vauquois, occupied by them.

"Two French attacks in Le Pretre forest, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, resulted in failure.

"In the Vosges there has been nothing more than artillery duels.

"Russian advances against Tauroggen, in Kovno Province, Russia, northeast of Tilsit and Laugszargen, in East Prussia, just across the border from Tauroggen, have been repulsed."

ALL UP WITH BRITAIN, GERMANS THINK.

LONDON, March 17.— The Daily Chronicle says that in spite of the insignificant results of Germany's submarine blockade, German public opinion still entertains the belief that the "Inviolable Albion" is shorn of her bulwarks and that Germany's ring of steel is surely robbing her of her naval supremacy.

The Tagliche Rundschau says: "The old bragging and boasting has ceased and terror has fallen upon the British. German submarines have encircled their ports, ships bearing food and drink to England have been sent to the bottom of the sea, and an iron girdle has been forged around the 'Inviolable Isle' which will crush the breath out of her."

LOOK FOR EARLY CAPTURE OF PRZEMYSL.

LONDON, March 17. — A Reuter correspondent in Petrograd wires that the capture of Przemysl is considered a matter of only a few days.

TO TAKE CHARGE OF MILITARY HOSPITAL AT KINGSTON

Miss Gertrude Reid of this city, lately connected with the Nicholls Hospital, is leaving tomorrow to assume complete control of the military hospital at Kingston, Ont. The position is an important and responsible one but Miss Reid possesses the necessary qualifications to enable her to successfully discharge the duties of the office.

In November Miss Reid took a course in the military training hospitay at Quebec. Her many friends in this city will extend to her best wishes for success in her new field.

Rev. Crozier Magee, curate of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, has resigned.

INDIGENT PATIENTS AT THE HOSPITAL

At the Finance Committee meeting yesterday afternoon a motion of Mayor Buller's carried whereby the Medical Health Officer will visit the indigent patients at the hospitals at least once a month with a view to being able to pronounce some of the patients sufficiently convalescent to return to their homes or to be removed to some other institution where the cost would not be so great. His Worship thought that if "business was bad" in the hospitals they might keep indigent patients a little longer than was really necesasry.

EQUAL GRANT FOR THE TWO CITY BANDS

$725 to be Divided Between 57th and Temple Bands

CITY IS FINED $25

The Finance Committee met yesterday afternoon and received two letters, one from the Salvation Army Band, asking that the grants to the two bands (57th Regimental Band and Salvation Army Band) be equal, and another from the 57th Regimental Band asking for the usual grant. Last year the Salvation Army received $225 and the 57th Regimental Band $500. Mayor Buller thought that the Salvation Army is doing excellent work in the city, but the 57th Band is the citizens' band and should receive a larger grant. He wisher to have the one band as the city's band. Other bands are being organized, and the new bands have as much right to ask for a grant equal to that of the Salvation Army. A short discussion followed, and the Mayor finally thought that the Army band should be given a small increase. In accordance with this, he moved that the grant to the 57th Regimental Band be $500 and the grant to the Army Band be $300. It was seconded by Ald. McIntyre. It was moved by Ald. Duffus and Green that the amount of the two grants, $725, be divided equally. The vote was a tie, and Ald. Stratton cast his vote in favor of Ald. Duffus' motion.

A Fine of $25.

City Solicitor Gordon presented the account in connection with the passing of the Peterborough Private Bill. It amounted to $173.92, and of this $100 had been paid. The remainder was partially made up of $25 which the city was fined for noncompliance with the rules by which the bills should be filed before the opening of the session. The matter was laid over till the city solicitor explains it more thoroughly.

Letter of Thanks From Miss Arnoldi

The following interesting letter has been received by Mrs. Neill, of the Peterborough Branch of the Women's Art Association, from Miss Arnoldi of the Canadian Field Comforts Commission:—

The Vicarage,
Amestury, Wilas,
January 7th, 1915.

Dear Miss Neill—Please accept our hearty thanks for the generous cheque sent us by the Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association. We are very glad to see the fund grow, for the men do now need many things, and as time goes on the need will grow. They have had a great deal of discomfort and have borne it all so cheerily and uncomplainingly. Things are worse at the present moment and we are having awful floods, and more than half the country is under water. One of our poor fellows was drowned the other night. The flood is very strong and in some places and I hear he got caught under a tree trunk. The continuous mud and wet has caused much illness. It is very hard for men to die in bed before they have had a chance to fight for the cause they have so bravely espoused.

I am glad to say that a goodly number of the men are now being billetted, as they should all have been from the first. The poor horses have suffered sadly, and I am thankful that they are now getting some shelter. Will you convey our best thanks to your Association for their generosity. I hope if they are able to, they will help our work again later on.

With best wishes for the New Year,
Yours sincerely,
JOAN L. ARNOLDI,
C.F.C.C.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 17, 1915

BIG EVENTS ARE COMING.

THE NEWS from the seat of war has been, during the last few days, more interesting than usual. The offensive of the British forces in the vicinity of Neufe Chapelle, in which the Canadian forces participated with credit, indicates the beginning of a British drive, in the success of which the whole Empire is vitally interested. It points to the conclusion that Britain has placed an immense army in Belgium and Northern France for the spring campaign. The casualities from now on will likely be large, and many Canadian young men who are now serving in the battle lines will likely "go west," as the soldiers euphemistically speak of those who have died for the cause of liberty and honour. Germany has still very large armies with which to fight her battles, and some very hard fighting will very likely be taking place in the near future. It will mean a big cost in human lives, but the sooner the Germans are defeated and driven back the sooner will militarism be broken and the war ended.

The operations in the Dardanelles also point to the same deductions. Slowly, but steadily, the allied fleet is pounding its way through, and the fall of Constantinople may be expected in a short time, probably in a month or six weeks. What that will mean to the war is hard to say, but it appears that it will mean the entrance of Bulgaria and probably Greece on the side of the allies and the shipping of supplies to and from Russia via the Black Sea. In that way Germany will be attacked on the eastern frontier and through Austria. The sinking of the Dresden removes another of her cruisers, so that Germany, on the sea, has become more impotent than ever. The stoppage of food and other supplies going into Germany also renders her condition still more precarious, while Russia is still bringing up and equipping huge armies on the northern and eastern frontiers of Germany.

The outlook for Germany is anything but bright. Slowly, but surely, the allied powers are drawing in upon her and her allies from all sides; and, in view of the forces against her, it is difficult to see, in spite of her great military machine, how she can do aught but hold off for a time the calamity of ultimate defeat.

The indications are that some of the greatest events in the world's history are about to take place, and in those events Canada looks forward to the part she is taking with confidence and pride.

BOURASSA AGAIN.

THE EDITOR of Le Devoir, which is the mouthpiece of French Canadian nationalism, has made the following declaration in his newspaper:

"You have no faint idea of the amount and nature of graft, corruption and debauchery connected with that contingent destined to go and fight the battles of honour and liberty. Had we published one-twentieth portion of what came to us from most reliable sources of information, we would have been hanged and quartered many days ago. Whether this will ever come out in full light is doubtful. The Tory grafters were careful enough to take some of their Liberal opponents in partnership, so that nothing would transpire in Parliament"?

This statement was brought to the attention of the House of Commons by a question of Mr. Papineau. This is the kind of stuff that is being circulated freely among the French of Quebec, yet the Premier and others in that province had the boldness to make an appeal to the generosity of the people of Ontario! If Quebec would not tolerate such disloyal and untrue statements as this and many others that have been made by people in that province there would be more consistency in what they ask. It is gratifying to note, however, that [illegible] Quebec is not of the Bourassa persuasion, but, at the same time, there is no telling how much influence such a journal as Le Devoir has on a simple, peace-loving, hard working, French-Canadian community. The point is that the harm is being done and no means are being taken to stop it.

PUBLIC WORKS.

IN SPITE OF the attack on the Government by the Opposition for resolving to carry on public works so far as possible, it is well to bear in mind that this does not mean that public works can be carried on as if the country were not at war. On account of the war, Canada is this year sixty million dollars behind. The deficit estimated for next year is no less than eighty millions of dollars. In the face of these facts, we must suppress any selfish longing that we may have in favour of a love for our common country. We must do all we can to help out the unemployed, but the tremendous expenditure required to keep 100,000 soldiers fully equipped in the field is something we must also keep in mind.

A GENERAL ELECTION.

AS STATED by one of the Conservative leaders in the House of Commons the other day, elections are a nuisance, especially to a party in power. It would seem, from the manner in which the Opposition is now demanding an election, that it considers that it was being fooled by the Government, which, notwithstanding its apparent anxiety, did not really intend to have an election. No sooner did it become clear that 46 of a majority was enough, and that the French question could never be worse for Borden than at present, than the Liberal strategists, including Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his want of confidence amendment, decided to force an election. There is no doubt of Sir Robert Borden's return, but thereby hangs a tale. Sir Wilfrid's change of front is due beyond all doubt to those high in authority in Quebec, who demand a favourable and immediate settlement of the French language question. This is the real secret of the rumors We agree largely with the following statement of Hon. W. S. Fielding in his newspaper, the Montreal Journal of ommerce:

"Some of the Ottawa correspondents seem determined that there shall be a general election soon, and have fixed upon June as the time that it is to take place. There are, apparently, on both sides of the House of Commons, men who are anxious to bring the fight on. It is safe to say, however, that the business interests of the country have no sympathy with them."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A YEAR AGO or more, in the question of a police woman for Peterborough, the morals of this city received some attention. While a police woman was not obtained, the object was supposed to be effected by the arrangement made. The record since that time is not encouraging. Detectives have been watching those rooms on Water street for weeks with no results. Helen Brown died from a criminal operation. Dr. Brown is dead. The mayor, the police commissioners, the police are all standing pat—saying nothing can be done and that immorality can't be checked. It might be the best thing possible for this city if its government were entirely turned over to the women. The record is no howling success for the men to make a noise about.

WE DESIRE to call attention to a Letter to the Editor, dealing with the Helen Brown case. The way the public are talking about this case is a matter of concern to the authorities. The voice of the people should make itself heard, and we trust others will express their opinion over their names, if possible.

THE REVIEW has just received a copy of the diplomatic correspondence respecting the war that was published by the French Government. This has been presented to the Imperial House of Commons, and is a well arranged volume of very important matter regarding the Great War.

The Canadian Oil Bubble.

Recent quotations for Calgary, Canada, oil securities reveal the extent of the collapse of one of the wildest booms ever witnessed. Seldom has there been more frenzied speculation than was seen in the Calgary district during last summer, following the discovery of a very light quality of oil in one well, called the Dingman well. The land offices in that territory were rushed beyond all precedent, hundreds waiting in line practically all night in some cases in order to file claims, and the rapid appearance of countless oil securities resulted in the opening-up of a new oil exchange at Calgary.

The following comparisons of quotations tell the story of the collapse: Monarch Oil, $9.50 high, now 55 cents; United $11 high, now $1.75; Southern Alberta, $8.25 high, now 90 cents; Prudential, $1 high, now 18 cents; Federal, 50 cents high, now four cents; Segur Oil, $2 high, now two cents.

Can't Have It Both Ways.

(London Daily Mail.)

Sir Edward Grey emphasizes the fact that the laws of war stand or fall as a whole. Germany cannot break such laws as affect her unfavourably and call upon the Allies to observe those which inure to her convenience. Nor can she "have it both ways." She professes to regard every town and village of the British east coast as a fortified place. But if she does this, she must not ask Great Britain to regard Hamburg as an open town. The point is important because under the Declaration of London, to which German diplomatists have appealed, food cargoes for an open port are not liable to seizure, and by this doctrine the Wilheimina's cargo might be permitted to pass.

Wit and Wisdom, too.

(Exchange.)

Father Bernard Vaughan has always been very enthusiastic about the British army, a fact which once caused him to make a good joke. A few years ago a militant suffragette rushed at him and shrieked out: "Tell Bobs the army will never be right till you give women more liberty!" "Tell mothers," replied Father Vaughan, quickly, "that the army will never be right till they give us more infant-ry!"

LET THE CITIZENS ACT.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—In Monday's issue you say regarding the Helen Brown case, "The matter remains with the citizens of Peterborough to say whether this case should be investigated or dropped."

Now is the time for citizens to act or forever hold their peace regarding the immorality of this city.

What are the Ministerial Association and the Women's Council doing about the matter? These organizations are supposed to have the moral welfare of the city at heart. It is true we have heard words from the pulpit, but the present situation calls for more than words—it calls for action—on the part of the clergy.

It has been the custom for the executive of the Womens Council to publish censorial remarks on matters which did not meet with their approval. Why are they silent on this vital matter?

The aforementioned organizations should lead in forcing an investigation of this affair.

Is there a procuress in the case? If so, who is she? Who are the men who frequented the resort referred to? Should not their names be published? The names of POOR offenders always ARE published.

A parallel case (without a tragedy) occurred recently in a western town. The authorities refused to act, so the local W.C.T.U. took the matter up and went systematically to work. The procuress had gone before the council with a petition signed by citizens, asking that she be allowed to carry on her business The W.C.T.U. succeeded in making public the names signed to the petition among which were prominent business and professional men. The result was that the woman in question was obliged to leave town. The people were sadder and wiser regarding some citizens whose morality and piety had hitherto passed unquestioned.

In the report of a recent sermon by a local clergyman dealing with the Helen Brown case we read "It is a relief to know that the pulpits, at least, contain men with enough tincture of iron in their make-up to dare to call a spade a spade." We would be glad to believe this but we must first have more convincing evidence of the fact. Two years ago, under similar circumstances the clergy had an opportunity to prove the presence of this metal in their blood when under threats of law suits by interested parties. Only one clergyman had enough "tincture of iron in his make-up" to stand out and call the bluff. He was supported by only one of the members of the Ministerial Association and neither of these was the man who now mentions "tincture of iron." What suppressed his tincture of iron two years ago?

The present circumstances afford the Ministerial Association another opportunity to prove their sincerity. Will they act?

Innocent parties whose names are connected with this affair should make an effort to prove their innocence by helping along the work of investigation.

You, Mr. Editor, have done your duty. The Review is on record for outspoken denunciation of wickedness, and we are grateful.

The recent shocking tragedy in Toronto and this in our own city show where and among what class of people investigation should begin.

Should investigation of the present case be frustrated, the good work of The Review will focus attention on the parties who are responsible for the present state of immorality and its continuance.

EXPERIENCE.

USE OF OIL ON STREETS.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—It would be interesting to know the inducements that are being used by the oil companies to hypnotize the Council into using oil on the city streets, not experimenting, for this treatment of our city streets has long since passed the experimental stage, much to the sorrow of the poor taxpayer, who was unfortunate enough to have the use the streets for auto or bicycle.

Oil, it is well known, is a solvent of rubber, and the better the quality of the oil the quicker the damage is done, and, moreover, past experiments have conclusively proved that the sandy nature of the roads in this district is not suitable for the oil treatment, to say nothing of the damage done to clothing, rugs, etc., and in addition to all this we have learned that oil does not even lay the dust, and that oil-soaked dust is far more objectionable than the ordinary every day unadulterated variety with which we are so familiar.

The $20,000 just discovered in the treasury should be put aside to help pay some of the interest on the extra debt that will be incurred by the city due to actions for damaged auto tires when the roads are oiled.

If the Council must buy oil, why not use it to soak their heads in. Oil is always used for machinery run by wheels, and who can say what good effect it might have in making the wheels of justice start to turn? Judging from late events, they are badly clogged up. Some would even go so far as to say the wheels of justice are running backwards and that the goddess has become so discriminating of late that the bandage has fallen off one eye.

Humor and Philosophy

WORKING IT OUT.

FACTS are very stubborn things.
Though we try to pull the strings
That will bend them to our will,
They are facts, not fancies, still.

We may warp them just a bit
So they will our purpose fit,
But they slip back in their tracks
When we get right down to tacks.

If they were but thus and so
We might stand a better show
And could make things come our way
In the game we try to play.

But they do not budge an inch,
Though we stretch them at a pinch.
They recoil within our hand
Like a fragile rubber band.

It is very sad indeed,
Though some other facts we need.
There they stand through thick and thin
With a most annoying grin.

And it useless is to kick
On a hard, unfeeling brick
Or to claim that east is west
If that suits our purpose best.

We must look them in the face,
Though they do not suit our case
And may cause our props to fall.
They are there, and that is all.

Finer Grade.

A smooth spoken gent dropped into a quiet village from nowhere, but as he slung around such a lovely line of conversation nobody asked for references. Soon he was running the band and the baseball team and leading a class in Sunday school.

Everybody said, "He is a brick."

Some months later he departed with a neat roll stowed away in his jeans. The villagers had for theirs a nobby lot of stock, that was beautifully engraved, in a rubber plantation. The months came and went. The sun rose, cavorted across the sky and set many times, but the promised dividends never came. But still they were loyal. They rose up as a man and reaffirmed their belief in him, only putting it stronger.

"He is a gold brick," was what they said.

Waiting Their Turn.

"They tell me that in some restaurants they serve rabbit for chicken."

"That is true."

"And squirrel for rabbit."

"Very likely."

"And what is the substitute for squirrel?"

"There is none. But never fear but something will be found should they become popular as an article of diet."

Place of Honor.

"I suppose you are the head of your own house?"

"You bet! I am president of the matrimonial firm."

"And your wife?"

"Huh! She's only the cashier."

Insurmountable Objection.

"How do you like your new boss?"

"All right but for one thing."

"What's that?"

"He is the boss."

Both Rich.

"What are you making?"

"Failures. What are you?"

"Same thing."

Difference In Feeling.

"When I grow up to be a man,"
Said little Willie Jones,
"I'm going to be a president.
I feel it in my bones."

"When you grow up to be a man,"
Said little Tommy Brown,
"I think I feel it in my bones
That they will turn you down."

Old Reliable.

For, though he's broke, I know that he
Can always raise the dust.

The Mystery of The Pelican

A Story of The Sea During Wartime

By F. A. MITCHEL.

On the 3d of October, 1914, the ship Julia Gowan sailed from New York for Genoa, Italy. She was an English bottom, owned by Americans and converted after the great European war broke out to a United States vessel. She carried a cargo of copper. Whether it was intended for Italy or was to be forwarded to a country engaged in war I never knew, but I did know that copper was in great demand for the manufacture of ammunition. And I further knew that, although we were sailing under the stars and stripes, our captain was constantly on the lookout for war vessels, though I am not sure whether at that time copper had been declared contraband of war.

We steered a course south of that usually taken by ships bound for the Mediterranean in order to take as little risk as possible. There are few vessels to be met with on that part of the world's waters, and we did not speak a ship till we were in longitude 32 degrees 40 minutes west, latitude 28 degrees 20 minutes north, and then we spoke a vessel we came upon because she had been abandoned.

She was a small steamer of about 800 tons. Our captain, after satisfying himself that he could get no reply to signals, sent me aboard of her with a dozen men to examine her and report. I found her in good order, but the only living thing aboard was a dog. He was dying of hunger, but I considered that he could not have been left there very long or he would doubtless have died, for I could not find any indications that food had been left for him.

I went below to have a look at the cargo and found the hold full of rifles. The machinery seemed to be in good working order, and there was a trace of fire left in the furnace. The only thing wanting was the lifeboats. I saw no reason why she should not be taken into port as a prize. I signaled the captain, telling him what I had found, and he came aboard to have a look at the ship and cargo himself.

We concluded that the vessel had sighted a man of war and that the crew, expecting capture, had concluded to get away themselves. There were several ways by which they might have escaped—in a fog or by boarding a faster vessel than the pursuer. The absence of the ship's boats tended to confirm this theory.

The captain concluded to try to get the vessel into port as a prize. If she could be taken to Europe her cargo would be very valuable, but of course there was danger of capture by war vessels, for there was no doubt that a cargo of rifles was contraband of war. Anyway, the captain directed me to remain aboard with the men I had with me, including an engineer that he would send me, and ordered me to try to get the ship to either a Spanish or a Portuguese port. If I could get far enough north to reach the western coast of France, better still, but he advised me not to try for France unless I was chased and saw a chance to escape in that direction.

Since there was fuel for power and food for a prize crew there was nothing to be sent me except the engineer. Soon after his arrival the fires were relighted, and, steam having been generated, we parted with the Gowan, because I took a more northern course, and the next morning she was out of sight.

I found that our prize—her name was the Pelican—was a faster ship than might have been expected from her size. She could do fifteen knots an hour. There were flags of all nations aboard, which was not surprising, considering that she was carrying a contraband cargo. Indeed, there was every indication that she had been taking big risks.

One unexpected discovery was made—there had been a woman aboard. We found in a stateroom we supposed to have been intended for the captain a lot of feminine paraphernalia. Thinking that in this room I might find something that would throw light on the case, I made a careful search. I found nothing except a crumpled bit of writing paper on which had been written in a woman's hand:

> Father—Why am I locked in my room? I am frightfully worried about you. Something must have happened. I will try to get this to you, but I don't know how.
> HELEN.

There was just enough in this to be tantalizing. Who was "father?" And who was Helen? She had evidently not been able to send her message and had crumpled it and thrown it into one of the drawers.

I would have proceeded at once to look for further evidence, but at the time I discovered this message I was called on deck by the watch, who had sighted a line of smoke on the starboard quarter. I kept on the same course till the steamer came near enough for me to see with a glass that she was a cruiser, though she displayed no flag; then I put the ship due north, which would place the cruiser astern. She was evidently coming for me, for she increased rapidly in size. I put on all steam, but the cruiser must have been making from three to six knots more than I, since she drew up on me rapidly. It did not matter much what was her nationality, for if she caught us she would take our cargo. If she were a neutral and we could prove ourselves neutral we would not be liable to seizure, but unfortunately for us we had no papers at all.

It was about 5 o'clock in the evening when we discovered the cruiser, and by the time it fell dark she had approached within five or six miles of us. I ordered every light put out, but she brought a searchlight to bear on us and immediately after fired a gun after us. Then a friendly fog came along and threw a mantle about us that not even a searchlight could penetrate. The cruiser lost us and did not find us again.

The next day one of the crew came to me and reported that the men were in great fear that the ship was haunted. Moans had been heard. I sent for the man who had heard them and ordered him to take me to the part of the ship from whence they seemed to have emanated. He led me on to a lower deck, where there were a few staterooms. I opened several of them, but found nothing. Then suddenly a sound of some one crying came from one of the others. I opened two doors before I located the sound. Then, trying a third, I found it locked.

I knocked, but my doing so only seemed to increase the sobbing within.

"We are friends," I said, "and wish to serve you."

"Then why have you locked me in here and left me without food or drink?"

The voice was that of a woman. I told her that if she would open the door I would explain certain matters to her of which she might be ignorant. She replied that she could not open the door, for she had not the key, whereupon I decided that if she could not open it I would.

"Look out!" I cried. "I'm going to break down the door!" Then, drawing back, I put my heel against it, and it flew open.

Inside was a girl about nineteen years old. She was dressed, but had got into a berth to avoid the opening door. Crouching back, she was evidently uncertain whether we were friends or coming to do her harm. She was very pale and weak, and I saw at once that she was starving. Before questioning her I sent for food, of which I gave her sparingly. Then I carried her up to the stateroom where I had found women's clothing.

She told me that this had been her room and she had been taken from it by several members of the crew to the one in which I had found her.

As soon as the girl was able to talk, fully expecting that the mystery of the Pelican was about to be solved, I asked for her story. I was doomed to disappointment. She knew very little more than I did. Her father was or had been master of the Pelican. He had sailed from a small port in the States. He had told his daughter before sailing that she might go on a trip with him, but nothing more. One morning when she had tried to leave her stateroom she found the door locked. The same evening she had been taken to the room in which I found her and was confined there. A supper had been given her and the next morning a breakfast. That was all she knew. She was much surprised to learn that the ship had been deserted and greatly feared for her father's safety, for she was sure that, if free to act, he would not have left her to perish.

I cross questioned Miss Bradford—Helen Bradford was her name—hoping to get some clew that would enable me at least to form a theory which would solve the mystery. I got nothing. She did not even know that the cargo consisted of rifles. She was aware that a great war was being fought, and her father had told her that the ship was liable to be overhauled by a cruiser and searched, but whatever happened she would be in no danger. The only incident she mentioned bearing on the case was that the porthole in her stateroom had been darkened at night.

Our voyage proved an exciting one, chased as we were on several occasions by cruisers. We always showed a neutral flag and at the same time a clean pair of heels. The worst of it was that we were driven off our course several times, and thus kept wandering about in the Atlantic ocean. On one occasion, being chased by a gunboat, we would have been taken were it not for the fact that we could do about a knot more than she.

I spent whatever time I could spare in trying to comfort Helen Bradford, and since pity is akin to love, I may have been in love without knowing it. I certainly had enough on my mind to keep me from anything sentimental. I found out afterward the nature of my feelings for the girl I had been instrumental in rescuing.

During a spell of bad weather we lost our reckoning, and one still morning, enveloped in a fog, we went ashore on the coast of Morocco. We had various visitors, among them an Italian trader, to whom I confided the secret of my cargo. He proved wealthy enough to buy it and paid me in gold. I went ashore with Miss Bradford and the crew, and the next night a storm made kindling wood of the Pelican. I married Miss Bradford, and we returned to America. I constituted myself a court of admiralty and divided the price for the Pelican's cargo as I considered just, my wife getting the principal part. We have not as yet heard from her father, and the mystery of the Pelican is still unsolved. My theory is that the crew mutinied; that, being chased by a cruiser, they left the ship in the ship's boats, taking the captain a prisoner with them. His daughter may have been left in the hurry of departure.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Worry and Adrenalin.

Every time we are excited, every time we worry a reflex action is sent to the adrenals, which causes a pouring into the system of adrenalin, the latter increasing the heart action and the arterial tension. This fact explains why worry and excitement so often lead to arteriosclerosis, heart disease and nephritis.—Dr. Edmund M. Pond, Surgeon to Rockland Hospital, Before Vermont Dental Society.

World's Largest Armory.

The largest armory in the world, it is asserted, is now being built in New York city for the Eighth coast artillery at Kingsbridge road and Jerome avenue. It will extend for 375 feet on Jerome avenue and 600 feet on Kingsbridge road, covering an area equal to ninety city lots, and its superstructure requires 8,000 tons of steel. The roof arches have the greatest span of any in the world. Only one building, one of those at the Chicago exposition, ever had a greater, and this has since been destroyed.

Oatmeal For the Skin.

Never wash the face just before going out into the fresh air or just after coming in. Nothing is more injurious to the skin. Washing the face with oatmeal takes off the greasy look and leaves the skin like velvet. A few drops of ammonia in the water with which the face is bathed is also excellent for an oily skin and gives a fresh coloring by bringing the blood to the surface. If the skin has already too much color borax should be used in place of the ammonia.

When the face is constantly pale bathe it in cold water, rub briskly with a soft towel and apply daily the following preparation: Two ounces of glycerin, one ounce of diluted liquid ammonia and four ounces of water. Rub well into the skin, then wipe carefully. If any irritation is felt the glycerin should be increased.

The following lotion will be found the most satisfactory and the least harmful of any of the preparations for softening and whitening the skin: Boil two tablespoonfuls of fine oatmeal in sufficient soft water to make a thin gruel and strain carefully. When cool add a lemon with a dessertspoonful of wine. Keep on the toilet table, making a fresh supply once in about ten days. Bathe the face with this every night before retiring. Do not wipe entirely off, but leave the skin a little damp. In the morning wash in tepid water and oatmeal in the proportion of a tablespoonful of oatmeal to a quart of water. Dry the face thoroughly and put on thinly a little cold cream.

Care of the Face.

Daily attention to the face is the price of beauty. With the tips of the fingers massage the forehead from temple to temple with a rotary motion, then glide down to the chin and work upward from the chin close to the side of the nose to the eyes. Glide down again, each time a little further back, and repeat the motion until the face has been covered. Next work under the eyes with the middle finger from the nose outward to the corners of the eyes. Remember that the movement should be rotary and always up and out toward the ears.

A good cleansing cream should be used on the face at least once a day. Water and soap do not remove the dust sufficiently well. Such a cream may be made as follows: Take and combine oil of sweet almonds, four ounces; white vaseline, one ounce; white wax, one ounce, and extract of violets, ten drops.

To prepare an excellent massage cream take oil of sweet almonds, three ounces; lanoline, one ounce; cucumber juice, two drams, white wax, two drams; spermaceti, two drams; tincture of benzoin, thirty drops, and oil of rose, ten drops.

Mechanical massage will reduce a double chin.

Lemon Juice as a Beautifier.

To bleach the skin and nails of sunburn, to refine coarse pores and soften the skin, lemon juice is invaluable. Where the juice is too astringent, as is the case where the skin is very sensitive, add a little glycerin, rosewater or witch hazel. See that the proportions are not over one-third strength.

Dip the finger tips in the juice and rub over the hands, or take a bit of absorbent cotton, allowing it to dry on for five minutes; then wash off in warm water and a soap containing a bleaching astringent, such as elderflower, benzoin, boric acid or similar specifics.

Direct application of the lemon juice is more effective. Do not remove all the juice. Slice the four sides of the lemon so that it lays flat and readily reaches all crevices in the nails. When the wrists or arms are also in need of renovation apply the same treatment there, otherwise a ring of tan is sure to show.

Hollows Under the Eyes.

Hollows under the eyes can be filled out by correct massage. Apply a good skin food, place the first finger on the eyelid close to the nose, move halfway to the ear, coming back under the eye to the starting point. This is an effective treatment for crow's feet, since it irons them flat and smooths the grooved cuticle.

Sluggish circulation, general malnutrition of the body, worry, loss of sleep and a rundown constitution will bring hollows under the eyes. Therefore put yourself on a rational diet, rest all you can, exercise out of doors every day and take a refreshing bath every morning.

Eyebrow Tonic.

A good tonic for the eyebrows is made with two ounces of red vaseline, one dram of tincture of cantharides, fifteen drops of oil of lavender, fifteen drops of the oil of rosemary. Apply night and morning with a tiny brush. This can also be used on the eyelashes, but must not be allowed to get in the eyes, since any oily preparation will inflame them.

For a Tall or Short Woman.

The tall woman may lessen her height with tucks; the short woman may lengthen hers with plaits.

THE RED CROSS

The Red Cross owes its real origin to the great and terrible campaign of 1859, when Napoleon made it his boast that he would free Italy "from the Alps to the Adriatic." At the great battle of Magenta 10,000 Austrians and some 5,000 French soldiers were left dead and dying on the fields.

A Swiss gentleman, named M. Henri Dunant, made a pilgrimage to that battlefield and was an involuntary eyewitness of the awful carnage of the battle of Solferino, a battle which lasted some sixteen hours and left some 30,000 dead and wounded. Henri Dunant realized that the medical service of what was probably the greatest army in the world was absolutely inadequate to cope with the casualties, and he was at once compelled to take some action to rectify the matter.

The result was that he wrote a small book for private circulation, entitled "Un Souvenir de Solferino," and this, with his private appeal, resulted in Napoleon III. commanding Dunant to his presence, where, with the great Marshal MacMahon, they seriously talked matters over.

The result of this was a conference of the powers, called together by the Swiss federal government, at which Henri Dunant placed his proposals. Out of this Geneva conference of 1864 resulted the Geneva convention, under which all medical supplies and personnel in war time are protected.

A Prehistoric Lake.

One of the most interesting remnants of a prehistoric lake in the United States is that now known as Estancia valley, which lies south of Santa Fe and east of Albuquerque, N. M. From examination of the deposits in this section geologists are of the opinion that this lake existed at the same time as Lake Bonneville, in Utah, and other ancient lakes of the arid west during the cold, humid glacial period. The theory of the existence of an ancient lake in the valley is based on the presence of shore features and lake sediments. Sea cliffs, terraces, beaches, beach ridges, spits and bars are found on all sides of the lake flat at altitudes between 6,100 and 6,200 feet above sea level.—Argonaut.

Modern Uhlans.

The uhlans are a distinctive corps. The name is by no means distinctly German. A body of uhlans was formed for the French army by Marshal Saxe. They were introduced into the Prussian service in 1740, and forty years later the Austrians also had a corps of uhlans—light cavalry armed with lance. The modern uhlan may be classed with the heavy cavalry.—London Opinion.

Unanimous View.

A popular novelist was talking in Chicago about genius.

"There are a hundred different opinions as to what a genius is," said he, "but all authorities are agreed that it's absolutely unsafe to lend him money."—Chicago Herald.

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890 to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

APPROPRIATION OF $2900 ASKED FOR

At last night's meeting of the Property Committee the estimates for 1915 were presented. The amount is $2,900, similar to that of last year. During 1914, $2,370.10 was spent.

On invitation of Ald. Edgar, Sanitary Inspector Spence was present, and the poor condition the public lavatory is in was discussed. Mr. Spence remarked that he would like to see the police department give the place a little more attention. It was decided to have the chairman wait upon the city trust commissioners and see if something cannot be done.

The sanitary inspector also referred to the poor facilities the cafes at the market have for keeping garbage. The matter was left in the hands of the inspector and chairman to look into thoroughly and make a recommendation.

The Late C. Kehler Was Well Known Around Hastings

Hastings, March 16.—A message from Cayuga, came to hand during the past week, conveying the sad intelligence of the death of Mr. C. Kehler of that town, after an illness of only short duration. The deceased gentleman was well known in this vicinity, having spent some time during the past few years in buying and shipping stock, from the G.T.R. station here. In all his business dealings, the public have always found him upright and honest in every detail, and many expressions of regret are heard on every hand, that he will be known no more.

SPECIAL BULLETIN FROM COMMISSION OF CONSERVATION

The Illustrated Farms, inaugurated by the Commission of Conservation in 1912, were one of the most far-sighted projects initiated by a public body for bringing home to the farmer the resources within his grasp and the possibilities which were his if only he would avail himself of them.

The "illustration" farm was taken to the farmer instead of asking the farmer to go to the illustration farm. It demonstrated that, provided he adopted the methods advanced by the Commission's advisers, he could largely increase his crops and—most important of all—that the increase was practically all profit.

These Illustrated Farms were suggested by Dr. J. W. Robertson, as chairman of the Committee on Lands of the Commission of Conservation, and have been carried on under the supervision of Mr. John Fixter, as agricultural instructor. Under the Commission, these farms have attained splendid practical results, but, in view of the $10,000,000 vote to be expended by the Department of Agriculture, under the Agricultural Act, 1913, it was apparent that operations on a vastly greater scale could be carried on with such a large sum. As it was also advisable that such work be carried on by an administrative department, they have been transferred to the Department of Agriculture, which will conduct them along similar lines to those of the past. That the work may still be under the supervision of Mr. John Fixter, he has also been transferred to that Department.

The auditor-general has found that about $250,000 of the $1,150,000 paid for the two Chilean submarines was sent to Seattle, and this is about the difference between the price paid by Canada and that offered by Chili.

Rev. A. McDonald of Edmonton, Alta., has been extended a unanimous call by the congregation of the Baptist church at Ingersoll to succeed as pastor Rev. J. C. McLaen, who recently accepted a call from Smith's Falls.

WILL BURN CONSTANTINOPLE RATHER THAN LET CITY GO TO THE CHRISTIANS

Mrs. Alice Moque Says it Certainly Would be a Great Fire — Writes of Life and Customs in the Turkish Capital

BY ALICE LEE MOQUE.

Author of "Delightful Dalmatia."

Open threats are being made by the Turks, according to recent reports, that before the city of Constantinople becomes the possession of the hated "giours" or infidels it will be completely destroyed.

Those who know the Turks best realize that the annihilation of the city is no idle threat. For years it has been known that rather than see the famous mosque of St. Sophia again a Christian sanctuary, after 462 years of use as a Mohammedan shrine, the fanatical followers of the prophet would prefer to destroy the ancient edifice dedicated to holy wisdom by the Emperor Constantine himself.

Fire is a constant menace in the sultan's capital, for the city is largely built of wood. The wealthy Armenian merchants and other foreigners doing business in Constantinople being fearful of having their property confiscated by the sultan's greedy officials on some pretext or other make the smallest outlay possible in building, and in consequence the city is full of ramshackledly wooden structures which are perfect tinder boxes.

No city in the world has a more superb situation upon lovely hills than has Constantinople, the "city washed by four seas." The Turkish capital is really three cities, not one, for Stamboul, the Mohammedan town, lies upon the Asiatic shore separated by the sparkling waters of the lovely Golden Horn from the European quarter of Pera, on the opposite shore, to which it is joined by the famous Galata bridge.

Scutari lies a couple of miles away on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus and the dirty squalid little Oriental town is only connected with Pera and Stamboul by a line of ferry boats, which run at uncertain intervals.

The Bosphorus for its entire length of 18 miles is one continuous succession of lovely palaces, villas and gardens. On its green sloping shores are the splendid summer homes of the mother of the khedive of Egypt and other royal foreigners and the English, Russian, American, French and other embassies all occupy fine residences here in summer, for the fresh breezes from the mountains sweep down the Bosphorus from the Black Sea and modify the excessive heat experienced in the sweltering city.

The fire department of Constantinople, the city of wood, is a joke. Its central station is on one of the old city landmarks, the Galata Tower which rises above the tops of the buildings at the Pera end of the great bridge across the Golden Horn, where all the nationalities of the world may be seen in the hurrying crowds.

Watchmen are stationed at the top of this tower, and on a similar structure in Stamboul, whose duty it is to watch for a blaze. When a fire is discovered a basket is hung out from the tower in the proper direction by day and a lamp by night.

Visitors to Constantinople almost any day will meet in the ill-paved, hilly streets of Pera, or Stamboul, a company of men bare-legged and without shirts, clad only in short loose cotton trousers, ambling along carrying a small box on two long poles, while others trot cheerily beside them armed with other poles in the ends of which are hooks. This is the Constantinople fire department.

The box contains a few gallons of water, and with the poles, constitutes the entire fire equipment of the city. But as no unseemly haste is made in reaching the fire, no more is necessary, for the conflagration usually has burned itself out before the careful fire-fighters arrive.

In Constantinople a few years ago I visited the blackened ruins of the Jewish quarter completely destroyed by fire in one night, a fire which rendered 3000 Jews homeless. All over the city these black patches of desolation mutely testify to the fire-fiend's power.

A visit to the famous bazaars of Constantinople is a rare treat. Marvelously wrought Damascened daggers, embroidered silk shawls, lovely fans, jeweled boxes, rich Oriental rugs, in fact everything from the sweetmeat "Turkish Delight" to copper kettles may be bought in the dark little shops which line each side of the covered streets.

Here, too, I caught my first glimpse of a Turkish "houri" shopping. No Mohammedan of means permits any of his wives ever to walk outside his harem garden but they are allowed to drive out with attendants in closed carriages. This lady wore the regulation "Yakmash" but I caught a good view of her as she sat back in her carriage.

The fall of Constantinople may change the sad look I saw in her dark eyes, for the war, may be the key which will unlock the prison doors of the fair ones immured in harems.

ITALY'S COURSE IN WAR SOON TO BE REVEALED

Pressure is Believed to Have Reached its Climax and Demands Upon Austria Are Outlined From an Authoritative Source — Representatives of Allies Have Presented a Strong Case for Their Side

ROME, March 17. — The political pressure upon the Italian Government to pledge Italy's course in the future, either to the empires of central Europe or the allies, has been augmented for some time and is to-day believed to have about reached its climax.

A despatch from Rome says that a large part of the Italian navy is being concentrated at Taranto, at the southeastern extremity of the country, and the point nearest the Dardanelles.

What is believed in high quarters to be an authoritative outline of the territorial demands of Italy and the position of Austria in regard to them was obtained yesterday.

Roughly speaking, Italy desires a sweep of territory to the north and east, which would extend her boundary around the northern end of the Adriatic Sea as far south as Fiume, on the eastern coast. This would include the Austrian naval base at Pola, as well as the Provinces of Trent and Trieste.

It is regarded as probable that, under pressure from Germany, Austria may be induced to grant larger concessions than she is now willing to consider, but the belief is generally held in responsible quarters that the extreme Austrian concessions would be insufficient to satisfy Italy.

Representatives of the allies in the negotiations with the Italian Government have united in saying that the defeat of eGrmany and Austria-Hungary is inevitable, even without the participation of Italy. In case Italy refrains from taking part, she will receive nothing from the allies when the settlements are made. They say that with the conclusion of peace, or shortly thereafter, the separation of Hungary from Austria is quite to be expected. This would lead to the absorption of the Austrian provinces of German nationality by Germany, and the extension of German dominion to Trieste, which would forever be lost to Italy. Italy would be forced to abandon Avlona and the Aegean Islands.

U. S. Ambassador Asked to Protest.

AMSTERDAM, March 17. — (Via London)—The newspaper Tijd learns from Berlin that the American Ambassador has been asked by Germany to lodge a protest at London against the treatment by the British authorities of the crew of the German submarine U-12 which, it is alleged, is contrary to international law and would necessitate reprisals.

German Recent Losses.

LONDON, March 17.—It is officially esimated that the Germans lost 18,000 men in the fighting around Neuve Chapelle, north of La Bassee, in France, during the 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th of this month. These figures are contained in the bi-weekly report of Field Marshal French, which was made public by the Government press bureau.

British Shipping Losses.

LONDON, March 17. — From the beginning of the war up to March 10 one hundred and sixty-six British merchant ships were interned, capturer, or destroyed, it was announced yesterday by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

VIGOROUS REPLY IS MADE TO LIBERAL CRITICISMS

Laurier Amendment is Negative and Offers no Alternative Says Prime Minister — P. B. Bennett and Solicitor-General Meighen Sums up for the Government — Election Talk Rife in the Corridors

OTTAWA, March 17.—With vigorous speeches from both sides of the House the budget debate came to an end at an early hour this morning. The Government speakers were Sir Robert Borden, R. B. Bennett, of Calgary, and Solicitor-General Meighen, while the Opposition was represented by F. B. Carvell, Alphonse Verville (Labor), and E. M. Macdonald. The Laurier amendment to the budget proposals was finally voted down on a straight party division.

The temper of yesterday's debate indicates that the truce is at an end and an early prorogation and election are freely predicted in the corridors of the House.

Sir Robert Borden, in opening, characterized the Liberal amendment as negative and destructive. It proposed no substitute or alternative, and if it prevailed it could only mean that Canada was not to take her full part in the present war.

It was late in the day, he said, for Sir Wilfrid Laurier to denounce protection. He had not only maintained high tariff duties during the lifetime of his Government, but in 1907 had increased them avowedly for protective purposes. In 1907 the Laurier Government had greatly increased the tariff upon many British imports.

Sir Robert declared the unalterable policy of his Government to be the maintenance of the national policy, so as to keep Canadian workmen in Canada with plenty of employment at living wages.

The House had been told by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the present budget was a German conception, said the Premier, and that it would meet with approval in Germany. Sir Robert said he could not perceive any evidence of this, but he did quite clearly recollect that the policy pursued by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Liberal party in 1912 had given unbounded satisfaction to the German Government.

Mr. F. B. Carvell, who followed, said that Sir George Foster had practically admitted the whole case for the Liberals when he declared that the Government might save by economy the thirty million dollars which Mr. White proposed to raise by new taxes. But extravagance gave Mr. White the excuse for increasing the protective duties. These duties were put on, not for revenue purposes, but simply to increase the profits of the Government's political friends. In the case of boots, for instance, while the Government might expect $600,000 in additional revenue, it was safe to say that there would be at least $2,500,000 added to the cost of the boots manufactured in Canada, and this would come out of the pockets of the people.

Alphonse Verville (Labor, Maissonneuve) severely scored the exploitation of the made-in-Canada propaganda. It was "one of the biggest farces the human brain ever conceived," calculated to deceive the workers, to hand the best weapon to the big corporate interests, to encourage the spread of inferior goods at top prices, and encourage unscrupulous dealers to put fraudulent stuff upon the market.

R. B. Bennett (Calgary) said that Mr. Verville misrepresented the laboring people of Canada, who were keenly interested in having everything manufactured in this country. Referring to the Opposition amendment, Mr. Bennett said that unfortunately the Liberals did not seem to realize that a war was going on and sought to make party capital by opposing the new taxes, which they thought would prove to be "unpopular."

"The Finance Minister is going about," said E. M. Macdonald (Pictou) "with stooped shoulders and anxious mien. He tells us he cannot sleep at nights because every day he has to raise a million dollars. One would think he was furnishing the money out of his own pocket. As a matter of fact every dollar of the war expenditure is furnished him by the British Government. He has not given it twenty minutes thought. Beyond assuming a portentous mien, neither he nor the Prime Minister have done anything to finance this war.

Solicitor-General Meighen said he regretted the action of the Liberals, but if they wanted to fight, fight would be carried into their country. He said the budget provided for war taxes just as the recent legislation by the United States Congress provided for war taxes.

Host of Prisoners Taken.

LONDON, March 17.—A Petrograd despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. says that in February 48,000 German and Austrian prisoners passed through Kiev.

According to the same despatch it is announced that the Turks, having recently lost several important points in the region of the Tchoruk river, Turkish Armenia, have completely abandoned their positions to the Russians. The latter are seriously threatening the Turks in the Olti district of Transcaucasia.

Reeve of Eramosa Dead.

GUELPH, March 17. — William Parkinson, a prosperous farmer and reeve of Eramosa, died suddenly at his home yesterday afternoon. He was about 45 years of age and one of the most prosperous farmers in the township. He leave a wife and three small children.

Dutch Not In Festal Mood.

THE HAGUE, March 17. — Although this was the centenary of the transformation of the Netherlands into a kingdom under William I., the Dutch nation did not celebrate the event. On account of the conditions of war prevailing in Europe it was decided not to hold a national festival; no flag was hoisted and no bunting was displayed.

Neighbors' Fatal Quarrel.

WETASKIWIN, March 17.—As a result of a shooting affair Mrs. Rosa Stoley, 28, is dead, and Mrs. Washington Hawks, aged 60, is mentioned by a coroner's jury as having fired the shots. Families lived in a double house in Lewisville district and jealously is reported as a possible motive.

GERMAN LINER MAKES ESCAPE

Interned Vessel Ships Repair Parts and Gets Away Away

LONDON, March 17.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Las Palmas, Canary Islands, dated Monday, says:

"The interned German liner Macedonia disappeared from this port during the night. The Macedonia was towed here by a Spanish cruiser last November from Palma and was moored in the inner harbor, where the authorities removed parts of her machinery.

"It is presumed that the confiscated parts were duplicated, thus enabling the vessel to slip out of the harbor. The Macedonia carries a wireless and has a cargo supposed to be composed of war stores."

CHIROPRACTORS GET SET BACK

Private Bills Committee Throws Out Bill

TORONTO, March 17.—Chiropractors will not yet establish a training school in Ontario or operate with the authority of the Legislature. In spite of a vigorous appeal before the private bills committee yesterday, the bill was thrown out.

Hon. I. B. Lucas declared that osteopathy and such other studies should be dealt with in a comprehensive way by the medical commission which Sir James Whitney had suggested.

A. H. Musgrove, of Huron, argued for it. He had known scores of instances where people had been helped when ordinary doctors had failed. His brother, however, Dr. G. J. Musgrove, of Niagara Falls, was strongly opposed. In his mind it was outrageous to permit one who had learned his science in six months in an American college to vie with recognized practitioners.

The bill was lost on a show of hands and again on a standing vote.

--- THE BOND ---

("I canot help hoping that when Catholic and Covenater, Unionist and Nationalist, have written in blood their joint acceptance of this bill of honor on the continent, they may possibly find an easier way of settling their disputes at home after the war."—Pro. Kettle, at Dublin.)

Long years before the German war lord, crazed
With greed of power and dreams of far-flung sway,
Threw down the gauntlet to a world, amazed,
We fought as brothers as we fight today.

Where'er a sword was drawn in England's cause,
On every field where valor found a place,
There Erin's sons have won the world's applause,
And foes have learned to fear "the Fighting Race."

We held the flag aloft at Waterloo;
We left our dead in Portugal and Spain;
The burning winds of Egypt keen a few;
Our bones are withering by the Ganges' plain.

Our best and bravest for the Empire bled
On Afric's veldt, on China's coral strand;
North, east and west, the muster of our dead
Around a thousand ghostly campfires stand.

Our blood has mingled in a common stream,
In every age, in every land and clime;
And does not such a brotherhood redeem
The bitter past, and heal the wounds of time?

The fierce, unmeaning hates of bygone years—
Can they survive the blood our sons have shed?
And shall we still pay tribute to our tears
To storied wrongs, or to our common dead?

Here, as we stand above the countless graves
Of Celt and Saxon, sleeping side by side,
We know no grief—but one proud tear that laves
The feud of ages and bids peace abide.

Essex Waits for Prinz Eitel.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., March 17.—The cruiser Essex has joined the squadron of British warships lying in wait off the Virginia coast for the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich, which is lying in this port. So far Captain Thierichens of the German raider, has failed to give a definite answer to questions as to the length of his stay here.

BIG EFFORT NEAR AT HAND

Allied Warships Getting on the Coast of Belgium

LONDON, March 17. — With the increasing activities of the British, French and Belgian armies, the reappearance on the coast of Belgium of British and French warships, and the time drawing near for a big effort in the west, the public is following with renewed interest the daily reports of the operations.

The Belgians, who are being supported by the warships of the allies, have consolidated the ground which they have won in the last few days, while the British have done likewise with the strip of territory which they took from the Germans near Neuve Chapelle, and have recovered most, if not all, of the trenches which they lost in the region of St. Eloi.

Simultaneously there has been heavy fighting north of Arras, in Champagne, in the Argonne, and in the Vosges, in which both French and Germans claim to have been successful.

All the operations are believed here to be preliminary to the general offensive which the allies will undertake when the ground dries, enabling a more rapid movement of troops and guns and the use of cavalry, which has been out of action all winter, except when the troopers left their horses and took to the trenches.

Despite the obstacles of deep snow, blizzards and intense cold, the Russian troops in continuing their offensive in the Smolnik region of the Carpathians, carried the last Austrian position, right in the centre of their chief offensive area, and forced them to retreat in the direction of Baligrod. The Russians took 2,400 prisoners, including 36 officers and 17 machine guns. This important success will compel the enemy to readjust his lines several miles back, and gives the Russians initial advantages in organizing their columns for an invasion of Hungary when the time is ripe. The Austrians also lost a number of trenches towards the Uszok Pass.

The opening stages of a big battle to the east of the Stanislau-Kolomea Railway are being fought with opening success by the Russians, whose infantry, marching through snow breast-high, captured the Austrian fortifications near Tarnowice and Polno, with over 2,000 prisoners and 20 officers.

The Russians are closing round Przemysl, where, having captured the chief eastern defences, they carried the northern heights within rifle shot of the forts protecting the town.

Headway is being made by the Russian troops against the Germans on both banks of the Orzyc river, on the Przasnysz front. A stubborn battle was fought with the Germans, who lost possession of the Villages of Stegna and Yednorozec, and suffered a repulse of vigorous counter-attack. The Russians captured in this fighting a heavy gun, three light field pieces, seven machine guns and 700 prisoners.

Parties of the enemy attempting to advance from Kopelowo were destroyed. An offensive of the Germans in the Pilica district was defeated. The Russians report partial success north of the Przasnysz-Groudousk line.

A fresh Russian advance in northwestern Bukowina is reported. It is stated that bad weather makes progress slow. The Russians carried certain Austrian trenches at the point of the bayonet, the Austrians retreating with heavy losses.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

FARM CROPS

Results of experiments at the Ontario Agricultural College.

By way of supplementing the "Patriotism and Production" movement the Ontario Department of Agriculture has issued Bulletin 228, "Farm Crops," prepared by Professor C. A. Zavitz.

The reading of this bulletin should assist in a material improvement in the quality as well as the quantity of farm products of the province.

It deals with experiments made in the raising of each of the field crops, and of other important crops (chiefly for fodder) not now well known to many of our farmers.

These tests were conducted at the Ontario Agricultural Farm, Guelph, under the direction of the author, the well-known cerealist and general experimenter in agronomics, and valuable advice is given by him regarding the possible increase of farm produce, the rotation of crops, etc. The influence of seed selection and of hybridization in relation to the improvement of both quality and the production of field crops, sometimes resulting in new popular varieties, is stated in a most clear and interesting manner, and is full of encouragement for those who would like to engage in such experiments.

Valuable information is offered as to best combinations for mixed grains and the treatment of seed grain for smut. Considerable space is also given to discussing alfalfa as a pasture and fodder crop, and to the making of both annual and permanent pastures.

Prof. Zavitz urges that special attention be given to raising seed for field roots in Ontario, as most of such seed up to the present time has been imported from European countries now at war.

The writer of this bulletin gives four very practical rules for producing satisfactory field crops:

1. Raise only such crops as are likely to meet the demand.

2. Select good plump seed which has been tested for vitality.

3. Give the land early and thorough cultivation.

4. Sow all crops at the proper time and according to right methods.

This bulletin may be procured free of charge by applying to the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

TWENTY-EIGHT ARE KILLED

British Cruiser in the Dardanelles Hit Twenty-two Times

LONDON, March 17.—Twnty-eight of the crew of the British light cruiser Amethyst were killed and about the same number wounded when Turkish batteries succeeded in hitting her during operations against the Dardanelles fortifications, says The Daily News in a despatch from its correspondent at Athens. Twenty-two shells struck the Amethyst.

The Amethyst was one of a squadron of five British ships sent in towards Nagara to scatter the Turks, who, it was learned, were placing movable batteries in position. The Amethyst led the squadron. The damage to the vessel has not been learned.

The damaged vessel returned to Pharani, where she anchored. Her dead were buried at sea. Yesterday the entire fleet of warships flew their ensigns at half-mast.

It is reported here that the Turks are feverishly fortifying the Bosphorus, big guns having been placed on the heights of Cantindja and Scutari.

Last evening a seaplane rose from the sea and disappeared up the straits. A battleship also entered the straits.

Germans in Constantinople are telling the Turks that Nagara Point has been made impassable. They state that plans have been completed that will result in the sinking of all the enemy ships that attempt to get through the Narrows.

A Reuter despatch from Tenedos stated that a British trawler attached to the Anglo-French fleet in the Dardanelles sphere of operations was blown up yesterday while sweeping up mines. Mine-sweeping operations were begun by a fleet of trawlers, under the protection of the warships.

Several batteries of Turkish field artillery posted above Kum Kale at the entrance to the Dardanelles were discovered and silenced by British warships after a bombardment Sunday, says a special despatch from Athens.

Cobb a Pro-German

QUEBEC, March 17. — In connection with the arrest and subsequent condemnation of Lawrence Victor Cobb, a former member of the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, first Canadian overseas contingent, who was sentenced to six months at hard labor at Southampton for forgery, Chief Constable Jones of Southampton has written to Chief Trudel of this city, stating that Cobb is a German-American, an alleged pro-German and also a confirmed criminal.

IMPROVEMENT AND INCREASE ON THE FARM

The advice given in the most recent announcement of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa to make your land produce more, cannot be over-emphasized. Millions of bushels rather than the cultivation of excessive acres, should be Canada's aim. Improved production is only possible by the use of good, pure seed and by assiduous and knowledgeful attention to the soil. Experience is undoubtedly in farming as in all other objects in life, the best instructor, but just as fertilizers help the soil, so does acquiring the results of experiments by others make the road easier to the lesson that is to be learned. Never was there so much necessity for thoroughness and earnestness as now when the markets of the world are wider open, when they are being shifted and former occupants are receiving notice to quit.

As proof that there is abundant room for increased production by improvement, an official statement as follows is presented of the average yield of various products last year, and of the average that is possigle:

	Average	Possible
Fall wheat	20.43	52.
Spring wheat	14.84	33.
Barley	16.15	69.
Oats	36.30	91.
Corn, grain	70.	200.
Corn, ensilage (tons)	12.	19.
Peas	15.33	37.
Beans	18.79	50.
Potatoes	119.40	450.
Turnips	421.81	1000.

By "possible," it is explained, is meant results actually obtained at the Experimental Farms and by many farmers under intensive cultivation.

While such results may not be obtainable in every case on the average farm, strict attention to the selection of seed, the use of fertilizers and thorough preparation of the soil will accomplish much. It is estimated that in this way the value of the crops of Canada might be increased in a good season by $150,000,000, which would be more than enough to meet interest on all the money borrowed by the Dominion from Great Britain or invested in this country.

This is not a burden placed upon the agricultural community. It is a task it is asked to undertake for self-interests and to make the Empire more self-sustained. It is the unity of patriotism and production, for the encouragement of which bulletins and pamphlets giving results of actual experiments by practical men, as well as vast stores of useful information, can be obtained free on unstamped application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. The best method of procedure is to send for a catalogue and then forward your order, but, to save time, it is announced that bulletins on wheat, oats, corn, barley, peas, beans, potatoes, turnips, onions or live stock, will be mailed immediately on notification of those wanted.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, March 16.—Easing away of export demand for spot cash wheat today seemed to cut a good deal of figure in bringing about heavy profit-taking sales by holders of speculative contracts. As a result the market closed weak, ⅝c to 1c under last night. Other leading staples, too, showed net declines—corn ⅜c to ⅞c, oats ⅛c to ⅝c, and provisions 5c to 20c.

Notwithstanding that Duluth, Omaha, Kansas City and Chicago, as well as the seaboard, all sold wheat for export, the aggregate was estimated to be noticeably smaller than has been the rule of late. Crop reports favored the bears, and so also did references to increased dangers for shipping.

Heaviness chacterized the corn trade throut the session. The decrease in the domestic visible supply total was much less than expected, and there was no shipping enquiry to speak of.

A big cash business was in progress in oats. The effect was offset, tho, by general selling on the part of commission house longs, owing largely to fine weather.

Provisions slid downgrade with hogs and grain. The market received only indifferent support.

AUTONOMY IN EXEMPTIONS

Local Officials Will Say Who Shall Escape War Taxes

TORONTO, March 17. — Ontario's war tax will be collected by the various counties and municipalities of the province and they will themselves settle the extent of any exemptions from its application. In view of the difficulties which would be experienced in allowing for proper exemptions in different cases, the responsibility will lie at the doors of the municipal collectors. The idea is to make the tax collectable against all property except that of churches, schools and similar institutions, and one mill on every dollar's worth of equalized assessment will be expected by the Provincial Treasurer.

After brief consideration the bill was advanced into committee and the Premier conceded that the action of the municipalities might yet be made imperative. It will appear again in committee at a later date.

Russia To Sell Wheat.

LONDON, March 17.—To relieve the Russian civil population the Russian Government has bought practically all the wheat that can be exported from the region of the Black Sea, and should the waterway be opened as a result of the present naval operations of the allies against Constantinople, the Government will form a special organization to transport and sell wheat. Great Britain and France have the promise of an option on all exported wheat, not only for the use of their military but the civil population as well.

Caillaux Denies Charges.

PARIS, March 17. — Joseph Caillaux, former Premier, made public yesterday a letter replying to attacks against him during his absence in South America.

The former Premier asserts that all of the allegations are untrue. He declares that he made no visit to Vienna, participated in no negotiations for peace with Germany after the battle of Charleroi, and made no effort to retard the mobilization of the French army.

Germans on Leipzig Unable to Get Their Flag Down.

CLEVELAND, March 17.—A shot-torn flag halyard was responsible for the death of four hundred German seamen of the cruiser Leipzig at the end of the engagement of Dec. 8 off the Falkland Islands. The German cruiser, her last shot fired, on fire and disabled could not haul down her ensign in surrender because the halyard was severed, and, massed on the tilting deck, the crew in consequence had to endure a heavy shelling from the Glasgow that left only thirty of them alive.

This tragic detail of the sea fight off the coast of Chili became known for the first time last night through a letter from Mrs. John H. Pope, of Montevideo, Uruguay, to the family of J. D. Cox, of 3,411 Euclid avenue.

Capt. Luce, of the Glasgow, told the story over a dinner table in Montevideo, where the cruiser put in to refit.

WINNIPEG MEETING AFFIRMS PRINCIPLE OF "HOME RULE"

O.H.A. Always Stood for Self Government — Westerners Deny That Any Exhibitions Had Been Arranged — Three Months Rule Next Year.

Winipeg, March 17.—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, at its special executive session yesterday, affirmed the principle for which the Ontario Association has always stood, and without the maintenance of which the O.H.A. would have to go alone, that is, the right of the component associations to self-government within the common rules, and to the absolute control of their domestic affairs, without interference from either the general body or the associate organizations. It was really on this point that the meeting was called, and the expenses of the special gathering were met by Regina Victorias, who wanted the main body to undertake to override a decision of the Saskatchewan Association on a matter quite within the jurisdiction of the Provincial body. Manitoba had voted in favor of the appeal some time ago, but the majority of the branches were opposed to it, and it had no sound support today. The meeting refused to consider the Regina appeal on the ground taken by the O.H.A.

Victorias Have no "Protection."

The right of self-government and control of territory was also affirmed by the positive denial of President Taylor and Secretary Robinson that they had given the Toronto Victorias any assurance of protection such as had been stated in regard to the formation of a city league in Toronto, and they pointed out that such was entirely outside of their jurisdiction.

Three-Months' Rule Next Year.

The motion by the Ontario Hockey Association that the Melville team were not eligible to play for the Allan Cup because of failure to meet the three-months residence rule had already been negatived by the telegraphic vote on the question, but the Ontario delegates brought it up again in order to put the branches on record. The rule had not been generally observed, except in the case of Ontario, and the other branches voted to sustain what they had been putting into practice all season, and uphold the President's ruling. They are agreed that the three-months rule applies next season.

No Exhibition Games Arranged.

Secretary Hewitt of the O. H. A. showed that he and other officials of the Ontario Association had been positively informed by Manager Reade before the Victorias left Toronto that they had several exhibition games arranged with Winnipeg clubs. They had gone west on their own initiative, and were not sent by the O.H.A., whose position all along had been that it would not play its champions against Melville. Manager Reade had declared that he fully understood that they were not to play Melville except on orders from the O.H.A. He afterwards charged that the western teams broke those exhibition engagements at the instigation of the C.A.H.A.

Claude Robinson pointed out that Winnipeg Vics. had no such engagement, and the reason for refusing to play the Toronto Vics. unless they went on to Melville first, was taken from his reading of the constitution. that challenging teams could not play exhibition games prior to cup games without the association's consent. Winnipeg also denied any engagement before the arrival of Toronto Vics in Winnipeg.

Several major league managers who are having so much difficulty now in restraining their players from over-exerting themselves will find themselves relieved on that worry about May 7.

Joe Benz, the Chicago White Sox pitcher, has taken up golf, and probably will play well if permitted to spit on the ball.

Now that Connie Mack has stated definitely that he will not sell Frank Baker we expect C. Webb Murphy to bid half a million dollars for him.

A TEAM OF NATIVE SONS.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The new N. H. A. champions have practically gone through the season with an all-Ottawa caste. Of the eleven men in uniform Saturday night, ten were born and raised in the Federal Capital. Art Ross is the only member of the champions who does not hail from this city. All the native sons learned their hockey and were developed here. They performed first in the little leagues, attained City League rank, and the majority of them graduated from the Interprovincial into the National Hockey Association. Ottawa has always endeavored to obtain the best hockey talent available for its team, and showed no discrimination between home brews and outsiders. It just came natural, however, that each year saw the local squad well heeled with local players. And there are a lot of them coming along every year. Additional Ottawa zest was added to the final game Saturday night, when Wanderers had three Ottawa boys in uniform, viz., Roberts, McCarthy and Kendall.

RIFLE SIGHTS.

The Drop of the Bullet In Its Flight Makes Them Necessary.

The average person if asked to explain why a rifle is sighted would probably be unable to do so beyond some vague remark about taking correct aim.

Sights are necessary because a bullet does not travel in a straight line, but under the influence of gravity and friction, begins to drop almost as soon as it leaves the muzzle. Thus the bullet of the British service rifle drops six inches in the first 100 yards, but when it has gone 200 yards it will have dropped not twelve inches, but two feet. The drop increases by leaps and bounds with the distance. Were there no sights on the rifle and you wanted to hit a mark at 200 yards you would clearly have to aim two feet above it.

This would be awkward, for you would lose sight of the mark aimed at, to say nothing of the difficulty of correctly estimating a distance of two feet at 200 yards.

The sights of a rifle enable you to keep your eye on the mark, although the muzzle of the rifle is actually pointing above it. The movable slide of the backsight enables you automatically to point the muzzle just so many feet above the mark aimed at as is necessary to counteract the known drop of the bullet at various ranges.—London Answers.

Teaching Cubs to Kill.

Have you ever seen a cat catch a mouse and hand it over to her kittens to teach them how to kill? Well, a tiger is merely a big cat, and she teaches her cubs almost in the same way, only not with mice. An East Indian officer witnessed a scene of this kind. An old bull bison had been the victim, and the tigress had disabled him by breaking one of his forelegs just below the knee. She never touched the throat, the usual place of seizing, but allowed the cubs to worry the disabled animal. The eyewitness relates that the cubs acted exactly like kittens, advanced and retreated and worried the victim, all the time mewing and snarling, while the tigress sat near by, watching their antics and occasionally giving the bison a blow with her paw when he showed undue activity.

DULUTH LIKES CANADIAN GAME

Amateur Hockey League Has Successful Season in Minnesota City

Duluth Herald:—It is refreshing to the directors of the Duluth Curling Club that a healthy profit on this year's hockey should leer at the deficit incurred last season. Profits are pleasant personages, and deficits are hateful and spiteful persons.

Speaking of hockey in general in Duluth—and this purview most certainly includes the teams of the Duluth Amateur Hockey League—permit us to state that the season waning to an imminent finale has been by many margins the greatest in the history of the puck in its purely local habitat.

The curling club has made money. The teams of the amateur league have not made any lucre, as they are not as yet in a position to garner the coin; but, measuring success by the standard of hockey played, by the closeness of the race, and by the interest displayed, the success achieved has been of a golden nature of shining and sparkling quality.

There is no doubt in the world but that the curling club team is one of the greatest septets playing the game. Its record this season has been phenomenal. It should also be stated that the quality of game played in the amateur league has been far and away ahead of the quality of hockey ever previously played by the city teams of this old town.

It has been a great season for all concerned. At the practical close of the present season let us push the hope into pulsating being that the approach of another season will find better accommodations for the teams of one of Duluth's greatest hockey assets—the Duluth Amateur Hockey League.

NO INFORMATION LAID AGAINST TETRAULT

Local Authorities Are not Taking Any Action

Unless the O. H. A. lays information against Joe Tetrault, alias Joe Moinse the Montreal professional hockey player who figured on the forward line of the Peterborough intermediates this season, which resulted in the Petes being suspended by the provincial association, the local authorities will not endeavor to locate him. The O. H. A. wrote to County Crown Attorney Hatton and recommended that Tetrault be apprehended on the charge of fraud. Crown Attorney Hatton informed the Review a few days ago that he had given the matter over to Chief Thompson, with instructions to locate the player. Today Chief Thompson stated that unless the O. H. A. lays information against Tetrault, no action will be taken. The chief remarked that in his opinion the O. H. A. would like him to go ahead with a "test case." He did not opine that it would be wise for the city to be at the expense of locating Tetrault and bringing him back to Peterborough, because the O. H. A. "thought" he could be prosecuted.

One of the most objectionable of the pests that intrude into houses in Malta is the muskrat. Everything he touches is impregnated with the odor from which he derives his name. His odor is so powerful and at the same time so penetrating that dozens of bottles of preserves may be ruined by his merely running over the bottles. The muskrat is a squeaking little animal who commits his enormities at night, and he adds insult to injury by disturbing the repose of the victims of his depredations.—London Standard.

A meeting of representatives of the various companies of the 57th Regiment was held last night in the Armouries in the interests of an indoor baseball league. The following committee was appointed to arrange for a schedule: Capt. Park, Lieut. Turner, Sergt. Sharpe, Munro and Grange.

The next meeting will be held March 23rd and every company must have a representative present. After drill on the 23rd, companies 4 and 6 will have the floor for practice.

Can Give Clear Title to Land

Judgment was given out at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, yesterday, in the matter of Humphrey Finlay and James Darling. The former for whom F. D. Kerr of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, appeared, sold land in Emily Township to Pames Darling, who was represented by C. A. Moss. Mr. F. D. Kerr made a motion for his client for an order declaring that he can make a clear title under the will of the late B. J. Finlay. W. J. Elliott appeared for the heirs of the testator. The judgment was as follows:—

"The word heirs is by the will shown to be equivalent to heirs of the body, and the devise in the last clause is a gift of the remainder to the surviving members of his family. The devise to Humphrey Finlay and his heirs gives him an estate tail, and by a proper conveyance he can bar the entail and convey in fee. So declare. No order as to costs."

The Canadian Government will again mobilize troops at Valcartier, using it for the third contingent, when spring and good weather have come.

"It's very nice—tastes like lamb. Why the odd name?" he asked. "Well, sir," said his host, "it is lamb. You see, the young lambs in the mesh try to get over the drains. A good many of 'em jump short, tumble in and get drowned. Then we hooks 'em out and puts 'em into a pie. Have another help, sir?" Barham declined. —London Tatler.

AUTO PARTY FAILED TO ARRIVE AT HAPPYLAND

Young People of Knox Church Presented Playlet Before Large Audience

The deputation of young people from Knox Church Guild failed to arrive at Happytown last night, but they managed to have a big time nevertheless. They also provided entertainment for their friends, who crowded the lecture hall to find out what it was all about.

"Fifteen Miles from Happytown," the title of the one-act playlet, was well presented. The presentation of "The New Minister" last spring made a big hit, and something good was expected last night. The young people taking part in the piece acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner and their work reflected credit on Mr. George Kenyon, the church organist and choir leader who directed the rehearsals.

The platform was arranged to represent an automobile owned by Dewberry Green, who was to take the company to a convention in Happy Land. But the auto refused to budge and when the seat of the trouble was finally discovered it was found that the brakes were on hard and fast.

The dialogue was bright and full of humor, and the company made the most of the many funny situations which followed one another.

There were also a number of songs that won applause for the vocalists, one of the best being a made-in-Peterborough composition sung to the music of "Tipperary."

It was announced that the piece would be repeated Friday night.

Ladies' Aid Held Irish Evening

Ireland in song, story and picture, combined to form a decidedly interesting, instructive and pleasant evening last night, when the Ladies' Aid Society of Charlotte St. Methodist Church gave an Irish entertainment before an audience that almost taxed seating capacity. A unique portion of the program was the highly creditable manner in which a chorus composed of members of the society, contributed several Irish songs.

Mrs. I. B. Wallwin's Irish travel talk, illustrated by beautifully clear colored views of Erin's picturesque scenery, was a thorough treat. By introducing humorous incidents concerning the Irish, and funny stories, Mrs. Wallwin established no small degree of popularity for herself.

The chairman for the concert was Rev. J. P. Wilson who told several Irish stories and paved the way most appropriately for what followed.

The program was as follows:—

Piano solo—Miss Letitia Eliott.

Chorus—The Dear Little Shamrock—by ladies and chorus.

Solo—Mrs. Perrin.

Duet—Messrs. Fleming and Downey.

Violin solo—Miss Elva Jackson.

Chorus—Where the River Shannon Flows—by Ladies' Aid chorus.

Solo—Mr. D. Fleming.

Solo—It's a Long Way to Tipperary—Master Jack Diamond.

Solo—Mother Machree—Miss Stevens.

Solo — Killarney — Mrs. G. B. Hughes.

The Ladies' Aid are to be congratulated upon the successful outcome of their undertaking.

ARTICLE BY ROBT. M. FAIR WINS HIGH PRAISE

An article on the Grand Trunk Railway Apprentices System, written by Mr. Robert M. Fair, son of the late Geo. L. Fair of Centreville, and nephew of Robert Fair of this city, has gained for him, eulogistic comment from a high official of the company. The article appeared in Canadian Machinery. Mr. Fair is a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. He spent five years with the Grand Trunk Railway and is graduating this spring from the department of applied science at McGill.

Observances of St. Patrick's Day

In each of the three Catholic churches this morning high mass was sung and a sermon preached on the life and work of St. Patrick. In St. Peter's Cathedral, Rev. D. A. Casey of Bracebridge celebrated Mass while Rev. Father Leonard preached at the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The mass was sung by Dean McColl, who also preached, while at the Church of the Sacred Heart Rev. J. V. McCauley sung the mass and Rev. J. J. O'Brien preached.

Father O'Brien outlined the life of Erin's patron saint and then advanced the real reasons why Catholicism should rejoice on St. Patrick's Day. It is not because they are Irish, but because they are Catholics, because St. Patrick carried the faith to their forefathers, and because that faith was still preserved. Father O'Brien warned his parishioners against putting nationality before religion. The putting of nationality before religion has done more harm to the Catholic Church than all the work of Satan. It was responsible for the Greeks falling away from the church, it resulted in the Germans giving up their faith. The German emperor wanted the power of appointing the bishop of the church; this could not be granted, and many Germans fell away from the Catholic church. Thus nationality should not be placed before religion. That the Irish today should not rejoice merely because they are Irish, but because St. Patrick brought them the faith and the faith has been preserved. Father O'Brien's closing words were an admonition to his flock to fervently ask God and the assistance of the Blessed Virgin Mary that the faith left by St. Patrick might be preserved in the future and their immortal souls saved.

Eskimo Moonshiners.

It may surprise those who associate "moonshine" whisky only with the southern mountains to learn that since the suppression of the contraband liquor traffic between whites and natives in the far north of Canada the Eskimo has himself turned "moonshiner."

No touch of romance clings to the business up there. There are no hidden stills sending up tell-tale columns of smoke from lonely coves or purple glens; no solitary lookout on some crag against the sky with rifle and gourd-neck horn to sound an alarm when the revenue raiders come galloping over the rim of the hills. Those who prefer their moonshining in this style would do better to stick to civilized parts.

The Eskimo does his moonshining in his igloo, or just outside in his own front yard, as it were, under the eyes of his neighbors. His distilling plant is a small and primitive affair. He can hide it in a sleeping bag or carrying it off in his arms to the hills if a revenue cutter shows in the offing.

The still itself is usually an old oil can; the flake stand, a powder keg; the worm, a twisted gun barrel; the receptacle to catch the liquor that drips from the form, a tomato can. He knows nothing of the southern mountaineer's "mash," made from the meal of sprouted corn. His mash is a fermented mixture of flour and molasses. He boils it by placing under the still a pan of blubber oil in which burns a wick of twisted moss.

The vapor from the boiling mash passed from the still into the worm, where it is condensed by cold sea water, with which the powder keg is kept filled by hand, and trickles out into the tomato can an alcoholic liquor, which tastes like none of the liquors of civilization, but equals the fiercest of them in intoxicating potency. One deep swig of this moonshine of the north will make the usually timid Eskimo brave enough to face his mother-in-law or a polar bear with equally reckless disregard of consequences.

Proposed New Highway.

An organization to boost a campaign for the proposed highway from Ottawa to Morrisburg and name it the Whitney Memorial Highway in memory of the late Sir James Whitney, was started at a meeting held in Winchester, Ont., recently. The wardens, reeves, deputy reeves and most of the councillors of the municipalities through which the highway would be built were present, and the meeting was unanimously in favor of the highway.

Irwin Hilliard, M.P.P, for Dundas, strongly favored the proposal. It was stated that Sir James Whitney had had plans for such a highway, and the speakers were of the opinion that had he lived the highway would very soon have been started.

O. T. Casselman, of Chesterville, was appointed permanent chairman of a committee to organize a movement in support of the road, and J. A. Campbell was selected as permanent secretary.

Canada's "Eye-Witness."

Sir William Maxwell Aitken, M.P. for Ashton-under-Lyne, has been appointed "Eye-Witness" in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, with the rank of major. Six Max Aitken, whose title is now three years old, is of Canadian birth, his father having been a Scottish minister at New Brunswick. He was prominent in the business life of Halifax and Montreal, and has been a member of the Imperial Parliament, in the Unionist interests, for four years. He is a director of several large Canadian business houses and trust companies.

The Shell committee, which hitherto has had its headquarters in Montreal, will be moved to Ottawa.

WILL RUSSELL WON DIAMOND RING

A four-act melodrama entitled "In the Eyes of the World," presented by the Mae Edwards Players pleased a fair-sized audience at the Grand last night.

The story of the play centres about the heroic struggle of a young woman to live down her past. She is successful, but her life is haunted by fear of a dissolute man with whom she once illegally lived. She escapes from his power and is well on the way to happiness, when this man returns. He tries to break off her approaching marriage to the cashier of the bank by whom she is employed, but is unsuccessful, and the husband is finally arrested and executed for murder and robbery.

All the company acted in their clever and capable manner. Mae Edwards, in the role of Miss Williams, the bank stenographer, was particularly good, while Wally Grayson as the bank cashier was also strong at all times.

The company last night gave away a diamond ring, Mr. Will Russell an employe of the C. G. E., holding the lucky number.

Jackal Broth a Delicacy.

Camel flesh does not strike the western palate as a delectable dish, but it certainly seems preferable to jackal. Yet there are parts of Morocco, we are told by a French visitor, where jackal broth is highly esteemed as a table delicacy. A friendly sheik dissented vehemently when it was intimated that, as jackals feed on carrion, the broth must have a horrible flavor. "It is only a question of knowing how to prepare it," he said. "You put the jackal, skin and all, for two hours into a vessel of boiling water, then transfer it to another vessel. This process is repeated. After ten hours' boiling in five different waters the carrion flavor disappears, and the broth is delicious."

CANNOT TRANSFER TROOPS FROM EAST

German Plan to Deal Russia a Crushing Blow Has Failed Think British Observers

PEOPLE CAUTIONED IN REGARD TO OPERATIONS AT DARDANELLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 18. — British military experts think the position of the German armies in the East precludes the transfer at this time of any troops to the western arena and that the German plan of dealing Russia a crushing blow before attempting the much-discussed spring advance in the West, has failed. Five out of six of the new German army corps are said to be engaged on and beyond the frontier of East Prussia, a fact which British observers think will make it difficult for Germany to meet the new demands likely to be imposed upon her in the West.

The full import of the British victory at Neuve Chapelle is only now beginning to be grasped by the public. It has greatly cheered both troops and civilians as confirming the belief that the German line can be broken if the Allies care to pay the price. Several thousand wounded men from this battlefield already have arrived in England, five trainloads having reached Brighton during the twenty-four hours ended last evening.

The press today again cautions the people that the taking of the Dardanelles is likely to be a slow affair to accomplish, for which the Allies must pay a price, just as they have done at Neuve Chapelle.

SERGT. VICTOR IS WOUNDED

Local Soldier Receives Gunshot Wound in the Thigh

Mrs. W. Victor, a brave little Englishwoman, tried hard to keep back the tears when she talked to a Review reporter this morning about her son, Lance Corp. Peter Victor, who is the first Peterborough soldier to be officially reported as wounded in the fighting in France. His is a gunshot wound in the thigh. The telegram appraising his mother of his condition was received late yesterday afternoon from Ottawa. The casualty list published today says he is dangerously wounded.

"I'm glad it is not worse," said Mrs. Victor, "as he might have been taken prisoner by the Germans. He will be with our own people in the hospital at Boulogne."

Sergt. Victor is 24 years old. He resigned his position with the local agency of the Singer Sewing Machine Co. to enlist with the first contingent of men from this city.

He had been a corporal in "C" Company, 57th Regiment. A brother, John Victor, left last Friday with the battery recruits for Kingston.

Mr. Geo. Fitzgerald Answers Final Call

Was One of the Best Liked Men in This City

In the death of Mr. George Fitzgerald, which occurred yesterday afterday at 5:30, Peterborough loses one of its most widely known and respected citizens. Every one who enjoyed the friendship or acquaintance of George Fitzgerald feels today an individual loss. He was jovial, kindhearted and true as steel and while citizens of all classes will miss him, the deepest sorrow will be felt at his home, where he was an ideal husband and father.

The late Mr. Fitzgerald was in his 6?th year, thirty-six years of which he had conducted the Fitzgerald Carriage Works on Brock Street. He was born near Lakefield.

On Tuesday he was compelled to take to his bed, but hopes were entertained for his recovery. Yesterday afternoon, however, he took a turn for the worse and with but little warning to the family, passed peacefully away.

The deceased had always been an ardent sportsman and in his younger days had carried off many trophies. He was perhaps partial to shooting and hunting. He was at one time regarded as one of the crack shots of the 57th Regiment and the members of the Eagle Lake Hunt Club of which he was a popular member, can all bear testimony to his ability with the rifle.

He was a member of the A.O.U.W., an Anglican in religion, and a member of St. John's Church.

Surviving besides his sorrowing widow are two daughters, Mrs. W. M. Lang, city; Mrs. Frank Hughes, Edmonton, and one son, Lorne, at home. Three sisters are Mrs. George, St. John, Sunderland, Mrs. Annie Mitchell, Winnipeg, and Mrs. Harrigan, Selwyn.

The funeral will be held from the late residence, 4?? Sheridan Street, Monday afternoon at three o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Canon Davidson will conduct service at the house at 2.30 o'clock.

RECOMMENDED OIL TO KILL THE DUST

Board of Works Has the Notion it Council Approves

Prospects point very strongly to the belief that oil will be used for keeping down dust on the city thoroughfares this year. Over one hour was devoted to the question by the board of works which last night went over City Engineer Parson's scheme fully and sifted it, in all its varying aspects.

The first question that came up in connection with it was to what width each street should be treated with the oil. It was figured that it would cost $2 a foot for each fifty feet of roadway. City Engineer Parsons thought 32 feet of a width should be sprinkled.

Ald. Edgar considered the convenience derived from having the dust kept down was well worth $2 per fifty feet.

Ald. Dobbin—"I think we should start in and use the oil. We can drop it if it proves too expensive a proposition."

Ald. McIntyre—"I want to say a word in favor of the water. In the first place it would cost $4000 to $5000 to buy this oil, which means that amount of money going out of the city. We are trying to give employment to idle citizens just now, and it is our duty to retain this money at home."

Ald. Dobbin favored the oil.

Ald. Green thought the city was spending more in road building than would be the cost of giving six men employment in oil sprinkling.

Last year seventeen miles of streets were served with water. City Engineer Parson's scheme did not figure on serving the paved streets with oil. Ald. Green suggested starting off with the oil and if not satisfactory why, the city could switch off on to water. Engineer Parsons figured on fourteen miles of streets as the area to be oil sprinkled.

James Clancy, local representative of the Imperial Oil Company, submitted estimated prices for supplying road oil which was considerably cheaper than Mr. Parson's figure.

Ald. Green suggested taking the $6000 appropriation for street sprinkling and spending it in both water and oil for experiment, and sprinkle all the streets possible within that appropriation.

Ald. Edgar moved that oil be used and that Park Street be oiled from Wolfe Street to C.P.R., and in front of the De Laval, up to the amount of the appropriation.

Ald. Weir moved that the dust be laid on the same streets as last year, and that oil be used for one mile in each ward and that the rest be watered.

The amendment lost, leaving Ald. Edgar's motion successful.

City and Township to Co-operate.

Representatives of the township of Smith attended the Board of Works meeting last night for the purpose of discussing the care of boundary roads. The present system whereby the city is bound to do all work on the boundary roads, with the city and townships dividing the cost equally, was arranged during Mayor Buller's regime as chairman of the Board of Works.

Chairman Green pointed out that the Smith boundary road was in pressing need of improvement. He suggested that the officials of Smith and the city go over the roads this year, and that whatever work was needed be performed, and the city go halves on the cost. If the city took over the 125 feet beyond the boundary road as petitioned for in the bill to be brought to the legislature, the city would be liable for the total expense.

Petitioned for a Sewer.

A deputation of two waited upon the Board to petition for a sewer.

Mr. V. W. Lancaster stated he was putting up some houses between Charlotte Street and King, along the boundary and wanted to have the sewer put in to serve them. The water works was there but it was useless without the sewer. He was contemplating the erection of some $3,000 houses in the near future.

Mr. H. Shurter's complaint was of the same character as he was putting up a house in that block.

Ald. Green informed the delegation that the council had not been laying much sewer on boundary roads of late, because there had been little necessity. Mayor Buller did not think the money for building boundary sewers could be raised by debenture issue.

The chairman thought the time was ripe to form a precedent in respect to laying sewers on the boundary; and that it was hardly fair to charge residents on the border taxes without giving something in return.

Ald. Green considered it was possible for the petitioners to go to the Board of Health and have them ask the city council to lay a piece of sewer on that property.

Mayor Buller fully believed in supplying the petitioners with what they desired but it was just a question of how it could be worked out. Ald. Green informed the delegation that the representative of the riding had been asked to bring in a bill, changing the system of boundary division, which would necessarily result in a different system of taxation. The object of this bill would be to bring into the city all boundary roads and 125 feet beyond.

To secure the sewer Mr. Lancaster assured the Board he would be willing to pay a double rate, which would cover the tax upon the property across the boundary, until it was taken into the city. He felt that the other property holders in that block would be willing to do likewise.

The matter will be taken up with the local member, the city solicitor, and the best satisfaction possible given to the petitioners. In the meantime the chairman advocated them taking it up with the Board of Health.

HARDLY PEACE AND QUIETNESS

Former Police Constable Writes From France

Chief of Police Thompson has received a letter from a former member of the force, Sergeant Downs, who is in the trenches in France at present. The sergeant is with the Third Coldstream Guards, who are in the thick of the fighting. No mention is made as to the locality.

Sergt. Downs facetiously writes that his present life could scarcely be termed a quiet and peaceful one, as they are in the midst of the noise of fighting and sound of guns. He says the British soldiers are cheerful, however, as they have made up their minds not to give up till the Kaiser's soldiers are completely defeated. In closing, he says he hopes to come back to Peterborough if his position is open when the war is over, provided nothing unfortunate happens to him.

Some Horses Were Washed Overboard

Angus McIntosh Receives Letter From His Son

Mr. Angus McIntosh, the "icemaker" at the curling rink, is in receipt of a letter today from his son, Wilbert, who is now in France with the Third Brigade. Private McIntosh enlisted in Hamilton with the first contingent upon the outbreak of war.

He does not say very much about the fighting or whether he had been in action. He states that they had a very rough passage across the channel to France, and that some horses were washed overboard. He was feeling well and strong and ready to meet the Germans any time.

DEADLY FIRE OF BRITISH IN VICTORIOUS ASSAULT UPON NEUVE CHAPELLE

Nothing Could Live Says Wounded Prussian Officer

COUSIN OF KAISER AMONG THE DEAD

LONDON, March 18. — The report of the eye-witness given out today by the official bureau says:

"Prisoners who have been all through the war declare they never experienced such bombardment as that which preceded the assault upon Neuve Chapelle. "You did not fight," said one wounded Prussian officer; "You murder. My regiment never had a chance from the first. Nothing could live under such fire."

The resentment of prisoners against British artillery has been frequently expressed. One officer stated that three German princes, including Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern, cousin of Emperor William, were in one regiment in Neuve Chapelle, and he believed all were killed.

GIRL FOUND GAGGED AND UNCONSCIOUS

In Lonely Shack on the Outskirts of Village

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Dryden, March 18.—Yesterday afternoon workmen found a young woman named Agnes Loutette bound to a small table in a shack on the outskirts of the village and gagged. She was unconscious. Police are working on the case but no arrests have been made yet.

LAD IS SHOT AND KILLED

Boys Were Hunting and Gun Was Accidentally Discharged

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Uxbridge, March 18.—Basil Booth, aged sixteen, was shot and killed last night by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of Guy Williamson, age nineteen, at Siloam, five miles from here. The boys were hunting.

BERLIN CLAIMS RUSS ATTACKS LACK SUCCESS

Charge Czar's Troops With Pillaging and Burning Village and Estates — Will Take Retaliatory Measures

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Berlin, March 18.—(Official statement)—In the Eastern theatre, Russian attacks on German positions between the Pissa and Orzyc rivers in Northern Poland as well as to the north of Przasnysz, continued yesterday without success. West of the Skawa river, we took nine hundred prisoners and east of the Skawa one thousand prisoners and four machine guns.

Hordes of Russian imperial militia gained a cheap victory by invading the most northern corner of East Prussia in the direction of Memel. They pillaged and burned the village and estates. As a retaliatory measure, towns on Russian territory occupied by us will be compelled to make payment of large sums. For every village burned down by those Russian hordes on German territory and for each estate destroyed, these villages or estates on Russian territory occupied by us will be sacrificed to the flames. All damage caused by fire in Memel will be answered by the destruction by Germans of Russian government buildings at Suwalki and other provincial capitals in German hands.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MARCH 18, 1915

AN IMPORTANT LOCAL PROBLEM.

ALDERMAN GREEN'S suggestion the other day about oiling the roads is worthy of consideration. As a matter of fact, it is really only a part of a larger question—efficient and scientific treatment of roadways and streets. The question is of particular importance to the citizens of Peterborough, because they have been investing large sums of money in pavements, and should insist that the City Council advance some policy of treating the roads, in keeping with the quality of roads the people are paying for and supposed to be getting.

One of the first requisites is cleanliness, and this Peterborough's streets HAVE NOT GOT at the present time. The Mayor is the head of the municipal government of Peterborough, and he should insist that the streets are kept clean. Certainly, the antediluvian methods used last summer should be replaced by a method of treatment that is reasonable and of some service. The best method of keeping permanent asphalt pavements clean and free of dust is by means of flushers, not the one-horse, home-made kind used last summer, but the kind used in Ottawa, Toronto and Hamilton. These do away with most of the street-sweepers, who can only keep the streets half clean at best.

Ald. Green suggested the use of oil. We have seen miles of oil-treated roads in Chicago and Ottawa, against which no objection whatever could be raised. The big problem of using oil is in applying it. When it is put on the roads with a fine spray and evenly distributed, it is a splendid method of allaying the dust. The objection to the use of oil is that in most cases it is improperly applied. We have seen roads where the oil was put on by an ordinary sprinkler, and the oil, instead of being evenly and finely distributed, was in puddles and chunks. Naturally it did more harm than good by being tracked into houses and stores. Oil is used on the famous tar macadam driveway in Ottawa, and on asphalt roads in Chicago, with excellent results, but it is properly applied.

There are other ways of treating roads, particularly macadam roads, such as by various compounds of oil and tar. A tarvia-coated road has many advantages, such as wearing better, and thus creating less dust. A great amount of information on the proper treatment of roads exists, and, if Ald. Green or any other member of the City Council, wants to formulate a progressive policy for keeping the streets of this city looking clean and business-like, they can easily acquire a knowledge of the problem enabling them to do so. What the citizens want to see is some intelligence displayed by aldermen in dealing with the question. Those who have not studied it would be well advised to keep their mouths shut. The question is very important and requires considerable investigation, and it is hoped Alderman Green or some other member of the Council will take up the problem and advance some policy of road treatment that will be efficient.

The Chatham Daily News, having an eye to the cleanliness and proper appearance of Chatham, had the following to say a day or so ago that should be noted by the aldermen of Peterborough. In Chatham, flushers are evidently used to clean the paved streets:

> "The paved streets of the city are becoming very dusty, and the passing of automobiles, and even horse-drawn vehicles, raises a cloud of dust which is not only disagreeable, but also dangerous to health.
>
> "The Board of Works might well get the big sweepers and the flushers at work on these streets, as the danger of immediate freezing of the water on the pavement surface is very small.
>
> "The Board should also consider the advisability of sending men along with the flushers to keep the light sweepings from working into the catch basins of the sewers and also to keep the sweepings away from the lower edge of the gutter so that the water may flow freely to the catch basins. The sweepings should be placed in little piles and hauled away before there is time for them to dry. This will do much toward eliminating the dust nuisance on most of the streets."

WHILE addressing the House the other day, Mr R. B. Bennett related that in voyaging to England on the Imperator in 1913, he had heard some German officers, who were his fellow-passengers, rejoice, and become exceedingly glad, when they heard that the Senate had killed the Naval Bill. The Opposition had thus been responsible for some of the wrong premises and mistaken hypotheses on which the German nation had commenced this war. Mr. Bennett concluded by referring to the bright picture which three Canadian ships of the Queen Elizabteh's type would have afforded, thundering shot and shell at the Dardanelles.

A FINE APPEAL.

THE SPEECH of the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, on the last day of the Budget debate was a brilliant and fitting conclusion to the greatest Budget measure since Confederation. Sir Robert attacked the amendment of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and said it was, in reality, a want of confidence motion. He showed that the action of the Liberals in moving this amendmnet was a definite departure from the party truce, that the Liberals cloaked their amendment with loyalty, whereas it was designed to divide Canada into hostile camps and prevent this country continuing its effective aid to the Empire. Sir Wilfrid complained that he had not been consulted, and Sir Robert Borden gave the substance of the understanding, which disproved Sir Wilfrid's contention, that he and Sir Wilfrid had as to the business of the session.

To Sir Wilfrid's offensive contention that the Government's tariff proposals were a German conception, the Prime Minister said:

> "The only proposals ever put forward in this Parliament which ever received the enthusiastic and whole-hearted support of the German Government and the German people were the proposals that he himself put forward two years ago, and I have the evidence under my hand to show it, since he has invited consideration of Germany's approbation."

Sir Robert then read from an article taken from what he described as one of the greatest newspapers in Germany, the Hamburger Nachrichten. It said in part:

> "Whatever may be decided upon later, the actual decision of the Canadian Senate means at any rate a heavy moral and material loss for the defence of the Empire, for Mr. Borden's promise had been foolishly counted on. His offer made an enormous impression on the whole world. This impression will now not only be destroyed, but people will everywhere obtain the conviction that England cannot depend on such help from her colonies."

The following formed the concluding words of Sir Robert's speech:

> "Since this war began, I have not up to this time uttered one controversial word except to say that if there was to be a fight it would not be a one-sided fight. My right hon. friend has chosen this moment to open fire with a vote of confidence and to raise issues of a purely partizan and controversial character. I desire to inform him that we do not shrink from his criticism or from the issues which he raised, conscious as we are that, confronted by the most tremendous responsibilities ever imposed upon the shoulders of Canadian public men, we have striven in the past, and will strive in the future, to do our duty to this Dominion and the British Empire."

When German newspapers paid so much attention to Canada over the Premier's offer of three dreadnoughts, the loyalty protestations of Sir Wilfrid and the Liberals appears ridiculous. They may be loyal, but their action in defeating Canada's efforts to grant effective aid to the British navy convinced the Germans that the Empire was a divided house. In view of the effect in Germany of the policy of Canadian Liberals, the recent protestations of loyalty not only make them appear ridiculous, but insincere.

A BILLION WHEAT DEFICIT.

ACCORDING to reliable statistics, there are tied up at the present time about two billion bushels of wheat, the production of the countries at war. This is in the vicinity of half the world's total production of wheat. A recognized authority argues that, granting that the warring nations produce a one-half crop in the coming year, a deficit of one billion bushels will be shown. The three countries upon which the filling of this deficit of one billion bushels will rest are Canada, the United States, and Argentina. The combined output of these three countries is only 1,249,000,000; their exportable surplus would, of course, be much less, so it can easily be seen that the question is not one to be easily solved, and it behooves Canada to increase her production as much as she possibly can, for when the war is over and trade begins to re-establish itself and the nations undergo a process of rehabilitation, the demand for all breadstuffs must be enormous.

What Is Needed.

(Montreal Mail.)

Speaking in the House of Lords yesterday, Lord Kitchener dwelt with emphasis on the need of war munitions. He admitted that this matter is causing him great anxiety. He said that he considered the men engaged in supplying war munitions were serving their country as well as the men in the field. He made the very interesting announcement that on the successful termination of hostilities, a medal would be issued to workers on munitions of war.

This unprecedented action by the British Government in war time shows how very important to the waging of modern war are the materials used in fighting. In the case of a nation which, like the British, has not prepared for the war and is engaged with a nation like Germany which has prepared for it, the importance of munitions is even greater. Lord Kitchener, this time, has not, apparently, called again for men, but calls for war material.

In the light of the above, sensible Canadians as well as their British cousins, must realize what a prominent part one neutral nation is playing in this war. On Lord Kitchener's own statement, the United States, unofficially of course, is practically participating in the war, in that she is supplying the Allies with more war materials than probably any other two neutral nations put together. Perhaps more even than that.

It has been evident for some time that Great Britain needs war materials even more than men. The response to recruiting appeals, in recent times, has been abnormal. Canada contains a number of units ready to go to England, but remaining here. Lord Kitchener's expression of the importance of war materials, coming just after the British Government has announced a drastic action to keep the factories going, can mean but one thing. The Empire needs materials of war, ammunition, equipment and the like.

It is no breach of neutrality for manufacturers and the workmen of the United States to be fighting for the Allies, so to speak, but the United States is helping the cause of the Allies, just the same. Perhaps if President Wilson would agree to stop the export of war materials, Emperor William would agree to send back his birthday congratulations. What do you think?

To the Panama Pacific Exposition Via the Canadian Rockies

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed resorts, palatial hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Exposition?

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford a trip, have the mistaken idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

He Was a Lucky Man.

WINDSOR, March 18.—Despite the fact that he is minus one finger and is suffering from several painful bruises on his shoulders, Charles Dalton, of Gosfield South, says he is the luckiest man in Canada to-day. Tuesday afternoon he was attending a sawing bee on his brother's farm and his coat caught in the belt and he was hurled on to the saw table, which was in motion. Two men yanked him off the table just as the big saw was a few inches from his body. A few seconds more and his body would have been cut in two.

Japan and China Agree.

TOKIO, March 18.—"A satisfactory solution of the negotiations between Japan and China are in sight," says an official statement issued by the Japanese Foreign Office yesterday.

While no details were given out, it was understood in official circles that certain modifications made by Japan in its original proposals to the Chinese Government had made these acceptable at Pekin.

It is possible also that Japan's marked military and naval preparations had considerable effect in altering the attitude of China, it having learned that Japan intended to enforce its plans.

Italian Council of War.

ROME, March 18.—A long conference, believed to have been a "council of war," was held at the royal palace yesterday. Premier Salandra was the first to arrive, and after he had been with King Victor Emanuel for an hour Minister of War Zupelli put in an appearance.

The two Ministers were closeted with the King for two hours, and at the conclusion of their conference it was announced that an extraordinary session of the entire Cabinet would be held to-day.

Not only grain growers, but breeders and all producers are making history at this juncture.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

WHEN a man begins to grasp the fact that he will do well if he can keep himself within bounds he begins to get over the idea of reforming the world.

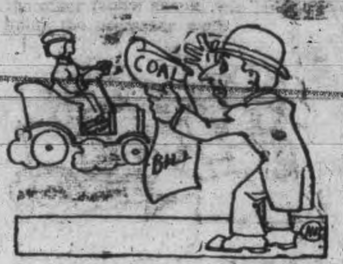
All the world's a stage, with nobody to play willingly the dog.

The woman who hankers to be unconventional, it is safe to bet, doesn't know what unconventionality is.

There may be more pleasure in pursuit than in possession, but most of us are dead willing to sit comfortably down and rest awhile.

If most of us knew we had but fifteen minutes to live we probably would be wondering if they would print our ages in the obituary notices.

We are all anxious to have better civic conditions and also willing that the other fellow should win laurels by doing the necessary work.



A man may own an automobile and still feel ashamed to meet his coal dealer.

Many men of many minds. Many women to offer and bring about amendments to those same minds.

Pride goes before a fall, but an investigating committee also often precedes it.

There is no use crying over spilt milk. Hustle out and get some cream.

The Antidote.

The man of might and hustle
  May call his work but sport,
May revel in his labors
  And pleasures of that sort,
May find in toil a blessing,
  The very thing to please,
The charm that fits his fancy—
  But, oh, you life of ease!

To wrestle with a shovel
  From morning until dark
May be for those who like it
  A silver plated lark,
May seem a way of spending
  A life composed and sane,
But give me rest in plenty,
  And I will not complain.

To push a pen or pencil
  Across the printed page
May suit the simple sinners
  Who thus their time engage.
They claim that they would rather
  Do that than sleep or eat,
But it would not be needful
  To make my life complete.

I know that some must labor.
  From me far may it be
To interrupt their pleasure!
  May it with them agree!
And I will gladly watch them
  And stay to see it through
If they will truly promise
  That's all I'll have to do.

Certainly Still.

"What is Wilson doing?"
"He is on a still hunt for graft."
"Private detective?"
"Not on your life."
"Then why the still hunt?"
"Because he can use the graft."

Their Delicacy.

"Cheer up, Bill. What's the matter?"
"Nobody loves a fat man."
"Oh, that's a mistake."
"Well, who?"
"Are you forgetting the mosquitoes?"

Defined.

"What is meant by the new woman?"
"The new woman?"
"Yes."
"The lady who never grows old."

His Sort.

"I like a credulous person."
"Do you?"
"Yes; I think it shows a good heart."
"Ahem! I believe you are a promoter, aren't you?"

Much Poorer.

"How are you fixed?"
"I haven't got a cent. How are you?"
"Worse than that. I haven't got a dollar."

Would He Fall?

"What are you looking for?"
"An honest man."
"Got a lantern?"
"No; just a little grafting proposition."

Forlorn Hope.

"He is trying to attain the unattainable."
"To please his wife?"
"No, to please himself."

No Time to Be Frivolous.

"He hasn't taken a vacation for six years."
"Poor man! What's his business?"
"He is in the pen."

Not Fitting.

All sports should go by seasons.
  In winter ice is king.
To have a skate in summer
  Is not the proper thing.

A STAGECOACH WEDDING

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN.

I was standing in a room crowded with men and women in evening dress when I heard a cheery, feminine voice near me exclaim:

"Why, Tom!"

"What luck!" responded a young man, with blond hair, parted in the middle, and his chin held up by a very high collar.

"I don't know a person here," said the girl, who had spoken first.

"Nor I. I would rather have met you than own a gold mine."

"Isn't it nice to meet some one you don't expect, but whom you wish to meet?"

Happy smiles illuminated the faces of these two youngsters, whom it made me happy to look at. Indeed, there was one especial reason for my enjoyment of this pleasant surprise, for it reminded me of one that had occurred in my own family years before.

In the sixties—I refer to the last century—my father, then a young man, went out to Denver to grow up with a new town. Albert Reeder had gone there a few years before with his family for the purpose of building a stamp mill on Clear creek up in the mountains, and had become interested in the extraction of gold from ore. My father, who was as poor as a church mouse, found work in the service of Mr. Reeder and was sent up to one of his stamp mills, where he soon became superintendent.

Mr. Reeder thought my father one of the brightest young men in the world and was ready to do anything for him till he discovered that his employee had a love affair with his daughter, Agnes. Then he suddenly turned against him. The trouble was that Reeder had a prospect of soon becoming very rich and had begun to cherish expectations of Agnes marrying either a duke or a prince or something of that order.

The young couple were in a peck of trouble in consequence of the old man's refusal to consent to their union. Of course the matter rested with Agnes. My father couldn't do anything without her concurrence, and she was indisposed to break with her father. But her father must have been uncertain of her, for he ordered her to get ready to go back east to stay awhile with an aunt. Agnes seemed disposed to yield to his commands. She wrote my father that he might come down from the mill and say goodby to her. He did so and there was a very affecting scene between the lovers.

Inasmuch as Agnes was making her preparations to go east and it was supposed that she was bidding her lover a last farewell, no opposition was made to the two youngsters seeing as much of each other as they liked. They spent a whole evening together, during which Agnes told my father that if she married him her father would disinherit her and that she would lose a very large fortune. Her mother was bitterly opposed to her marriage with my father, for it was she who was determined to exchange the wealth she would inherit for one of those rundown titled foreigners who are in the market for American heiresses.

My father was the more cast down because, while Agnes talked about her mother's wishes in this matter, he was not quite sure that Agnes herself was not inclined to the plan of marrying a title and was accustomed to do pretty much as she pleased.

However, there was nothing for my father to do but submit, and he said goodby to Agnes lugubriously. One thing he knew—if she was disposed to obedience he could not move her, and if she was not disposed to obedience her parents could not hold her.

My father, notwithstanding his employer's opposition to his marriage, was continued in his position and the morning after his farewell left for the mill. He always rode on the outside of the coach and climbed on top, where he resigned himself to brooding over the severest blow one can receive, whether young or old—separation from a mate.

From Denver the road westward extends for fifteen miles to the base of the mountains, then rises abruptly. The morning was bright to every one on the coach except my father, and these inside seemed to be having a hilarious time. My father thought nothing of this, for stagecoach travelers always become acquainted, and he supposed they were enjoying each other's companionship.

They were approaching the base of the mountains when a voice from below called out that Jim Harkaway—that was my father—was wanted inside. Nothing was further from his inclination, and he refused to descend. But the request was repeated, and at last he climbed down and entered the coach. All looked at him expectantly, and one of the men said smilingly:

"Every one loves a lover. Cheer up, young man! If you must have a girl here's one for you."

He pointed to an old lady on the back seat. My father looked at her wonderingly, and suddenly she threw back a veil and exposed the smiling features of Agnes.

This meeting between my father and mother came back to me as I looked upon the young couple and saw their expression of pleased surprise, only I fancy my father's was far more radiant.

There was a clergyman in the coach, and the wedding took place then and there.

Lesson XII.—First Quarter, For March 21, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. xiv, 1-13. Memory Verse, 7—Golden Text, Rom. xiii, 12—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Our first introduction to Jonathan, the son of Saul, is in chapter xiii, 2, where we find him the captain of a thousand men smiting a garrison of the Philistines and thus inciting them to gather against Israel in numbers as the sand which is on the seashore (xiii, 3-7), causing many in Israel to hide wherever they could—in caves, rocks, high places and in pits and to flee over Jordan, while those with Saul followed him with trembling. It was sad indeed and a reproach to God to have His people in such distress, but the fault was wholly with them. Let us lay it to heart that when believers are cast down or overcome instead of victorious it is a reproach to our God.

Samuel had instructed Saul to wait at Gilgal seven days until he should come and offer sacrifices and show him what to do (chapter x, 8). Saul waited seven days, but not quite the full time, and, as he said, forced himself and offered the burnt offering, and just as he had finished Samuel came and reproved him and told him that his kingdom would not continue, but that the Lord had sought Him a man after His own heart (chapter xiii, 8-14). Did you ever wait all but the time that would have brought the person or thing you expected and then grow restless and just missed it? If so you can probably sympathize somewhat with Saul. But next time wait more patiently and the full time, for, though He tarry, He will surely come in the fullness of time, whether it be for some deliverance in your daily life or to the air for us all.

Jonathan is one of the most beautiful of all the characters in the Bible and his love for David one of the most beautiful of love stories—a rare man indeed, seemingly raised up by God to be a true friend and comfort to David. But we shall meet him again in our studies. In our lesson verses he is a real hero and, with his armor bearer, starts a wonderful deliverance for Israel. His reliance was on the Lord and his courage most unusual, for what could two men expect to do? He must have remembered Deut. xxxii, 30, and the assurance that one should chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight, for hear him encourage his armor bearer with the words, "It may be that the Lord will work for us, for there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few" (verse 6). It may have been that he thought of the great deliverance by Gideon's three hundred (Judg. vii, 4, 7), and possibly Asa long afterward was encouraged by the remembrance of Jonathan (II Chron. xiv, 11). I have been personally strengthened and encouraged by each of these records and expect some day in the kingdom to have good fellowship with Gideon and Jonathan and Asa and lots of others whose records have greatly helped me.

Jonathan's helper must have had the same spirit as his master and greatly helped him with his good words, "Do all that is in thine heart; behold, I am with thee according to thy heart" (verse 7). They sought guidance of the Lord and received the token they asked for if He would have them go forward (verses 10, 12), so they bravely scaled the rocks, just these two, and the Lord wrought a victory and fought with them by a great earthquake (verses 13-15). When Saul and his men heard of the battle and the noise of victory they, with those who had been in hiding, took part in the defeat of the Philistines, and "so the Lord saved Israel that day" (verses 19-23). The rest of chapter xiv tells of what looks like a great mistake of Saul's, which caused much trouble and but for the interference of the people on behalf of Jonathan might have resulted in his death. Saul had evidently begun to go astray, as shown in his not waiting the full time appointed by Samuel and also in his receiving no answer from God when he asked counsel of Him.

When one has ceased to be controlled by God there is no knowing what he may do, for if God is not controlling it is the devil. Even in the record of Simon Peter when he testified of our Lord, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," Jesus said, "My Father who is in heaven revealed that to thee." In the same chapter it is recorded that Jesus had to say to him, "Get thee behind me Satan; thou art an offense unto me, for thou savorest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men" (Matt. xvi, 16, 17, 23). The tongue is an unruly member, sometimes blessing and sometimes cursing, but this ought not so to be (Jas. iii, 8-10). There is one good thing written of Saul in chapter xiv, 35. He built an altar unto the Lord—his first one. It is also written that he delivered Israel out of the hands of them that spoiled them, but it is also written that there was sore war against the Philistines all the days of Saul (verses 48, 52). Contrast chapter vii, 13, "The hand of the Lord was against the Philistines all the days of Samuel." It was better for Israel under the rule of Samuel than under Saul, for Samuel was the Lord's representative, while Saul was given to them in answer to their cry for a king that they might be like other nations.

Increase of knowledge means increase of production.

CUPID AT SEA

By OSCAR COX

Rufus Willard when eighteen decided to leave the paternal nest. Instead of remaining in the city of his birth or going elsewhere in the United States he decided to take a longer flight. He sailed for South America and, not content with remaining on the eastern coast, passed southward, through the strait and up to Chile. There he became engaged in business, and there was every prospect that he would make that country his permanent home.

A man settling in a far distant land is not likely to feel at home with the people there and naturally longs for his old associates. After a sojourn of a few years in Chile Willard thought that if he had a wife—one from his native land—he would be better contented. He remembered one Leona Andrews, a very pretty girl, that he had formerly been "sweet" on, and it occurred to him to begin a correspondence with her with a view to marriage.

Miss Andrews replied to his letter, and he wrote again, the correspondence growing sweeter and sweeter till he made a proposal by letter, which was accepted. The young lady realized that it would be difficult as well as inconvenient for him to return to America to marry her and consented to go to Chile for the wedding. This was a very satisfactory arrangement, and Willard was happy over the prospect. He bought a house, furnished it and made all essential arrangements for his bride's reception.

Miss Andrews wrote him of the steamer on which she would go to Chile, the date of her departure and the date of her probable arrival. Willard counted the days till she should come and his loneliness would be ended. He had made a number of good friends among the Chileans, and they had volunteered to do all in their power to make the lady's residence among them a happy one.

One Monday afternoon the ship on which Miss Andrews was coming was announced to arrive the next morning. Willard made arrangements for a simple noon wedding to take place on the day of his bride's arrival, to which a few friends were invited.

When the steamer arrived Willard was on the dock, looking up to see his fiancee. He saw her standing beside a gentleman, and when she caught his eye, instead of greeting him with a happy smile, she looked embarrassed. Running aboard, among the first to do so, he joined the lady, who introduced him to the gentleman beside her:

"My husband."

The voyage had been a long one. She had met a fascinating man, and the two had concluded that the most satisfactory solution of the problem would be for them to be married before their arrival in Chile. Willard would accept the inevitable without unnecessary prolonged torture.

Thus ends the first part of this story. The second part is in this wise:

Willard in order to recover from the shock bethought himself of another girl at home who might like a husband even if he did bring her to a distant land and entered upon another correspondence with marriage in view. He was equally successful in this case as the other, and it was not six months after his mishap before he was engaged again.

A great deal of sympathy had been enlisted for him in his disappointment, and his friends were much pleased to hear that, after all, he was to be made happy. He announced that this time he would go for his bride and bring her back with him. A sea voyage was a poor place for constancy when there was temptation at hand. He had suffered once from this cause, and he did not propose to take the rub a second time.

Willard in order to get away for so long a time was obliged to take in a partner. This he did. And when all was running smoothly he set sail for the United States with the blessings of many friends showered upon him. The women said nothing as to his former matrimonial experience, but the men shouted to him from the dock, "Don't trust her on deck without you," "Beware of the captain if he is good looking" and other such innuendoes upon the constancy of woman.

In due time Willard returned with his bride. Now that he was married innuendoes would be in bad taste, and it was agreed that they should not be made. But owing to the groom's previous mortifying episode every effort was made by the Chileans to give him and his bride a good sendoff. When the ship came in Willard was seen standing on deck beside a Chilean young lady who had sailed for the United States on the same vessel that Willard had taken when he went to be married. He was the color of a boiled lobster. He descended the gangway with the Chilean lady and, on being greeted somewhat wonderingly, introduced her as his wife.

"My friends," he said, "I met Mrs. Willard on our voyage out, and we were married before landing in New York."

"Oh, my goody gracious!" exclaimed the women.

"Why couldn't you have courted her here," asked the men, "without going all the way round the Horn and up the Atlantic?"

"Gentlemen," said the groom, "if any of you doubt Cupid's power on an ocean voyage try it and see for yourselves."

MENDEL'S LAW.

Shown in the Crossing of Pure Yellow and Pure Green Peas.

The following beautifully clear summary of the principles of mendelism is due to the Rev. W. Wilks, the famous horticulturist, who developed the Shirley poppy:

If you cross pure yellow and pure green peas either way—it matters not which is seed bearer and which pollen bearer—you will get all yellow seeds. If you sow these hybrid seeds, each will, if it germinates, produce a plant which will bear, say, forty seeds, thirty of which will on the average be yellow and ten green. The green, if sown and sown and sown for countless generations, will always bear green seeds true to the original green parents (barring the always possible intervention of insects).

Not so the thirty yellow. These when sown will on the average produce ten plants bearing all pure yellow seeds, which will be constant and true to the original yellow parent for countless generations. The remaining twenty plants will be impure yellow, each plant producing, on the average, one-quarter of its seeds pure yellow, one-quarter pure green and one-half impure yellow, which last will repeat the process and proportion practically forever.

This is the law of inheritance which is the basis of all the studies of the eugenists and, in fact, of all breeders of animals and plants.—New York World.

Cause of One War.

William the Conqueror lost his life in France through his horse treading on a redhot cinder while he was superintending the burning of Mantes, but few people know the fact which gave rise to the campaign that cost William his life.

During the latter part of his reign he became abnormally stout and consequently the laughingstock of not only his subjects, but his neighbors across the water. One day his contemporary, Philip of France, compared him to a fillet of veal on oysters and suggested that he should be exhibited at a prize monarch show. This so enraged William that he straightway made war upon his ridiculer, and the loss of thousands of lives was the result.—London Tit-Bits.

The First Evolutionist.

The first to suggest the transmutation of species among animals was Buffon, about 1750. The eccentric Lord Monboddo was the first to suggest the possible descent of man from the ape, about 1774. In 1813 a Dr. W. C. Wells first proposed to apply the principle of natural selection to the natural history of man, and in 1822 Herbert first asserted the transmutation of species in plants.

The Element of Chance.

Human progress might be otherwise defined as human success in minimizing the element of chance. In science there is substitution of exactitude for the primitive accidents of the rule of thumb, just as in philosophy and morals, truth and untruth, right and wrong, are being unswathed from their veils of uncertainty and set clearly in opposition to each other. In other words, the gambling spirit in life is less and less countenanced, and gambling, once fashionable, is now taboo even in the most innocent forms.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Royal Society of England.

The Royal Society of England is the oldest and most renowned scientific body, except the French Academy of Sciences, in the world. It was organized in 1645, and every great English scientist has been a member of it. Benjamin Franklin was the first American member.

POINTS FOR MOTHERS

Brushing the Teeth Regularly.

If the child is taught early to brush its teeth it becomes a matter of habit, which it carries through life, and the result is a fairly perfect set.

If the first teeth are brushed and kept in good condition and a dentist visited at least once in six months there is little danger of the second teeth being infected or crooked.

It sometimes happens that a first tooth remains in the gum too long—that is, after the second tooth shows signs of coming through. This condition should not be allowed to exist, as the first tooth is liable to irritate the gum, which will become sore and infected, and pus will be the result.

If the first tooth does not fall out naturally on the appearance of the second the child should be taken to a dentist and the offending tooth removed.

Crowded and irregular teeth are often the result of first teeth remaining too long in the gum.

Buying Children's Garments.

In buying goods for children the mother should invest only in those materials which are very closely woven. It is not so much the weight of the goods as the weave. The loose weaves pull apart in no time, and for children they are practically useless. A tight weave need not be very heavy, but it will wear well. It is most important to consider this carefully when buying.

Then, too, when a really fine piece of goods is found it is better to buy in large quantities, for another fine piece may not be found, and the shine material may be used in many ways.

For instance, from one kind of goods may be made two dresses for the little daughter, each in a different style and with different trimming, a little suit for the son and perhaps even a skirt for the mother herself. There need never be any waste in fine goods, for it can serve in many different ways.

Diplomatic Management.

If you want to break a young girl of going about with undesirable friends, or dressing in an unbecoming way, or reading books which she has no business to open, or doing any other of the silly things in which girls delight, you can always manage it best by drawing her attention away to other matters. Those undesirable friends are probably her only refuge from dullness. Let her go out a little more. Show her more of life and she'll drop them very soon.

That common, ugly frock will never be worn again after you have given her a really pretty new one in good style. She would never read those disagreeable books if you took the trouble to provide her with amusing, exciting tales of a decent kind.

But the good books must be exciting and interesting, not merely improving. The nice dress must be dainty and charming, not plain and serviceable. Your way must look more attractive than her own.

The first essential for the highest yield is good seed.

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Edmonton, Alberta, Can. — "I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what your kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"When I wrote to you some time ago I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had organic inflammation and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend your medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills, and think they are fine. I will never be without the medicine in the house."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, 903 Columbia Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta.

The Other Case.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. CHILD, Beatrice, Neb.

UNITED STATES PRESS COMMENT ON GREAT BRITAIN'S BLOCKADE

NEW YORK, March 18. — Newspapers of the United States almost unanimously agree that a strong protest must be made by the United States against the British order-in-council against trade with Germany. Here are some of the vews expressed:

New York Times: "It would appear that England has refrained from declaring and establishing a regular blockade in order that she may be free to treat neutral ships with greater consideration and inflict less hardship on neutral trade. It is a blockade modified in favor of neutrals and their commerce. That fact is likely to influence the tone and character of such protests as may be made."

Insulted by Money.

New York World: "The financial side of this arrangement is so obviously designed to placate Americans that it amounts to an insult. It is assumed that money is our only concern. It carries the inference that when we talk of rights and law we mean nothing more than cash. It proceeds on the theory that we may be persuaded to abandon legitimate commerce without protest, provided the marshal of a British prize court stands ready to cross our palms."

New York Tribune: "What the belligerents do to one another does not directly concern us. But when either attacks us as an incident of his warfare on the other, we must defend ourselves. The United States would not be faithful to its honorable traditions as a champion of neutral interests if it did not protest with all its energy."

New York Evening Post: "It is plainly for our government to [illegible] its strength by every resource of diplomacy, not only to make its own position clear and secure at this time of confusion and crisis, but to work for the great and lasting interests of neutrals."

Leave Us Alone.

Brooklyn Eagle: "We have no concern as a nation with the methods of warfare pursued by Germany against Great Britain, and we have no concern as a nation with the methods of warfare pursued by Great Britain against Germany. What we demand of both belligerents is that in their deadly grappling with one another they do not invade our premises or destroy our property."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "The force of this special pleading depends upon the view which one may take of the nature of the emergency. Yet the general American sympathy with the Allies is not a reason why the administration should not poltely, but firmly, insist upon knowing just where the United States stands and what reparation will be made for any injuries it may innocently suffer."

Philadelphia Inquirer: "The blockade is going to hurt us. But when nations are engaged in a death graple, as are Germany and England, they are not going to be too particular about the commerce of neutrals."

Philadelphia Record: "Undoubted the British Government has tried to frame its order in such a way as to cause the minimum of loss to citizens of neutral countries, and there is no suggestion of the German practice of blowing up neutral vessels at sight because they might belong to a belligerent. But the order is an interference with neutral commerce."

Right or Might.

Boston Globe: "By what right does England [illegible] obligations? By no right whatsoever except the right of might. Britannia has ruled the waves for many a year, but the assumed authority has not been openly exercised. Now it is, and the rest of the world can whistle."

Boston Post: "The United States can hardly accept this as a regular blockade, and a protest against its indefinite lines will probably go to Great Britain. This should be as strong as the circumstances warrant."

Pittsburgh Despatch: "If Great Britain can establish and maintain such a blockade of Germany, or Germany of England, the neutrals must respect it."

Washington Post: "In a short time it will become apparent that Great Britain has made a gigantic blunder by thus antagonizing the peaceful nations of the wolrd."

SMALL BOYS IN BELGIUM REPAIR ROADS WHILE THEIR ELDERS FIGHT

An item in the Review yesterday told of Capt. H. A. Pearson's work among the soldiers with a view to encouraging subscriptions to help in the work which the Y. M. C. A., which Captain Pearson represents, is carrying on so successfully. A letter just received by Mrs. Pearson, dealing with general maters of interest, follows:

Flanders, Feb. 28.

There is so much to tell, I scarcely know where to begin. I arrived in Rouen early this morning and had the great pleasure of receiving letters, the book of poems, also the chocolate bars from the boys, the latter somewhat the worse for wear, but it was all I had for dinner tonight, so I appreciated it.

I left Rouen at noon and am now in a place which must be nameless. The latter part of this month I have spent among our men at a place called C——, and the trip took me to two important places (Ypres and Armentieres). That my trip has been filled with interest you may be sure and it was a pleasure to meet with so many old friends. I spent an evening with Lovelace and Burgoyne of St. Catharines. Looked for Frank (brother), but could not find him.

I enjoyed the trip in Belgium especially, and am sorry it is impossible to give you details of all that happened. I am with Major Moore of Winnipeg, C. O., M. T. S., whom I mentioned in one of my former letters. I found our men in need of the supplies, and my work here is to collect such quantities of paper, matches, etc., as I can, and cover the ground again. These trips are made possible by the fact that recent developments on the Channel have delayed the opening of that spot known as S 8, where I expect to be stationed. I am sending Mr. B—— a report of my work, and hope you see some of it.

Can Jack steer his sleigh yet? The little boys in this land are rolling hoops, tossing coins, etc., but so many men are away at the front that even small boys have to work hard, and up in Belgium many little fellows not more than ten years old are working on the roads filling up the holes caused by shell fire. The schools are closed, the school houses being occupied by soldiers. Even the dogs have to work, and many small carts are used, drawn by three or four dogs. It is hard to realize the day just passed has been Sunday.

LIVING MODELS AT TURNBULL'S

Enable Popular Styles to be Shown to Advantage

Elaborate preparations have been made by the Turnbull store for their spring millinery openings this afternoon. Ladies who view with apprehension and alarm the radical departures in suit styles this year will have an opportunity between four and five o'clock today of witnessing them correctly displayed upon living models at Turnbull's store. The models will parade for one hour in the afternoon and from eight to ten this evening, and will exhibit fashions most popular styles of suits, gowns, hats, etc. Such an opportunity is one that ladies assuredly will not overlook. These living models or "mannequins" display themselves on the second floor of the store, the custom being adopted from New York department stores.

The management of the Turnbull store have secured Mr. Howard Russel, baritone of Toronto, for their opening, who will sing both afternoon and evening. The orchestra will also discourse from the balcony of the main floor.

The living models will exhibit gowns and garments not usually seen in Peterborough and for that reason ladies, who desire to know what is proper and appropriate and how such appear when worn, will be able to judge by attending the parade today. Mr. F. J. Might, manager of the store, always endeavors to give his customers and the public the very best service possible and the popularity of his living model displayed in former years has established for him a firm reputation for enterprise in this respect.

Gentlemen are not exempt from coming to Turnbulls, for it is particularly requested that the ladies bring their gentlemen friends along.

The public are also asked to view the showing of rugs and home furnishings on the fifth floor.

A Mantell Story With Local Color

What Induced Him to do His Best

A writer in the Montreal Mail relates the following story of Robert Mantell's visit to Peterborough, which, be it remembered, does not relish being called a little town since it has the dignity of a city even though the famous actor only had a baker's dozen at one of his performances:

Robert Mantell was not as surprised as some at the popularity with which his performance of "Richelieu" was greeted in New York.

"The old play has gradually grown in popularity," he said in his dressing room while adjusting the ponderous robes of the Cardinal, "ever since I first acted it. I can remember when Mr. Brady used to wire me on the road to cut it out because by presenting it we were losing money. But I stuck to it, and you see the result out front tonight.

"The play has a great secular appeal, but there is scarcely a performance at which there are not thirty or forty priests. I remember one day in Peterborough, a little Canadian town. We had announced "Richelieu" as the bill, and there must have been at least $16 in the house for the matinee. Under such circumstances it is difficult to remain altogether serious, and I undoubtedly would have loafed through the part if my manager had not come to me just before the curtain and said: 'Bob, please don't do any kidding this time, because there is a priest in the audience who drove fifty-six miles by relays in a buggy to see you.'

"Sure enough, there he sat down in front. He was intensely interested from the start and I became so wrapped up in playing to him that I think I gave one of the best performances of my life that afternoon."

Mr. James Lynch thinks he knows who the priest was and says he likely came from Ennismore but with his desire for accuracy maintains that the drive was only sixteen miles.

PERTHES THE SCENE OF A NOTABLE SUCCESS

Offensive of Allies Continues With Great Vigor ---Russians Have Attacked Town in Eastern Prussia.

LONDON, March 18.—A victory of considerable importance has been gained by the French army north of Perthes in the Champagne region, in the gaining possession of the military crest on the west of a hill on a length of about half a mile and some ground to the south of it a quarter of a mile in depth. This success gives the French forces command not only of the height; but of all it overlooks on the northern side of the ridge which extends from Perthes to Maisons.

The Germans, the French War Office says, have grasped the importance of this advance and launched a very violent counter-attack led by a regiment of landsturm, supported by regiments of the Prussian Guard. The close formation of the German ranks presented an excellent target for the French machine guns, which literally mowed them down. Only a few survivors regained the German trenches under the terrific French fire. The losses of the enemy were several thousands.

Progress was also made in the region in the woods extending between Perthes and Souain.

North of the Arras the French soldiery clung tenaciously to their [illegible] the enemy the preceding night, and they managed to repel without much cifficulty a third counter-attack of the Germans.

Violent fighting took place for the possession of an excavation seized by the French troops at Carnoy, near Albert, but the Germans were driven back in disorder.

All the attacks of the enemy elsewhere have been failures.

Sectional successes at every point of contact from the Niemen to Bukowina are bringing the Russians' great strategic advantage for the spring campaign. The only point where the Germans have attempted a stubborn defence of their lines is across the River Orzyc, below Khorjele, in North Poland. Elsewhere they are resorting to artillery fire with evident economy of ammunition, as the only available method of obstructing the Russian advance without risking their infantry. The biggest German force in the north has its rearguard now pressed beyond its own frontier below the middle group of lakes and the Russians have attacked Laugszargen in East Prussia. Owing to the strength of the Russian offensive and the inadequate quality of his own new formations the German leader is unable to deploy his troops, which probably number half a milion, in the direction of the Bobr and Narew rivers. Moreover, the immediate approach of the March thaws must shortly drive any force larger than scouting parties from the swamps in the broad valley of the Bobr.

[illegible] also expel the German column bombarding Ossowiec. Reports from the garrison there estimate that the Germans lost 15,000 dead in their attempts to storm the outer sector. They have train and motor traction engines ready to remove their heavy artillery. In Eastern Galicia separate Russian expeditions are successfully clearing the country of Austrians by detaching successive divisions of the retreatng army. The prisoners total several thousand daily. The storming of the defences of Przemysl is imminent.

The Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co says in a despatch that the capture of the Austrian fortress of Przemysl is considered in the Russian capital as a matter of a few days only.

BATTALION TOOK MARCH TO COUNTRY

The 39th Battalion had a march out Chemong Road today and the officer put the men through skirmishing drill. The return march had advance guards and scouts.

The recruiting has not been so brisk for the past few days. Only one application for the infantry has been received since yesterday morning and he failed to pass the medical examination.

CONFERENCE HELD BY LLOYD GEORGE

At Notable Gathering in London, British Chancellor Proposes Limitation of Profits and Relaxation of Union Rules for Greater Productivity of War Supplies---Only Munitions Can Save Lives.

LONDON, March 18. — Factory owners, labor leaders and representatives of the engineering, shipbuilding, coal mining, transportation and other industries had a meeting in London yesterday with David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer; a member of the committee on imperial defence, naval and military officers of high rank, and other Government officials, to discuss the problems arising from the decision of the Government to assume control of factories in England and thus increase the production of war material.

The conference was unique in history, at the same time being one of the most important meetings held since the beginning of the war. The first step decided upon was the appointment of a committee of seven, composed of labor officials and representatives of all the industries concerned, to act in an advisory capacity to the Government. The selection of a man to head this great organization was tentatively discussed, as was the remuneration the workmen should receive under the new arrangements.

In an address appealing for an increase in the output of war material the Chancellor said:

"Recent battles have shown that the tremendous concentration of artillery fire recently — the greatest which has been witnessed upon any given point during the whole war—not only ensured success, but has saved the lives of the soldiers who made the attacks. Therefore, if the workmen and factory owners desire to see the country win and are anxious to save the lives of men they must accelerate the output of munitions.

"To assist in this, the Government has decided to take over the works. In doing so the Government proposes to impose a limitation on the profits and to ask the men to relax trade union restrictions and put their whole strength into the work."

Before doing this, the Chancellor suggested, a complete understanding was desirable with the employers and workers. To the latter he proposed that, with a view of preventing a diminution in production by disputes, no stoppage of work by strike or lockout should take place with respect to work for Government purposes. In event of difficulties existing the matter should be referred to an impartial tribunal appointed by the Government, on which labor should be equally represented with the employers.

As to trade union restrictions which tended to diminish the output, the Chancellor asked that while the war lasted they should be suspended so far as they concerned semi-skilled and female labor, which had been usefully employed in the French munition factories.

In conclusion, he asked for the co-operation of the labor leaders in dealing with the drink question, which was a most difficult one. In some districts this was very serious, and, he declared, was gravely interfering with the amount of the output.

Another conference will be held to-day.

MORE STEAMERS ARE SUNK BY TORPEDOES

One Vessel Escapes After Running Gauntlet of Three German Submarines.

LONDON, March 18.—Five British vessels were yesterday reported to have been destroyed by German torpedoes and mines; six lives are known to be lost.

Leeuwarden—Off Holland; crew of 17 saved.

Atlanta—Off west coast of Ireland; crew saved; March 14.

Fingal—Off England; six of crew lost; March 15.

Balmoral—In North Sea; crew of nine lost.

Beeswing—In North Sea; reported lost.

The Leeuwarden was sunk by the German submarine U-28. She was not torpedoed, but was sunk by gun-fire from the deck of the submarine, after an exciting chase of over half an hour.

When the Leeuwarden first sighted the submarine the latter signalled her to stop. The British commander refused and steered off at full speed. The submarine fired four times before the Leeuwardens captain, seeing that escape was impossible, surrendered. The ship was sunk by four more shots from the gun on the submarine.

The Admiralty yesterday made the following announcement:

"The British steamer Atlanta, 519 tons, owned by Messrs. J. & F. Hutchison of Glasgow, was torpedoed by a German submarine off Inishturk, on the west coast of County Galway, Ireland, about noon of March 14. The crew was landed on Inishturk Island, and the vessel is now in the harbor.

"The British steamer Fingal, of 1,532 gross tons (661 net tons), owed by the London & Edinburgh Shipping Co. of Leith, Scotland, was torpedoed and sunk at 10.50 a.m.. March 15, off the Northumberland coast. Twenty-one members of her crew were landed at North Shields, but six lives are reported to have been lost, including the chief mate and the stewardess."

The steamship Beeswing, which left the Tyne for Dieppe on March 2, has not been heard from since and is believed to have been torpedoed.

The trawler Balmoral has been lost at sea through the agency of mines or torpedoes and her crew of nine have been given up as dead.

The British steamship Blonde, arriving at South Shields yesterday, reports that she was attacked in the North Sea by a German aeroplane, which dropped a bomb on the deck of the vessel. One member of the crew was killed.

The Cunarder Cameronia, which left New York on March 6, has succeeded in reaching Glasgow after running the gauntlet of three German submarines in the Irish Sea. The Cameronia put in at Liverpool. She left the Mersey yesterday morning carrying a crew of over 200, and a considerable number of passengers bound for Glasgow.

In the afternoon the first submarine was noticed off the Mull of Galloway. The submarine, which was only 250 yards away when her periscope was seen, tried to get nearer the liner, but was outdistanced, as the Cameronia was doing 18 knots.

Fifteen minutes later two other submarines appeared simultaneously, one on the port and one on the starboard side. Each was distant about 300 yards.

The captain of the Cameronia steered a zigzag course in order to avoid torpedoes. In half an hour he had shaken both of the hostile vessels off.

CHARGES DENIED.

Belgium Entered Into No Contracts With Great Britain.

LONDON, March 18.—The Belgian Government yesterday issued a protest against the German allegation that documents found in the archives at Brussels showed that Belgium had forfeited her neutrality before the outbreak of the war. After recounting the conversation which took place between the British and Belgian military officers in 1096 and 1912, which, as previously stated by Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, had "reference only to the situation that would be created if Belgian neutrality had already been violated, the Belgian protest says in part:

"The Belgian Government declares on its honor that not only was no convention ever made but also that neither of the two Governments ever made any advance or propositions concerning the conclusion of any such convention. Moreover, the Minister of Great Britain at Brussels, who alone could contract engagements in her behalf never intervened in these conversations."

Eight Thousand Autos Taken.

PARIS, March 18.—An important capture of American goods consigned to Germany is reported by The Matin yesterday. Before the outbreak of the war Germany ordered 8,000 automobile wagons from American manufacturers, paying a large initial installment. The wagons were to carry 20 soldiers each. The consignment recently was captured at sea by the allies.

No Embargo on Supplies.

WASHINGTON, March 18. — Reports that the United States would declare an embargo on war supplies consigned to the allies, if there is not less interference with American commerce on the high seas by those powers, was ridiculed yesterday at the State Department.

Delay In Thaw Case.

NEW YORK, March 18.—A delay of at least a month in Harry E. Thaw's habeas corpus hearing to obtain release from the custody of New York State for the murder of Stamford White, is anticipated by his lawyers, according to a statement by John Stanfield, chief counsel for Thaw.

MECHANICAL TRANSPORT SERVICE WINS PRAISE

Major Bell In Command is Brother of Mrs. R. H. Parsons

C. Beresford Topp, special staff correspondent of the Toronto Mail and Empire, pays a tribute to the mechanical transport section of the Canadian Army Service Corps, now at the front, in command of Major Bell, of Ottawa. Major Bell is a brother of Mrs. R. H. Parsons, wife of the city engineer. Mrs. Bell is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Parsons during his absence at the front. The following refers to the section just before it left Salisbury:

Thus it was that one morning a few days ago the boys of the mechanical transport section of the force washed away the grease and grime of their toil, brushed their uniforms, shined their shoes, and found themselves on parade ready to receive the general. When he stepped out of his car they came sharply to "attention" and stood before him in a long line. But this did not suit General Alderson. "I have something I want to say to you men particularly," he told them, "and I want you to gather round me so that you all may hear me." Wondering what was in store for them, they obeyed. When the general made a little speech, in which he told them that the mechanical transport section of the force had done better and more efficient work than any transport section it had ever been his privilege to command.

"I want to tell you," he said, "that I believe the Canadian mechanical transport section has done better work than any transport system ever used on these plains, and has done it under the worst possible conditions. You men have worked almost night and day, and you have done wonders. I am proud of you."

The general was cheered heartily as he moved away. No compliment he has ever paid the Canadians was more deserved than the one he gave the men of the mechanical transport section. They have worked under almost intolerable conditions, and have done it so uncomplainingly that they have earned the name of being the most cheerful lot of fellows in the contingent. It has been said that nowadays an army lives on its transport system. The Canadians will never starve. The section has just been strengthened by the addition of 18 new trucks.'

Put Tax on Legacies

TORONTO, March 18. — The Ontario Government will in future collect larger succession duties from the smaller estates. Instead of all estates under $50,000 going to direct heirs free of duties, $25,000 is now set as the minimum. On all sums in excess of this, up to $75,000, the rate will be 1 1-2 per cent.

Those estates which now go to collateral heirs and to others than relatives, will hereafter be forced to subscribe to new conditions. Whereas, $10,000 has been counted the minimum, $5,000 is now fixed, and a charge of six per cent. will be levied for estates valued up to $25,000. Those over that figure will pay 10 per cent.

Hon. T. W. McGarry, in making these announcements in the Legislature yesterday, took occasion to point out that the estates of all soldiers killed at the front would be entirely relieved of succession duties.

British Officers Hard Hit.

LONDON, March 18.—The British casualty list for the five days from March 10 to March 14, inclusive, during which the battles of Neuve Chapelle and St. Eloi were fought, show that 112 officers were killed or died from wounds, and that 193 were wounded or are missing.

The list of casualties among the men has not been published as yet, nor have any figures been given out, but some competent critics place it at about two-thirds of those suffered by the Germans, which Field Marshal Sir John French, the British commander-in-chief, said were between 17,000 and 18,000.

One Canadian officer was killed in the fighting and three Canadian officers wounded.

FAIRS SHOWS THE NEWEST STYLES

Mantle and Millinery Departments Are Well Stocked

Military styles are to be the thing this season with ladies. The warlike spirit that prevails has had a marked effect upon the fashions for women, and while the changes are extremely radical, there is every reason to believe that they will become fully as popular and common as the soon-to-be-obsolete tight skirt.

To gain a correct and accurate idea of the new suit styles, ladies are invited by Robert Fair to visit the up-to-date mantle department, where obliging clerks will be pleased to explain the season's latest dictates in the world of fashion. The gowns and suits have the Empire effect and the popular colors are sand, Belgium, and navy blue. The skirts are full with pleats and yoke effect. The Gabardine material will be very popular, according to the word of those who know. Lace sleeves in many of the dresses are also good form.

Robert Fair's Millinery Department is showing all the season's latest hat shapes and some extremely becoming styles may be inspected. The stock is among the most complete in the city and has just been received from New York, the fashion centre of America.

CARDINAL FACTS.

All grain intended for seed should be cleaned and graded, in order to retain only the strong kernels.

If labor is scarce now, it will not be more plentiful in another year, so it is wise to encourage present help.

When manure is piled and allowed to heat, the vitality of most of the seeds is destroyed; but when drawn to the field from the stable, or not left long enough in the pile to become well rotted, manure is one of the most important means of seed dispersal.

Canada is many times larger in area than Belgium, but in population there is not a great deal of difference, that is, considering Belgium before the war. Britain is the protector of small states. The greater the area and variety of area the more protection is needed wehn emergency arises.

MR. BOWSER'S TONIC

He Prepares a Beverage to Tone up the Family

By M. QUAD.

"What is in that package you sent home this afternoon?" asked Mrs. Bowser after dinner the other evening. "I suppose it's another fad of some sort."

"Fad, fad!" demanded Mr. Bowser. "When did you ever know of my running after fads?"

"A hundred times. I'll wager it's something for your liver or kidneys or lungs—something you bought of an Indian doctor on the street."

"Mrs. Bowser," said he after a turn about the room, "you are probably aware of the fact that it is now the winter season?"

"Yes."

"And that with the cold weather, heavy food, overheated rooms, etc., the human system requires toning up?"

"And you have something to tone?"

"I have. I have a feeling of lassitude. So have you. If allowed to run any length of time bilious fever would be the result—bilious fever and perhaps death. The impending calamity must be averted. It can easily be done, and in this package is the means to do it. In three days we will feel like new human beings. I am going to prepare a family tonic."

"But I don't want any of it," she firmly replied.

"Then you needn't take any. If you want to look like a walking saffron bag by the time the first birds come I have no objections. As for me, I propose to take care of myself. I have here a lot of roots which I bought direct from a farmer. Roots make root beer, Mrs. Bowser, and root beer is the greatest tonic on earth. Every doctor"—

"But what do you know about roots?" interrupted Mrs. Bowser.

"Roots, roots! You just show me a root I can't tell you the name of! I may not be much of a farmer, but when it comes down to roots, I'm right on deck with any of 'em. That's what we want, Mrs. Bowser; a barrel of root beer—creamy, fizzy, delicious winter and spring tonic. That's what made Methuselah live to be 874 years old, and that's what'll keep us dancing from morn till night."

"I can't make it, and I know you can't, and I wish you'd give it up. There's a risk of being poisoned."

"But I can make root beer, and if you are afraid of it don't touch it," he vigorously replied. "I need a tonic and propose to have it. As this is the cook's night out I'll slip into the kitchen and begin operations. Have we a large kettle around?"

"I presume so," she said, as she looked over the contents of the package. "You seem to have several sorts of roots here."

"Certainly. Rootbeer can't be made of one root, can it?"

"I don't think I ever saw any roots like these before. That looks like the root of a Canada thistle, and this one"—

"Mrs. Bowser, I am running this root beer business," he interrupted, as he stood her aside. "I get the roots, make the beer and take all the chances of being poisoned. If you have any more sarcasm go out and talk to the lamp post!"

It was a fixed idea in Mr. Bowser's mind that root beer was made from roots, but he wasn't quite sure of the next step. After getting down to the kitchen and thinking it over for a while he decided that the roots ought to be boiled, and he at once felt happier for it. There was a big kettle under the sink, which the cook used occasionally on scrub days, and that was the very thing for the roots. He went to work to clean it out, and after laboring for five minutes he decided that what little rust was left wouldn't do any particular hurt. In fact, it would probably give the beer the right sort of twang and help it to slip down the easier. He dumped the roots into the tub and soused them with cold water, but was careful not to get them too clean. When all was ready he put them into the kettle, poured in four pails of water and started up the fire. The winter tonic was at last under way. He wanted to ask Mrs. Bowser how long it ought to boil, but as she had taken up a book and seemed to have no interest in his proceedings, he determined to go it alone. After half an hour, however, and just as his stew had begun to boil, she came into the kitchen to ask:

"What are you going to put into the beer to make it work?"

"How work?"

"Why, it's got to ferment or it won't have any life in it. I believe they use yeast, but we haven't got any."

He suddenly remembered to have heard about yeast in connection with root beer; but, vexed at his own stupidity, he wouldn't give in.

"People who want yeast in their root beer can have it," he said as he stirred up the fire anew. "I am making a root beer to please myself."

He had a dim idea that an hour's boiling ought to extract all the virtue from the roots; but, not being sure of it, he kept the fire going for two, and every time the mess in the kettle thickened up he poured in more water. At length he decided that the stuff was ready to ladle into the tub to cool, but the work wasn't half finished when Mr. Bowser made up his mind that it wasn't fit for a pig to drink. He wasn't going to admit it to Mrs. Bowser, however, and he was sitting around and wondering how he could get out of it without loss of prestige when she reappeared and asked:

"Is the beer all right?"

"How could it be otherwise?" he replied.

"Well, I'm glad of it. I think you really need a tonic. When are you going to begin drinking it?"

"Right off, now," he said as he rose up and got a cup and walked to the tub.

The first swallow of the stuff almost lifted Mr. Bowser off the ground, but he knew that Mrs. Bowser was closely watching him, and he made no sign. The second made his hair curl; but, bracing his feet and trying hard to look pleased, he exclaimed:

"Ah!—That goes right to the spot. That's the genuine stuff I've been aching for."

"Good, is it?" queried Mrs. Bowser.

"Next thing to nectar. I've tasted forty different kinds of root beer, but this"—

"What is it?" she asked as he humped himself up like a calf in a snowstorm and bulged out his eyes.

"But this beats 'em all," he finished with a great effort and sat down beside her. "In the morning I'll barrel it up and have my own nectar on tap."

Mr. Bowser lied about that. He meant to upset the tub and spill every drop before he went to bed and lay it on the cats, but he didn't propose to go back on his own root beer with Mrs. Bowser watching him. Then a sudden spasm seized him, and he grew white and groaned:

"Say, I believe I've been poisoned by that infernal stuff!"

"No. Why, you said it was nectar!"

"Nectar be hanged. I'm doubling up with pains in my stomach! Gee whiz! What shall I do?"

"Mr. Bowser, root beer never hurts anybody," she said, with her hand on his back. "Didn't you fall from a tree?"

"Fall? Tree? Woman, am I a fool? I tell you I'm a dead man! I must have steeped up some poisonous roots. Great Scott!"

Mrs. Bowser got him into the sitting room and on the lounge. A mustard plaster was laid across him, the camphor bottle was held to his nose, and she rubbed his feet and hands alternately and dosed him with castor oil. She insisted that he must have had a sunstroke, or had been hit by an automobile, and twice she offered to go out and bring him a quart of nectar if he felt thirsty. He simply groaned in reply and now and then fetched a shiver which made his toes crack. It was midnight before the pain disappeared and he fell asleep, and Mrs. Bowser roused him up and got him to bed. Next morning he seemed to be all right, and as they sat down to breakfast she foolishly said:

"When I went out to look at your root beer I found four dead cats lying around. Don't you think you made some mistake somewhere?"

"I do, madam," he promptly replied. "You were opposed to my making it. You wanted to see me fail. When my back was turned you threw arsenic or strychnine or something into the kettle, and I just escaped death. This is the limit, Mrs. Bowser—the deadline. I will telephone to my lawyer to come over and arrange things, and tomorrow you can start for your mother's—for your mother's on the afternoon train!"

EXEMPTIONS FROM DUTY

Revisions in Tariff Affect a Few Articles of General Use

OTTAWA, March 18.— A slim House discussed some details of the new budget yesterday afternoon and evening, in committee of ways and means, and the tariff resolutions went through without much discussion. They are as announced in the budget speech except that bananas, fertilizers, cotton seed meal, coffee, manuscripts, platinum, spun silk and milk food are exempted from the war duty of 7 1-2 per cent. (5 per cent. British preference).

The special taxes and stamp taxes are modified in some particulars. Purely mutual insurance companies are exempted from the tax upon net premiums, and the tax upon perfumes and proprietary medicines is reduced from 10 per cent. to 4 per cent.

Promissory notes and bills of exchange not negotiated through a bank will not require a stamp. Press despatches are exempted from the stamp duty on telegraph messages. The special tax on wines is changed as follows: On non-sparkling wines from 5c. a quart to 3c. a pint and on champagne 25c. a pint to 13c. a half pint.

When the special taxes were taken up for consideration some discussion arose as to the propriety of a tax upon the profits of the joint stock companies carrying on life insurance business, in which R. B. Bennett (Calgary), W. F. Maclean (S. York), and Hon. Wm. Pugsley participated.

At the evening session, after some discussion as to the duties upon agricultural implements, the House took under consideration the special tax levied upon banknote issues, and the net premiums of fire insurance and certain other insurance companies.

DEADLY SHRAPNEL

Shrapnel, so called after their inventor, the British General Shrapnel, are thin cases of tough steel containing a large number of bullets—in the British artillery 263 and in the French and German 300—with a small bursting charge at the base of the projectile.

The bursting charge breaks the thin steel case, when the bullets sweep forward with the velocity imparted to the projectile by the gun. Shrapnel are regarded as good "man killers," but they are quite ineffective against buildings, where shells are deadly. For the attack of field guns and buildings and for action against troops in trenches most armies employ howitzers, which are short, squat guns that toss their projectiles high in the air, high angle fire.

In the British army every division has fifty-four field guns and eighteen howitzers. These howitzers are of 4.5 inch caliber, firing a shell 4.5 inch in diameter and weighing thirty-five pounds. They have a range of 7,200 yards, which is 1,000 yards greater than the range of the British field gun.

The defect of the howitzer is that its shell is very heavy, and consequently much fewer rounds can be carried than with the field gun. There is no security that a single howitzer shell will do twice the damage of an ordinary field gun shell, though it weighs twice as much.

The French do not employ a howitzer in their field artillery. The Germans use a heavy pattern of six inch caliber, firing a shell of about ninety pounds, and a lighter pattern of 4.2 inch caliber.—New York Sun.

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, March 17.— Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 998 cattle, 1035 hogs, 76 sheep and lambs and 163 calves.

Heavy bulls were reported by commission dealers to be from 25c to 50c per cwt. lower. Choice heifers and steers that would dress around 600 lbs. were scarce and firm in price.

Fair to medium butcher cattle were selling better on account of greater demand for feeders, which caused the butcher classes of cattle, 800 to 900 lbs. each, to be invaded.

Some feeding steers were bought at prices which were within 40c or 50c of what the best butcher cattle sold for.

Stockers and feeders were selling at higher values.

Milkers and springers sold at steady values.

Choice veal calves were firm, while common classes were easy at Tuesday's decline.

Good steers sold at from $7.25 to $7.50; fair at $6.75 to $7, and the lower grades at $5.75 to $6.50, while butcher cows brought $4.50 to $6.25, and bulls from $4.50 to $6.50 per cwt.

There was no further change in the market for small meats. Receipts of calves increased, and demand is active. Prices ranged from $3 to $12 each.

The trade in sheep and lambs was quiet, owing to limited supply, and prices were firm, with Quebec lambs at $8.25 to $8.50, and ewes at $5.75 to $6 per cwt. A few spring lambs are coming forward, which sold at $8 to $10 each.

Provincial Estimates For the Year Show Marked Retrenchment.

TORONTO, March 18.—Additional estimates for 1915 were tabled in the Legislature yesterday. They provide for an expenditure of $3,468,955, and are conspicuous for the absence of the annual increases in civil service salaries.

The Hydro Commission this year receives $3,117,349, the largest item in the list, but marking, even so, a decrease of $2,000,000 on last year's figures. Following suit the colonization roads grant this year is $306,000, whereas last year it was $562,959. Other roads demanding attention will receive it from the Northern Ontario development fund. The curtailed expenditure on public buildings will leave an approximate million in the treasury, the total output reaching only $1,874,802.

Some of the larger expenditures in this list include: $84,035 for public works, bridges, drainage works, etc.; colonization roads, $74,267 for north division, $24,968 for west division, $59,558 for east division, and $34,000 for Timiskaming; miscellaneous, $8,832, and liquor law enforcement, $5,000.

The estimates thus far total $14,578,425, as compared with $17,407,738 last year.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

FRANK CHANCE HAS SOME TIPS FOR BALL PLAYERS

Physical Condition the Greatest Asset He Says

Frank L. Chance, who managed the Yankees for a couple of bad seasons, and before that managed the Chicago Cubs, when they were at their best, has taken up a new occupation. He is now engaged in giving advice to young men who have ambitions to become great ball-players.

Chance has severel things to say to young baseball players. Here is some of the peerless leader's advice:

Remember one thing, boys, I am not going to preach to you, although at times I may appear to be doing so. I know that a "kid" hates to hear his elders moralizing over some topic or other that has to do with his play and amusement. But I am going to give you some pretty stiff lessons in leading a clean, athletic life, and these lessons I learned by what I saw in looking over the thousands of young players who passed before my eyes while I was managing big league ball clubs.

I suppose that it is the dearest wish of 99 out of 100 American boys to become real big league ball players. That is only natural. That was my earnest wish when I was a big, awkward youngster squeezed into a home-made uniform about two sizes too small for me.

Physical condition is the greatest asset of a professional baseball player. As a matter fact, the same is true of any person, whether he be boy or man, no matter what vocation he may follow through life.

A boy possessed of a delicate constitution, who is growing up into a frail, sickly appearing youth may become a great athlete and a wonderful ball player if he sets about it right, providing, of course, that he has the natural ability and inclinations to play ball.

Temperance in all things is one of the keynotes of success of the modern "hero of the diamond." If a ball player leads an intemperate life he doesn't last long in the big leagues. He flames up like a comet today, but tomorrow he is gone, relegated to some "bush" league, where he either bitterly reproaches himself for having thrown away his life's opportunity or else tries to shift the blame from his own shoulders and unjustly accuses something else of being the cause of his failure.

Good physical condition means good health. Good health is founded on clean living, and the average boy who follows certain rules of clean living can acquire good health, even if he has the misfortune to be naturally frail physically. Good physical condition is one of the most important things in the make-up of a future big league star.

Of course, not all ball players are strong physically. Some of the greatest players that the game has ever known have been far from being robust.

Take, for instance, Johnny Evers. When Evers first came to the Cubs he was as thin as the proverbial rail. He looked anything but the great ball player he was destined to become. In fact, his appearance was so much against him that it handicapped him at the start of his career, and I know of one manager who declared that he was too small to ever amount to much in the big league. But Evers had an abundance of something that many ball players lack. He had a big amount of nerve, and many a brilliant game he put up when he was far from being what we call "in form."

Evers, naturally, had to take pretty good care of himself. He knew it too, and was pretty careful not to abuse himself in any way. There was just one thing he would insist on doing, which I knew was harmful for him. He would stuff himself with candy at all hours of the day or night when it happened to be within his reach. He was, and is yet, inordinately fond of chocolate. He would eat a pound of it before breakfast if he could get it, and many is the time that I had to forbid him indulging his appetite for sweets, especially just before an important series with New York or some other team which was close on our heels for pennant honors.

One of the first rules that the future ball player should lay down for himself is in regard to personal cleanliness. Nearly all ball players are scrupulously clean. They have to be. After every game the whole team breaks for the clubhouse and for half an hour there is the sound of shouting and splashing as the players soap themselves and stand under the shower baths. Boys, develop the habit of the daily bath. It will send you to school or to work feeling twice as fit as the man who bathes irregularly.

If you want to be a Ty Cobb don't smoke. But if you do smoke, at least use tobacco in moderation.

Here is one of the most important rules for a ball player, no matter what his experience, to follow: Be temperate in our eating. Gluttony, to my mind, is one of the worst sins of the decalogue. The average baseball fan doesn't know it, but many a great ball player has fairly "eaten himself out of the big league."

IRISHMEN WON CURLING GAMES

The Irishmen had little trouble in vanquishing the Scotchmen at the curling rink last night when six rinks of each indulged in some of the most exciting curling seen here this winter. The Scotchmen seemed to be off color or else it was luck that favored the winners. At any rate they had a forty shot victory over the Scotchmen which was more than enough to take the spirit from their friendly rivals.

The ice was in as good condition as at any time this winter.

PASSING OF AN OLD LACROSSE PLAYER

St. Catharines, March 18. — William Gourlay, who twelve years ago was one of the finest home players in senior lacrosse in Ontario, died yesterday, aged 38. He was born and raised in this city and was a member of firm of Gourlay and Son, and prominent in Masonic circles. He retired from lacrosse in his prime on account of injury accidentally inflicted by his stick on an older member of the team in practice. He leaves a widow but no family.

ALL BUT ONE SILENCED.

Only a Single Stronghold Remains In the Dardanelles Narrows.

LONDON, March 18.—A despatch from Malta says:

"According to a captain recently from the vicinity of the Dardanelles, all the defences of the Narrows have been bombarded and the guns all silenced except in one stronghold situated on a considerable height, where 14-inch guns are mounted. This is yet to be dealt with successfully. There are also several batteries of concealed howitzers, he says, difficult to locate by the seaplanes. All the damage done to the warships of the combined fleet has been easily repairable on the spot."

The commander of the French battleship Charlemagne in an interview yesterday at Tenedos, Greece, stated that bad weather had seriously interfered with the operations of the allied fleet against the Dardanelles. Thus far, however, he declared, every resistance had been effectively silenced from the entrance to the straits to Keppez Burnu (in the Narrows). This entire stretch of water, a distance of twelve miles, was declared by the commander to now be entirely free from mine danger.

A casualty list issued by the British Admiralty last night discloses that in the fighting in the Dardanelles Saturday night the light cruiser Amethyst, which, according to an Athens despatch, made a dash through the strait as far as Nagara, had 22 men killed and 19 men severely and 18 men slightly wounded.

The battleship Ocean had two men killed and the battleship Prince George two men wounded, while two trawlers between them had three men killed and two wounded.

Eddie McGoorty and Jimmy Clabby seem intent upon taking more boxing lessons, and Prof. Mike Gibbons seems equally willing to teach them.

COLLEGIATE, UNKNOWNS AND CRESSMAN'S RETAIN PLACES

The brand of basketball that is being uncorked by the teams in the present league is certainly very pleasing to those interested in the present and future of the game. And the class shown by the youngsters who have just broken into the game this year augurs well for the advance of the king of indoor sports.

In last night's Collegiate-Booster game there was action all the time, and the result was in doubt right up till the last minute. Both teams have a strong canny quintette of players, and they brought everything they had in them in the line of skill out last night. Both teams played a fast, consistent game, and worked hard all the time. Canniff was high scorer for the Collegiates while Horsfield was pioneer in shooting for the Boosters. The first half ended 17-16 in favor of the Students, but Capt. Best got his Boosters boosting right at the start-off in the second half and tied up the score. It was see-saw for a time, then the Collegiates succeeded in pulling away, the final score registering Collegiate 29, Boosters 20.

The line-up:

Collegiate — Jobbitt, Canniff, Stuart, Lewis, Eastwood.

Boosters — Horsfield, Best, Kerr, Preston, Munro.

Referee, Carson. Timer, Hamilton. Scorer, Taylor.

In the De Laval-Unknown game, the Lavals were again out with a strong argument, but George Robertson and his bunch of Unknowns had their hoodoo sign out and succeeded in continuing on their winning streak, with the veteran captain himself doing herculean work. The De Laval team's centre man, Jim Downing, met with an accident and had to retire. His team had to substitute a player who had never been out with them, which always has a tendency to weaken a team's play. The game was clean and fast from start to finish, and had the Lavals been at full strength the full game there is no doubt but that the score would have been closer. As it was, the losers succeeded in holding the score down to 26-13.

The line-up:

De Laval — Taylor, Horsfield, Downing, Hamilton, Emmerson.

Unknowns — Heaslip, Robertson, Smith, Mulhern, Brown.

Referee, F. Cressman. Scorer, Thackeray.

In the Cressmans-Junior Business Men's game, Cressmans won the game by default, as their opponents full team failed to put in an appearance.

ORDER IS PROMISED

Martial Law for Mexico City

MEXICO CITY, March 18.—A long statement in which he pledges himself to take every possible precaution to assure the safety of the public in Mexico City, was issued last night by Provisional President

PROVISIONAL PRESIDENT GARZA

Roque Gonzales Garza. He announces that martial law would be declared to-day.

Business houses here were open yesterday after a complete suspension of operations for eighteen days. There is no disorder in the city.

One fun-loving baseball writer just put over a good one on his sporting editor. He took a spring training story that the sporting editor wrote half a dozen years ago, changed the names and wired it to the office, and the editor telegraphed congratulations on his excellent yarn.

A FOURTH CONTINGENT

Another 25000 Men to be Recruited

OTTAWA, March 18.—The Militia Department has issued orders to begin recruiting a fourth Canadian contingent for the war. The first contingent is in the trenches, a portion of the second has been landed in England, and the rest will sail immediately, while the third is recruited to strength and is in training at the various divisional points throughout the Domnion. The fourth, it is expected, will be recruited just as easily as the three previous.

The third, fourth and future contingents will not likely be sent to the front as army divisions, but as reinforcements for the first two contingents, which are composed of 25,00 men each, but, of course, this is merely a suggestion of the Canadian Militia Department, and different arrangements may be made by the British War Office.

Details of recruiting will be issued later by the Militia authorities. When the fourth contingent is up to strength over 110,000 Canadians will be under arms.

Would Revise Judges' Pensions.

OTTAWA, March 18. — Edmond Proulx of Prescott has given notice of the following resolution:

"That the provisions of the Judges Act with reference to the payment of pensions or retiring allowances to retired judges should be revised during the present session, with a view of alleviating the financial burden imposed upon the Dominion treasury by such pensions or retiring allowances, and that a superannuation fund, to which the judges would contribute a percentage of their salaries, should be substituted."

"What's a kiss or two worth?"

"Expert or amateur?"

Would Spoil Their Trade.

If all the people that you know
Were honest, kind and true
And always did things up just so,
What would the gossips do?

Don't fear their lives would be so flat
If perfect were each brother,
For if it ever came to that They'd talk about each other.

MEXICAN MONEY CIRCULATED HERE

Some smooth artist has introduced into the city Mexican money, and started it circulating, with the result that several local stores and firms have taken it in good faith without discovering that it was not Canadian money. Consequently they found out too late that they did not receive half value for what was purchased with this money, as the face value of Mexican bills is scarcely half of that of Canadian bills of equivalent denomination.

The police have been informed, but it is impossible to trace the origin of their circulation. Among local firms and places of business that have taken this money are Mervin's butcher store, R. C. Braund's store, and Matthews-Blackwell south end store. There may be others which have not been heard from yet.

The bills are almost identical in appearance to Canadian money and are in five and one-dollar denominations.

They have passed through various hands before being detected and been accepted at face value for Canadian bills.

It is stated by the police that this Mexican money was circulated in Toronto and must have come down this far.

Natural Ending.

"How did the big baby show come off?" "Howling success." — Baltimore American.

A BALANCE FOR THE YEAR

Detailed Statement of Balances for 1914 to be Given

An item appeared in the Review a day or so ago to the effect that a nest-egg of about $20,000 turned up in the City Hall accounts of which the officials were not aware. As many would conclude from the item that a very slip-shod method of keeping accounts was in vogue when a sum of that size was to the credit of the city without the officials knowing it, further inquiry has brought out the following:

The audit of the accounts shows a balance of $11,800 from various departments, which arose largely from the fact that the expenditure was that much less than the estimated expenditure provided for. This sum should be reduced, however, by $2,893, the balance carried over from year before. The largest item is from the Streets and Bridges account, and was caused by keeping well within the appropriation. A saving was also made over the estimates for salaries by apportioning part of them to other departments for work done. Sewers, pavements and walks are charged to Local Improvement and provided for by debentures. As there was considerable construction in this department, large amounts were involved and balances were left over. In nearly every account, balances are on hand. In the garbage collection, $1000 were saved, and this sum goes back to the same account to reduce the assessment for garbage collection this year. The total balance will, it is expected, reduce the taxation by about one mill.

On the other hand, there is a sum of $22,000 to be provided for this year that was not expected and caused by the war—$12,000 for the Ontario war tax and $10,000 for the Patriotic Fund. It is not expected, however, that an increase in the tax rate will result because of the increase in the assessment and the balance of $11,800. Mr. Frank Adams, the City Treasurer, is preparing a detailed statement, showing the balances and financial standing of each department, and this will likely be published in a day or so.

This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, harmful injections, medical treatments or prescriptions." Mr. Seeley has documents from the United States Government, Washington, D. C., for inspection. All charity cases without charge, or if any interested call, he will be glad to show same without charge or fit them, if desired. Any one ruptured should rememer the date and take advantage of this opportunity.

LAURIER'S SILENCE CAUSES COMMENT

Ottawa, March 18. — Much comment is made upon the failure of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to support Hon. G. P. Graham's tentative offer of withdrawal of amendment on Tuesday night if the government would call off increased preferential rate. If the Liberals had pledged themselves through their leader to the course suggested by Mr. Graham it might have had a very important effect in inducing the government to please the Opposition but the leader's silence put all prospects to flight.

A BIT O' BLARNEY WON FAVOR OF LARGE AUDIENCE

Annual St. Patrick's Day Play Presented in Clever Style

It is several years since the Irish play, presented by the dramatic section of St. Peter's T.A.S. was anything to be compared with the presentation last evening at the Grand Opera House entitled, "A Bit O' Blarney. A few years ago the players appearing on the 17th of March plays were without superiors but when the "old guard" began to drop out a real difficulty confronted the society. The older members had no understudies who could fill their shoes and before success could again greet the efforts of the dramatic section, new material had to be educated. It took three or four years of earnest endeavor, three or four years of hard work, until now a new caste of players are available, and judging by their performance last night the new cast is fully equal to the one that made the 17th of March plays immortal.

The plot of "A Bit O'Blarney" is not deep but it contains that which makes an Irish play appeal. The squire, usurping the property of a cousin, this cousin a common Irish rover yet in love with "A sweet flower from an Irish hillside." There's love on both sides, equalled only by their hate for the squire. The squire, anxious to secure a will, the destroying of which would give him the right to the property, employes Cuddeen Cassidy to secure it. A murder follows and the Irish rover is accused. The timely presence of an American lawyer helps to rectify matters and it's Squire Rody, the rover, with Rosaleen O'Connor as the mistress. Mr. Edward Hanrahan as Rody the rover, was very strong. His vocal ability is not unknown and needless to state his songs all took well. "Colleen Machree" as sung here by Fiske O'Hara was very well rendered and "There never was a coward where the shamrock grows" could not fail but to please such an Irish audience. Mr. Frank Grady and Mr. James Condon provided the amusement and none could wish for better. Both have the real Irish brogue and two old Irishmen could hardly be better impersonated. Mr. Condon also played the fiddle for a section of an Irish quadrille in the second act which made a big hit, particularly with the older element in the audience. Mr. William Primeau as the squire handled a difficult role well while Mr. V. McCabe as the American lawyer played his part ably. Messrs. Tim Collins, E. Boyle, E. Riley and E. Condon, the other members of the caste, were by no means weak.

Miss Lillian Simons, in the leading lady's role, could not be improved upon. Miss Simons can justly claim a share of the credit for the affair being such a shining success. She was the director and the manner in which the play was presented reveals a great deal of work. Miss Annie Simons as an elderly widow was good and many a heart was touched by her singing "Terence's Farewell." Miss Simons handles an elderly lady's part with much ability. Miss Josephine Collins as Lady Patrice, the rover's sister, showed a marked improvement over last year.

One of the most pleasing features of this year's play were the specialties. Miss A. Simons, as previously mentioned made a favorable impression while Miss Kathleen Moher's solo was also well received. It was Miss Moher's first appearance and taking it as a criterion she should prove a valuable assistance to entertainments of the future. Mr. Ed. Hanrahan sang well, as usual, and Mr. McCabe's solo "Who would not be Irish" drew great applause. Mr. S. Hoolihan, the only member of the old caste, renewed old acquaintances with his step dancing. Mr. Hoolihan is, judging by the reception he received last night, losing none of his popularity. The two Murty brothers, also provided a well received specialty in the form of step dancing. Although the boys are young they give every promise of a brilliant future.

Tax Rate Can be Placed at 24½ Mills and Leave Small Surplus

Twenty-two and a half mills plus one mill for thep rovincial war tax, one mill for the provincial war tax, thousand dollars to the Patriotic Fund, making a total of twenty-four and a half mills, may possibly be the tax rate of Peterborough for 1915. The matter has been left with City Treasurer Frank Adams and Alder-Stratton, chairman of the finance committee, for a report, and in conversation with a Review reporter today, Mr. Adams stated that he thought it would be possible to have the rate 24½ mills. This would leave a small surplus amounting to some $975. The city must insure its employes on account of the Compensation Act, and just what expenditure will be occasioned is not as yet known.

It may be possible that the City Council will decide that the rate should be a little higher so as to provide money to carry on extra work for the good of the unemployed. If a rate of 25 mills is decided upon, a balance of $6700 will result. This should enable the board of works department to make a start on the proposed drainage system. Alderman Green, chairman of the board of works, placed a $3000 item on his estimates for work on a drainage system, but it was struck off. It may be that the item will be placed on the list again, and the amount increased by two thousand dollars. If such is the case, the rate will be 25 mills. Where the garbage is collected the rate would be 25 7-10 mills.

FARMER ASKS FOR DAMAGES

Claims Illegal Action Was Taken Against Him

WAS TENANT ON FARM

A fairly large contingent of Campbellford people arrived in the city this morning on the eight o'clock train, and two hours later assembled in the county court room to hear the case of Garnsey vs. Sampson, tried before His Honor Judge Huycke. Leman Garnsey, the plaintiff, is a farmer, living in the township of Dummer. Mrs. James Sampson, owner of the farm upon which the plaintiff lives, is a resident of Campbellford. Garnsey, through his solicitor, G. N. Gordon, is suing for damages as a result of being illegally distrained for rent. The total amount is not stated in the claim. I. A. Humphries, of Campbellford, is acting for the defendant.

Leman Garnsey, the first witness, testified that he entered into a lease with Mrs. James Sampson on April 30th, 1914, for a farm of 300 acres in the township of Dummer. He was at that time a resident of Belmont. According to the lease, he was to have the use of a team of horses, owned by Mrs. Sampson, until he had completed his spring work. In June he went to his former home in Belmont, and when he returned, Mrs. Sampson had paid a visit, took the two horses and all the vehicles about the place away. It left him only a team of light ponies to do his work with. The ponies were not able to do the work, and he could not get his buckwheat crop in. He estimated the damage to have been about $50. He also claimed $75 damages as a result of the fences enclosing the pasture land not being in good condition. Mrs. Sampson had told him the fences were all up, and thus no clause governing that was inserted in the lease. There was also a claim for labor. He had to remove a quantity of old turnips which had been left in the cow stable. Garnsey had another claim for caring for a mare in foal for twenty-six days. He thought the work he was called upon to do in this regard was worth 25 cents per day.

Plaintiff stated that he had made

CONVERT CITY'S VACANT LOTS INTO GARDENS

Plan to Remove Unsightly Spots and Clean up the City

The directors of the Peterborough Horticultural Society, at a meeting last night, were unanimous in endorsing Mr. R. M. Glover's scheme of converting the vacant lots around the city into gardens for those who are willing to plant and look after them. It is felt that many land owners will be only too pleased to cooperate and turn over their lots for this purpose. These lots would supply many families with vegetables and would no doubt go a long way towards helping many who do not wish to seek charity. This plan when carried out will help greatly in removing many present unsightly spots and clean up our city.

A committee composed of Messrs. Stocker, Campbell, Denne, Glover, Wise, Ald. Dobbin and Chief Howard were appointed to wait on the other organizations of the city to secure their co-operation in the above gardening proposition. The public will be kept informed through the daily press of the developments of this scheme.

Tenders were received for the planting of Victoria Park this season and for the supplying of the options desired by the different members this spring. Messrs. A. Blade and Son were awarded the contract of planting the Park, while the Peterborough Floral Company were given the filling of the options.

It was decided to take the necessary steps to arrange for several store window exhibitions of cut flowers, etc., to be held monthly this summer and fall. This, it is felt, will greatly stimulate interest in the society and give our citizens an opportunity to see the quality of flowers that can be grown in the home garden. It is proposed to give prizes to the winners of these competitions.

Special Meeting of Council Tonight

A special meeting of the council is called for tonight at seven oclock to decide whether or not an appeal will be made against the judgment of the arbitrators in the case of City of Peterborough and Peterborough Light and Power Co. The time for entering an appeal ends tomorrow and as there has been no council meeting since the award was made known, the Mayor and City Solicitor deemed it advisable to place the matter before the council before the time for entering an appeal expires. The report of the City Treasurer and Ald. Stratton re the tax rate will not be taken up.

"SUMMER TOURISTS AND THEIR FOOD"

A FEW DAYS AGO the Review called attention to the opportunity that conditions had brought to this country in regard to its summer travel and resort business. We are pleased to note that the Toronto Star, in Wednesday's issue, has called attention in more detail to the same opportunity. The Star is much purturbed over the food served at summer resorts and on tourist steamers. It is particularly opposed to the serving of canned salmon between Penetang and Parry Sound. It is equally hostile to sardines and to bacon and eggs, but only at summer resorts or between Penetang and Parry Sound. It claims that tourists should be served with nice, appetising fried bass or brook trout, or pickerel cooked according to the fastidious taste of the Toronto Star's epicure. Between Penetang and Parry Sound each tourist, we presume, would be entitled to two helpings, provided he tipped the waiter and said nothing about it.

It occurs to us that the Toronto Star man must be a cheap skate. Why does he stop at the cheap hotels and go on the cheap boats, where he is obsessed with ham and eggs? Surely the writers on the Toronto Star can travel in the luxurious, buffet luncheon observation palace cars and boats? Why not? Every day the manager gets a big page "ad." from Eaton's and free street car tickets from the street railway, and yet their men are over-familiar with the bacon and eggs summer resorts.

Then the glib familiarity with places so widely separated that no newspaper man's salary would take him to, except in imagination, is amazing. He complains of a wild place called the Niagara Peninsula, of barbarous places like Scotia Junction, of horrible boarding houses in Pittsburg and Denver, of New York, and even Europe. He says the cooks take all the local colour out of the meals, and wants them fixed up with blue berries, bright red cherries and native fish.

We think the Star writer is not cognizant of the dual character of the cooks. These dietitians for the summer resorters are often students of Toronto University in the winter time, and are deeply immersed in German Philosophy, calculus, the history of the Punic Wars, or some other outrageous, difficult and often impractical subject. How could he expect men who are steeped in geology or trigonometric formulas to think of such simple subjects as blue berries and fried bass? In view of the universal knowledge of human character that most newspapermen are supposed to possess in ample measure, this oversight is almost unpardonable.

The trouble is we haven't developed the art of cookery in this country. Men do not follow it for its own sake, but make it a handle to something else, a side issue with which to fill in. Naturally the Toronto Star writer objects to having his stomach made a dumping ground for student experiments" in domestic science. Some day we may have real cooks, or chefs, as they have in France, and no doubt there will be a serious effort made to gratify the Toronto Star man's tastes on the trip between Penetang and Parry Sound, provided he presents his card and gives the boat a "good write-up" in his metropolitan newspaper.

RESPONSIBILITY TO THE UNEMPLOYED.

MONTREAL, Ottawa, Toronto, Waterloo, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Victoria, Halifax and many other cities and towns that have not been heard from have committees or commissions at work on the unemployed problem. It is, of course, a matter almost entirely for municipal and corporate consideration. It is not in the power of provincial or Dominion governments to control the entire situation. They must have facts, figures and details that need to be put into concrete form before being acted upon. This takes time, during which the trouble either intensifies or remains in abeyance. On the other hand, municipalities and local bodies can not only obtain the facts at first hand, but they possess the immediate power of investigation. In these circumstances, it must mainly depend upon local bodies to deal with the evil. All that governments can do is to act sympathetically and back up the efforts of local bodies in such a way as instantaneously lends itself. But the main responsibility, as said, must rest with those on the spot.

Municipalities can well consider the back-to-the-land doctrine, and put it into some force by utilizing the vacant lots and spaces that abound in every district. If Canada is experiencing pressure in the matter of labour, how much greater must be the crowding on France, on poor, stricken, innocent Belgium, on tyrannous, cruel Germany, on Austria-Hungary, on Servia, on Turkey, on Russia, yes, and on Great Britain? Yea, even on Italy, Greece, the Balkan States, Holland, Denmark, and all the countries, for if they are not at war they are compelled to keep so many men with the colours that farms as well as factories, that fields as well as mines, are either depleted of, or contracted for, labour. Thus, no matter how much the problem of employment may tax our best efforts, may demand prolonged thought and consideration, and make resolve and action necessary, we have no cause to be downhearted or even perpetually perplexed. One point that should not be overlooked is the sympathetic attitude of the newspapers, all of which appear willing to further the object sought in any way they can.

FOR THE FARMERS' BENEFIT.

AN AMENDMENT to the Bank Act — one which is only temporary — is to be moved in the House by the Hon. W. T. White, which will enable farmers who are unable to do so to purchase seed grain through chartered banks. It will be in force only from March 15th to August 1st, 1915. In view of this measure, no farmer need be without seed grain for this great production year. The resolution reads:

> "Resolved, that it is expedient to amend the Bank Act by permitting the chartered banks, up to the first day of August, 1915, to lend money for the purchase of seed grain upon the security of the grain purchased, the crop to be grown therefrom, and the grain threshed from the crop; and that any Act founded on this resolution be deemed to have come into force on March 15th, 1915."

BRITAIN'S HERCULEAN TASK.

THE OFFICIAL Eye-Witness with the British Army has issued a warning against the suggestion that the Germans are a beaten nation. He says that they are still well organized, have abundant resources, are fed up with illusions, and are still confident of ultimate success. No intimation was needed of the magnitude of the task that is before the Allies, but, if there were, this surely supplies it. In addition, there is also vivid indication that the area of the war will spread in the near future, and that countries now experiencing unrest in their attitude of neutrality, will break in on one side or the other. This, of course, means further withdrawals from agricultural and industrial activity. It also indicates greater shortage in Europe of all kinds of food stuffs, grain, vegetables and live stock, and of horses. This depletion will have to be made up from countries that are enjoying the blessings of peace. One of these is Canada. It is our bounden duty to see that Britain shall not, as far as preventable, suffer from a lack of food stuffs, cr of such other useful material as this country can produce. In other words, both men and women are called upon to put forth their best efforts so that when the time arrives any deficiency can readily be met. The accomplishment of this does not necessarily imply extra labour, but it does particularly suggest more care in preparation of the soil and in the selection of seed, and in attention to the breeding and rearing of live stock. Towards this end, the conferences promoted in connection with the Patriotism and Production campaign and the bulletins, pamphlets, records and reports that are to be had on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, will greatly help.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SOME ONE told us that the British troops were going to Arras the Germans before the Argonne.

A LEADING ex-statesman in a speech lately said that the gravest danger to the country is in decent people allowing sharpers to get the party nomination.

"PREMIER BORDEN tears the truce to tatters," says a heading in Wednesday's Globe. That's nothing. The Mail and Empire said the same thing about Sir Wilfrid Laurier about a week ago.

THE CANADA LIFE has lost its suit to escape payment of a tax on its gross premiums. The case was a test case, and is taken as affecting the whole of Ontario. It may have an important bearing on insurance throughout this province.

IF CANADA is ever able to have any effective battleships that could aid the British navy in defending the Empire, it might be advisable to make Sir Wilfrid Laurier honourary admiral of them. That would be rather strong condemnation of his policy.

SPEAKING of the war, the Catholic Register truly says:

> "One beneficent result of the struggle should, to our mind, be the disappearance of all hyphenated-Canadianism after the war. There will no longer be French-Canadians, Irish-Canadians, German-Canadians, or Slav-Canadians — just all Canadians, and proud of it!"

A WRITER to the Review thinks there should be no censorship of the movies. We differ from him and think there should be, because moving picture producers have really no interest in public morality, elevating pictures, and so on. They are looking to the financial side, trying to produce pictures that will draw the crowd. Whether the pictures are immoral or objectionable does not matter very much. Besides, public sentiment in the United States is no criterion for Canada. The censorship might be improved, but there are things produced in the United States that we think should not be produced in Canada. Hence there should be a censorship.

MOVING PICTURE CENSORSHIP.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—In your edition of Tuesday, March 16th, on page two, I have seen a very interesting article entitled "The fascination of the movies." That the movies are a strong educative factor, quickening the imagination and providing instruction on current events, geographic and scientific subjects, nobody will doubt. But they would be far more interesting and educating if the censorship would not do its mean tricks in cutting out the best parts of it, thus leaving a film incomplete and robbed of its most interesting contents. The same picture shown in a theatre in the United States leaves another impression on one's mind than when shown in a theatre in Ontario. Concerning current events, that includes pictures from the war zone, the Ontario board of censors, following instructions from the Dominion military department, has notified all film exchanges and manufacturers that all war pictures will be condemned entirely. The prohibition rests on the assumption that the display of war pictures is likely to have a bad effect on recruiting. Says the Chicago Tribune, by way of comment: "War romanticized might be stimulating, but the camera has been getting scenes which are about as little factitious as the cockpit of an old fashioned frigate in action." Why this censor? Why should a special department to censor moving pictures be supported by the Dominion? Censorship means that the moving picture, before being shown publicly, must be submitted for inspection and approved to a small set of men or women, mostly religious cranks, whose edict is binding upon the public. For example, in a local moving picture theatre quite a while ago was shown a beautiful landscape on a European sea shore, and a party of young ladies were bathing, of course in bathing suits, but it showed the young ladies only for a fraction of a second, because the scissors of the censor had done the rest. It might hurt the eyes of the free Canadian men to see young ladies in horrible dictu—bathing suits. Censorship has always flourished only in those countries where the people are largely illiterate, like Persia. Censorship is a return to methods of the middle ages. If such censorship is necessary, why are not ordinary theatres and newspapers subject to special censorship? The showing of an indecent or libelous picture can be stopped and the person responsible for it can be prosecuted under the laws which have existed in English-speaking countries since times immemorial. But there is no reason for it, as the moving picture manufacturers never made pictures that were indecent or libelous. If the moving pictures are the entertainment of the people, why should the amusements of the people be restricted? Censorship means inquisition. Canadians want no inquisition. In Prussianized Germany and in Russia the government prescribes the amusements of the people. Why go backwards and permit censorship, which places the moving picture industry, with its big investment and its vast army of employes, at the mercy of cranks and politicians? It is also an unnecessary burden upon the taxpayers. All the papers bring always the latest news from the war zone, even some letters from an "eye witness," in which he describes how gallant and brave the Canadians are fighting. Why does the government withhold these pictures from the people in Canada? They are shown in the United States and in England. If the gallant "Pats" took so many prisoners as the "eye witness" says, why withhold those pictures from the people, who gave their sons to the country to fight the foe. Surely the recruiting would increase when they see the gallant deeds of their comrades on battlefields on the screens of the movies. Therefore, fight the censorship of the moving picture. The people watch over its morality, and they need no salaried politicians or censors—to tell them which is which.

FARMER ASKS

arrangement with Mrs. Sampson for another piece of land in the same vicinity. This land he was to have for half the hay crop. He intended using it as a pasture. He repaired the fences on the land, spending several days in doing so, and then Mrs. Sampson rented the property to another. Thus, he was done out of the labor on the fences, half the crop of hay and the use of the pasture. Garnsey had other claims, such as caring for two sows, damage to crop by not using seeding hoes which defendant had seized, and also the board of the man sent to watch the goods between the seizure and sale.

Landlady Rented Farm.

In answer to Mr Humphries, witness stated that he did not have his spring work done on June 6th when Mrs. Sampson seized the horses. The landlady was a frequent visitor to the farm and had a room to herself. He admitted not paying the rent of $200, but paid the interest on the mortgage of $300 which was on his chattels, while in Belmont. This mortgage was sold by the original mortgagee to Mrs. Sampson.

When the goods were taken away by Mrs. Sampson in June, she returned them and stated that the horses were to e placed in the pasture and not used. Again on the 11th January, 1915, she made another seizure, this time putting the goods on the farm in charge of a man. Garnsey aplied to court, and received an injunction, which stopped the sale.

Mrs. Garnsey, wife of the plaintiff, gave corroborative evidence as to the land not being fenced, the care of the stock, etc. She was at her home when Mrs. Sampson called in June to take the horses. She took the team and every vehicle about the place. Before the caravan moved away she told Mrs. Sampson that she should not take the goods while Mr. Garnsey was absent.

Mrs. Garnsey also told of Mrs. Sampson making an assertion that there was no need of her (Mrs. Garnsey) locking the doors, as she had keys to fit every lock. To prove her assertion she made a call one morning about three o'clock and entered the house.

Miss K. Hill, a neighbor of plaintiff, testified that the fences were down on the property Mr. Garnsey intended to secure for the half crop of hay. She saw plaintiff putting the fences up. In answer to Mr. Humphries, witness stated that the fences were down again some time later.

"They couldn't have been put up very well then, could they?" asked the solicitor.

"That I could not say," was the reply.

At this point the court adjourned for lunch.

New Bridges Will be Constructed

NORWOOD, March 19. — The people of this section of the country are to be favored this year with two new steel bridges, and we understand the only two of this nature the County Council contemplate on their program of public works for 1915, although some smaller wooden ones are also to be constructed in the northern townships.

The new steel structures are to span the lower Ouse near F. Greenbank's, on the eighth concession of Asphodel, and the upper Ouse near W. Buchanan's on the tenth concession of Dummer. At present wooden bridges are used at these points. The new Asphodel bridge is to have a span of 52 feet and the new one in Dummer a span of thirty feet. The constructions will have substantial concrete floors and abutments. The Dickson Bridge Works Company of Campbellford will carry out the work.

A tour of inspection in this district was recently made by a committee of the County Council under the guidance of Reeve Brown of Asphodel and included Warden Kindred of Havelock, Reeve Coben of Galway and Cavendish (chairman of the roads and bridges committee of the County Council), and Reeve Shaw of Harvey.

Among the places visited, in addition to the points mentioned, was the Herr bridge in the northwestern part of Asphodel, which Reeve Brown hopes to have taken over by the county at some date in the near future, and also replaced by a steel structure.

Detroit has inaugurated a municipal campaign for the elimination of the house fly.

Mayor Rollin Bunch of Muncie, Indiana, is under arrest charged with accepting bribes.

A New Dress - Free

Maybe you are one of the good women of this good city who have set their hearts on a new frock—and the quicker the better.

Here's a scheme that will get it for you—FREE!

at least without having to ask "him" for the money. Look over your possessions and make up a "take 'em all for $15" list. If you have some hangings or draperies, not now in use or strictly in vogue, say so, and write 'em down. If it's a washing machine, or a sewing machine, or a dresser, or stands, or tables, or clothing, or hats, or glassware, a writing table, clocks, or anything else—for goodness sake list it! and sell it! don't let it fall to pieces in a damp cellar—get what you can for it, get what it's worth. And just remember that the one way in this world to get anywhere near the value is to put in a Classified Ad. in the Want Columns of The DAILY REVIEW. Make up a bunch of what you have to get rid of, and offer it all together or singly—but tell what the articles are—tell the truth about them—and let the public know; somebody wants 'em, never fear. The result will be "a new dress—free," at least you won't be "out" anything.

What "Penny" of Nails Mean.

The terms tenpenny, etc., as applied to nails came from the number in a pound, pronounced pun. Nails of such a size that it took 1,000 of them to weigh four, six, eight or ten pounds were popularly known as four pun nails, six pun nails, eight pun nails and ten pun nails, respectively, and in the course of time four pun nails, six pun nails, etc., were gradually corrupted to the meaningless fourpenny nails, sixpenny nails, etc.

Two Kinds of Rough Diamond

By F. A. MITCHEL

The author sat in his study dancing the characters of his imagination, as a Punch and Judy showman sits under his mimic stage working his puppets, when a card was sent up to him bearing the name John Remington.

Now, John Remington was the name the author had used in his last novel. He knew no real person of that name, for he had found the name in a telephone directory. Why had this person called to see him? He was curious to learn. He directed that he be shown into his study.

The imaginary John Remington, hero of "An Uncut Diamond," was a bluff but honest countryman who had married the daughter of a farmer. They had quarreled soon after the wedding, and the wife had left her husband to go to the city to make her own living. When the real John Remington entered he appeared to the novelist to be of that class from which the character had been taken.

"I'm not goin' to take up your time, sir," said the man, "or beat about the bush. It's no concern of mine how you got hold of my story or what influenced you as to the version you gave of it in your novel. You made me out a brute, and I suppose I am one. It's my misfortune to have been made that way. What I want to know is where I can find my wife."

The novelist gathered that to a coincidence in name and another in having hit on an actual story (or something like it) for the subject matter of his novel this man's call was due.

"You say that I have pictured you as a brute. Wherein, may I ask, have I made you brutal?"

"Well, first off, I should have give in as soon as I got married. There's no use of a husband tryin' to have his way with his wife. It's not in reason."

"Why so?"

"'Cause there's no reason in a woman. She ain't made that way."

"How is she made?"

"Why, jest as you made Peggy. Only since you didn't get the whole story there's lots o' things you left out."

"Name some of them."

"Well, Peg never could learn that if a little thing annoyed me she'd better let it alone. She'd keep on doin' it jest the same as if I hadn't shown her a dozen times that it annoyed me. Then she'd give up to me in a heap o' small things that I didn't set store by, then come down on me for one big thing that was mighty important. When I balked she would throw up at me all the 'sacrifices' she had made for me, mentionin' things I hadn't wanted."

"Why, then, do you consider yourself brutal in having objected to this course?"

"Why, because Peg was made that way. All women are."

"And weren't you made your way?"

"You mean a brute? Of course I was. What does a brute need but a tamer? What does a ship need but a rudder? Don't you suppose that if a ship had life in it it would object to bein' turned this way and that way by that contemptible little thing at its stern? But where would the ship go without the rudder? On the rocks, of course. That's where I've gone."

"How have you gone on the rocks?"

"Why, I've got so confounded much of my way that I don't know what to do with it."

"And you wish to find your wife to ask her to come back and tyrannize over you some more?"

"That's my job."

"And you propose to knuckle down and give her her own way in everything?"

"You bet."

The novelist paused in his questions and was very thoughtful. He had written a novel of 400,000 words to show what a fine fellow his imaginary rough diamond was, and the real rough diamond had knocked the statue he had built up off its pedestal in a few minutes.

"Reckon you ain't got a wife?" continued Mr. Remington.

"No; I haven't."

"I reckon you hadn't."

"Why so?"

"Waal, Peg did a lot o' things in your book that she never did to home, and didn't do a lot o' things that she did do to home, and with a vengeance."

"Mr. Remington," said the author after another pause, "I owe you an apology for having told your story wrong."

"Just so."

"And I owe myself an apology for having spent a year and a half telling it and the public an apology for having taken up its time reading a lot of rot. I don't know where your wife is, but if you'll give me what clew you have, if any, I'll help you find her."

"That's fair enough. I always like to see a man own up when he's in the wrong."

Mr. Remington had a clew which he gave to the novelist, who eventually found the rough diamond's wife. There was another dialogue in the former's study in which he essayed to prove to her that her husband would be an easy man thereafter to live with, and she returned to him.

Later Mr. Remington made the author another call.

"I came to tell you I got my own way, after all," he said.

"How did you do it?"

"My wife's so confounded contrary that when I offered to give in to her she wouldn't have it."

THE INDIAN ROPE MAKERS

British Columbia Has an Interesting and Busy Industry

The Indians of central British Columbia, both those living in the Coast villages and in the interior, are ingenious and clever in certain crafts and arts. As weavers, carvers, carpenters and boat builders their reputation is well known, but few are aware that they are skillful rope makers. From the wild hemp which is indigenous to the country they make a very fine and exceedingly strong rope, with a finish which any rope factory in the world would be proud of.

At Awillgate, an interesting and picturesque village in the Bulkley Valley close to New Hazelton, one of the promising towns on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, an opportunity is given of inspecting some of this rope and also a quantity of the hemp in course of preparation for the final process. The pliability and strength of this rope are remarkable and its wearing qualities under the hardest usage are said to be equal to the best rope that can be purchased. The Indians use it for "tracking" their heavily laden canoes up the swift rivers in tow, a test that proves its qualities beyond the question of a doubt. From the same hemp the Indians also make a stout twine and also sewing thread, but not so much as in former days when those articles were much more costly than they are to-day. The twine was used chiefly for making fishing nets.

In view of the present interest in Canadian industrial development the question naturally suggests itself to experts, could not this hemp be cultivated for the manufacture, say, of binder twine, for which there is such a great demand in the agricultural regions of Western Canada, and for which the raw material has to be imported from distant countries. This wild hemp might be made to contribute not only to the industrial wealth of Canada, but also be made a source of employment to the nation's Indian wards, who could probably be induced to cultivate it, and even manufacture rope and twine with modern machinery. The women folks could largely be employed in the work and this would be a factor in the cost problem. The wild hemp referred to resembles closely the fire weed which is so common throughout Canada.

THE ANTIQUITY OF MANKIND

In his work, "The Antiquity of Man in Europe," Professor James Geikie of Edinburgh university declares his belief that man has inhabited Europe between 250,000 and 500,000 years.

All such estimates are based on geological facts, such as the rate at which sediment is deposited or at which stalagmites grow, that are very hard to determine with any accuracy, but no one now doubts that man is far older than men of science originally supposed him to be.

"When we reflect," says Professor Geikie, "on the many geographical changes that man has witnessed—the submergence and re-elevation of enormous tracts, the erosion of valleys and general lowering of the surface by denudation, when we consider that he has lived through a succession of stupendous climatic revolutions; that he has seen widely contrasted floras and faunas alternately occupying our continent—tundras, steppes and great forests succeeding each other again and again—we must feel convinced that the few thousand years that have elapsed since the downfall of Babylonian, Assyrian and Egyptian empires are as nothing compared with the long aeons that separate the earliest times of history from the apparition of palaeolithic man in Europe."

The Drummer.

"I sometimes think," remarked the regular patron, "that the snare drummer should be the best musician in the theater orchestra."

"He usually is," said the drummer.—Chicago Tribune.

EXPLOSIONS IN MINES.

A Device For Confining Them to Their Point of Origin.

At last a device has been discovered to limit an explosion in a coal mine to certain workings and keep it from spreading to others. The device was discovered by Teffanel and is now used to a great extent in Germany and is being tried in the United States. It all hinges on the fact that if you can cool a body, even an igniting gas, below the point of ignition it will go out.

The most familiar experiment to show this principle is that of the wire and the candle. If a piece of copper wire be twisted into a spiral and one end thrust into a candle flame the candle will grow dimmer and finally go out, for the copper wire, being a good conductor of heat, conducts off the heat faster than it is formed and brings the wick below the point of ignition.

Teffanel's device is to put up numerous shelves across the horizontal tunnels in mines and to fill these with broken stone. The stone, as the front of the explosion, consisting of burning gas, reaches it, absorbs a great deal of the heat. It has been found in actual trials that the explosion goes on for about 200 feet beyond the shelves of stone and then ceases.

The miner's safety lamp invented by Davy shows the same principle. It is nothing but an ordinary wick surrounded with a wire gauze. An explosive mixture will, of course, seep through the gauze and become ignited by the flame, but it will not explode beyond the gauze on account of the fine heat conducting qualities of the latter. The same thing is seen in the laboratory when a flame is held under a wire netting. It will not appear above the netting. If lighted above the netting it will not appear below it.—Chicago Herald.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvellous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

Conservation of Fish.

Dealers in fish find it difficult to dispose of the inferior varieties and the smaller grades of fish that are brought in by the fishermen. Consumers forget that little fish are taken in the nets as well as large ones and that all are delivered to the merchants. It follows, therefore, that, if there is only a small demand for the less choice fish, the dealers must obtain higher prices for the better grades. This is an aspect of the high cost of living which deserves the serious consideration of the public. Except for the slight extra labor involved in preparing small fish for the table, they are in no way inferior to the larger fish, their flavor and nutritive qualities being quite as good. Similarly, many of the so-called coarser grades of fish, when skillfully cooked, are not only very palatable, but are very nutritious.

Consequently, it will be seen that greater economy can easily be practiced in the use of this very important natural resource. The fisheries of Canada are both varied and extensive and should prove to be an important factor in reducing the cost of living. What is needed is more conservation in connection with them, or in other words, more careful and intelligent use.—A. D. in Conservation.

WIFE OF PROMINENT K. C. SUES FOR ALIMONY ASKS FOR $15 A DAY

Ottawa, March 19. — The wife of Thomas Roberts Ferguson, K.C., of Winnipeg, formerly of Cookstown, Ont., is suing at Ottawa for $15 a day alimony, for the custody and control of an eleven year old daughter. Thomas Roberts Ferguson, K.C., is a well known Conservative speaker and a lawyer of wide reputation. For many years he practised law in Ontario. He was recently appointed an independent commissioner to enquire into western land deals. Mrs. Ferguson was formerly Etta May Hanmer of Barrie, Ont.

There was a preliminary examination of a number of Ottawa witnesses behind closed doors before Local Master Bishop last Friday, and the writ has just been issued.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson have been living apart for some time. Mrs. Ferguson resides in Toronto. Her action is a result of proceedings that Mr. Ferguson had taken to obtain the custody of the child, who has lived with her mother for some time.

No, Indeed.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY

Barnardo Boy Kills His Employer's Daughter

TOOK HIS OWN LIFE

ORANGEVILLE, March 19. — A sad tragedy occurred about three miles from here about three o'clock yesterday morning when James Stevens, a Barnardo Home boy of 15 or 16, in the employ of Robert Armstrong, murdered Violet Armstrong aged 14, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, and then cut his own throat as well. Mr. Armstrong was absent at a neighboring farm. Mrs. Armstrong was in the barn where young Stevens was doing chores. Stevens took this opportunity of returning to the house where Violet, the daughter, was. She had not yet risen. The lad carefully removed his boots and outer clothing, and taking Mr. Armstrong's razor with him, committed the crime in the girl's bedroom. She struggled hard for her life, from the appearance of the room and made her way downstairs and out of doors in her night dress as far as the pump, some fifteen yards from the back door, where she fell and died.

Stevens evidently cut his throat at the foot of the stairs.

No motive has been discovered for the crime. The boy was like a son of the family, and on the best terms with the girl.

TAKES IMPORTANT POSITION WITH BRIDGE COMPANY

Mr. J. C. Birmingham, one of the managers of the Peterborough Hardware Company, is going to leave the city about April 1st, for Campbellford where he has taken an important position with the Dickson Bridge Company with whom he was connected before coming to Peterborough. During his stay of nearly two years in this city Mr. Birmingham has established a wide circle of friends for himself who will be sorry to see him go, but who will wish him all success.

No arrangements have been made to appoint a successor to the position which he will vacate.

NEXT BIG BATTLE ON RIVER YSER

Gains Are Recorded in Champagne District and Near Verdun—Germans Are Now Out of Northern-most Poland and Northern Campaign of Von Hindenburg is at an End—Companies Annihilated.

LONDON, March 19.—The next important battle on the western front it is believed, will take place along the River Yser, held on one side by the recently reorganized Belgian army, and on the other by the Germans.

As the floods have subsided, the Belgians, supported by the warships of the allies, have already pushed their line slightly forward, and this is almost certain to lead to counter-attacks by the Germans, and a general engagement, as has been the case when similar movements were initiated elsewhere along the front. An artillery duel in the war of preparation has commenced.

There may be a slight delay while the Germans are waiting for reinforcements from Germany, for they have been using most of their reserves to counter-attack the British troops at St. Eloi and Neuve Chapelle and the French north of Arras, but that a big clash will soon come, nobody doubts.

The contest for the spur of Notre Dame de Lorette is still in progress. The fighting in the Argonne forest and the Vosges has slackened somewhat, owing, doubtless, to the return of wintry weather conditions.

Sensible gains are recorded in the Champagne district north and east of the ridge above Mesnil by the French War Office last night, with the repulse of a counter-attack by the enemy. The French advance extends eastward into a ravine which runs from this ridge towards Beausejour.

North of Verdun the Germans had two trenches taken from them in the Consenvoye wood. A considerable number of prisoners were taken. More ground has been captured from the Germans at Hartmanns-Weilerkopf, and heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy, whose trenches were filled with dead.

The most northern part of Poland is now clear of Germans. Their outposts among the village are frequently demoralized, for the cry of "The Cossacks are coming" is enough to make them vanish. Many German guns recently taken in North Poland date from the early seventies. They are moving their best artillery into western Poland. The cessation of Von Hindenburg's entire northern plan, which was arrested by his defeats at Przasnysz, Orjitz, and in the Suwalki section, is undoubtedly largely due to the failure of the projected campaign in eastern Galicia. This scheme is believed to have been the really central purpose of the strategy since the new year and to have been dictated by Hungary's political designs.

Fighting on the Skwa-Orzyc front continued yesterday to turn in favor of the Russians as well as the fighting in the region north of Przasnysz. The occupation of several more villages in the face of the German offensive, is reported by the Russian War Office last night. The enemy lost five pieces of artillery, 42 machine guns and many caissons. Hundreds of prisoners have also been taken.

On the right bank of the Niemen river the war has again been transferred to German territory by a new Russian column, which has evidently taken the Germans by surprise. Battles were fought near Tanroggan and on the roads leading from Borzda to Memel. In these engagements the Russians captured two cannon, four machine guns, two ammunition automobiles and prisoners.

In East Galicia the Russians annihilated three companies of Germans, who launched an attack near Oravozil. The survivors, numbering three officers and 93 men, were taken prisoners. Fighting here was at close range, and the Russians ended it with a bayonet charge.

M.L.G. Armstrong Gets High Honor

(Special to The Review.)

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask., March 19. — M. L. G. Armstrong was last night elected Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of Saskatchewan and representative to the Imperial Grand Orange Council of the world. Mr. Armstrong was initiated into the mysteries of the Loyal Orange Association at the inauguration of Duke of Manchester Lodge, Peterborough, in 1908, and was its first recording secretary. On taking up residence in Saskatchewan he immediately affiliated in Saskatoon, and passed rapidly through the chairs of county master, grand director of ceremonies, associate deputy grand master and deputy grand master. He is also grand lecturer of the Grand Black Chapter of Saskatchewan and prominently connected with the Knights of Pythias, I. O. O. F., and Masonic Order.

Commander of Local Unit, 39th Battalion

Captain C. R. Spencer, of the 39th Battalion Canadian Expeditionary Force, is a son of Rev. Canon Spencer of Hamilton. Born in Laura, Ont., in 1881, he received his early education at Trinity College, Port Hope, where he spent eight years. He afterwards attended Trinity University, Toronto, from where he graduated as Bachelor of Arts in 1905. The same year he was ordained a deacon of the Anglican Church. In 1908 he was ordained a priest and received his M.A. His first duties as clergyman were in Cardiff and Monmouth where he spent four years. The two years following he was at Young's Point and for the past five years has been curate at the parish of Cavan.

His first military experience was with the Queen's Own to which he was connected for two years during his college career. He received his commission as lieutenant in October, 1912, and was attached to the 46th

CAPTAIN C. R. SPENCER.

Regiment. His commission as captain was received in December, 1913, and his F. O. certificate in March, 1914. He was appointed provisionally to the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., on the 9th of January, 1915. Capt. Spencer married Miss Ethel Maude Holmes of Haliburton in August, 1904. They have six children.

It is interesting to note that this young officer springs from a military family. Capt. Thos. Selby of the 12th York Rangers is his grandfather, and Lt.-Col. John Selby of the same unit is a cousin. His father, Rev. Canon Spencer, served with D Company of the Midland Regiment in the Fenian raid, while a brother is at present a lieutenant with the 97th Regiment. Besides a military spirit being prevalent in the Spencer family there is also a religious strain. As mentioned above, the captain's father is Rev. Canon Spencer of Hamilton. Of his four sons, three are clergymen, two in this country and one a missionary in Japan. Canon Spencer also has five daughters, two of whom are laboring for souls in foreign lands, one in Japan and the other in Honolulu.

One of the horrors of war that should be ended at once is the changing of names of all the cities of a conquered or occupied territory. The old names were bad enough.

FRENCH CRAFT IS LOST IN DARING ADVENTURE

Travelling Without a Periscope it Tried to Sink the Turkish Cruiser Sultan Selim in the Dardanelles—Straits Are Clear as Far as Kepex Bernu—Lull in Bombardment Operations.

LONDON, March 19.—The loss of a French submarine boat, in an attempt to run through the Dardanelles, is described by Rear Admiral Guepratte of the French Dardanelles fleet, in an interview with The Daily Telegraph's Tenedos correspondent. The attempt apparently was made some time ago, although no announcement has been made of it heretofore.

"The attempt had as its object the sinking of the Turkish cruiser Sultan Selim (formerly the German cruiser Goeben)."

The correspondent says Rear Admiral Guepratte told him the submarine was submerged and successfully navigated the straits up to the corner where the Asiatic coast juts out at Nagara.

"Through some miscalculation, which is quite natural when a submarine is trying to thread tortuous channel without the aid of a periscope, the hull struck the rock shore, compelling the boat to rise to the surface. Immediately the submarine appeared the forts opened fire, sinking her. Only a few of her crew escaped, and these were made prisoners.

"Regarding the present situation in the Dardanelles, Rear Admiral Guepratte said the waters of the straits are clear as far as Kepez Bernu, to which point all vessels of the fleet can safely navigate. The main mine fields are between Chanak Kilessi and Kalid Bahr, however, where also are the main coast defences.

"When these are removed the rest will be easy, although the assistance of land forces will be needed. For the final success of the undertaking not a shadow of doubt remains. The French fleet thus far has sustained no casualties."

There is a temporary lull in the bombardment of the Dardanelles and Smyrna, according to an Athens despatch, which gives no reason for this, but it is thought to be due to unfavorable weather conditions. The Turks are takng advantage of this to repair as far as possible the damage to the forts and batteries, and they express confidence, which is shared by the German field marshal, Baron von der Goltz, that the straits are impregnable.

The belief is held here, however, that as soon as the ships receive fresh supplies of ammunition, they will resume the attack with even greater force.

The Vossische's Zeitung's Athens correspondent says the governor of Smyrna at the beginning of the recent bombardment arrested two thousand British and French residents of Smyrna and threatened to expose them to the fire of the warships if the bombardment was continued.

"The British admiral," the correspondent adds, "thereupon opened negotiations through the American consul, demanding the leveling of the forts and the surrender of the harbor, saying the city itself might remain under Turkish administration. The governor rejected this proposal. The admiral then demanded the right to pursue a German warship into the harbor without interference from the forts. This demand was also rejected."

DEATH OF MRS. CHAPMAN HOLMES

Capt. Spencer has been absent for a few days, being in Wilberforce, Ont., where his wife's mother, Mrs. Chapman Holmes was seriously ill. He left Wilberforce yesterday morning for Peterborough and this morning received a message to the effect that she passed away last night. Her husband, four daughters and one son survive.

German Agents Are Active Among Natives In Persia.

LONDON, March 19. — The India Office announces that documents have reached the Government showing that German consular officers in Persia and agents of German firms have been engaged in intrigues with the object of facilitating a Turkish invasion of Persia and promoting a rising of the tribes against Great Britain.

The former German consul at Bushire, on the Persian Gulf, who is now stationed at Chiraz, aided by Germans and Indians from Berlin, says the India Office, has been circulating pamphlets addressed to the Indian army, calling upon soldiers to "throw off the hated yoke and rise and kill your officers."

MAN WITH MANY ALIASES SENTENCED TO SIX MONTHS

Port Arthur, Ont., March 19.—N. F. Finlay, a bogus lieutenant, with at least five aliases, and wanted in Quebec, Ottawa, Toronto, London, Hamilton, Sudbury and Fort William, pleaded guilty in Port Arthur on a charge of passing worthless cheques, and was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

This is the man who operated in this city.

When the prison doors open upon the expiration of his term, Finlay will be re-arrested and brought to this city to stand trial on charges which Chief Thompson says will be preferred by parties in Peterborough who have been swindled it is alleged, by the same man. Chief Thompson has written to the chief at Port Arthur, and will endeavor to have him identified, by means of a fur cap which was obtained from Barrie's Limited, by the party who was in Peterborough.

German Submarine Destroys British Steamer

LONDON, March 19.—The British steamer Glenartney, of Glasgow, was torpedoed yesterday morning off Beachy Head by a German submarine, which gave no notice of her intention. In the scramble for the boats one of the crew was drowned; the others, numbering 40, several of whom were injured, were picked up by a steamer and landed at New Haven.

The Glenartney, which was of 3,309 tons register, was bound from Bangkok, Siam, for London, loaded with 8,000 tons of rice.

A despatch to Lloyd's from Odessa says the British steamer Wolverine has been wrecked by a mine off Sonthana. A Greek soldier is stated to have been killed and four were injured.

Costly For the Germans.

PARIS, March 19.—The combat at Carnoy, which began the evening of March 14 by the explosion of a heavily-charged mine in one of the French advanced trenches, was vain and costly for the Germans, according to an official note issued by the War Office yesterday.

"The battle lasted until the 17th," the note adds "and was marked by sharp fighting, numerous counter-attacks and systematic bombardments. The German offensive was finally repulsed and the French succeeded in making a slight gain on this part of the front."

VIVID TALE OF CHASE THAT PUT END TO THE BLUCHER

H.M.S. Tiger and Her Boy Hero Return to Duty

Mrs. Remy Elmsley, 13 Elmsley place Toronto, has received a letter from her son, Lieut. Theo. Elmsley, of H. M. S. Tiger, which contains some interesting comment on the North Sea fight, in which the Blucher was sunk, and shows that he himself had an almost miraculous escape from death. The top of the turret of which he was in command was blown off and two of his men were killed and three wounded.

For days after the North Sea fight the Germans persisted in the lie that they had sunk the Tiger.

Like Huge Greyhounds.

The following description of the "Tiger on the Trail" is written by a leading signalman, and accompanies Lieut. Elmsley's letter home:

"Up went the signal, '22 knots' and the battle cruisers were straining like huge greyhounds to go off at top speed, when we suddenly sighted the enemy.

"Off went the alarm and everyone was at action stations before you could look round, except the captain, engineer captain, commander and signalman.

"As soon as they sighted us the enemy turned tail and started off at full speed in an easterly direction, so we saw it was going to be a race.

"Our squadron gradually worked up until they were going at full speed. The enemy were then seen to alter their course to starboard, making towards Heligoland as fast as they could. The chase went on for some time, and we were gradually overhauling them. We then got up to our destroyers, who reported seven large ships in line ahead and an enemy destroyer flotilla. The flagship, the Lion, made the signal to our destroyers to give chase.

On the Enemy's Trail.

"You should have seen them rip along hot on the enemy's trail. They were off like the shot from a gun. We were at fever pitch with excitement, as we were gaining on them every minute now. It was about ten minutes to nine when the enemy fired the first shot at our destroyers, as they were worrying the German ships.

"The action then began in earnest. All went below decks, except myself and two other signalmen, who remained on the bridge looking out for submarines, etc., until it got too warm for us. We had begun to get their range lovely, and several of our broadsides got home on them. We were having a splendid view of the battle from the bridge when enemy shells began to fall just short and just ahead of us, so we had orders to come down to the conning tower. Everything was going splendidly when we got down there. The captain was giving orders as cool as a cucumber, as if we were carrying out some everyday evolution. We were right in the thick of the battle then, and the noise was terrific with our own broadsides and the enemy's shells exploding around us, but try as they might they could not seem to hit us.

Tiger Led the Line.

"We had already set fire to two of the enemy's ships, and had taken the lead of our line, when the captain ordered fire to be directed on the Blucher, which was seen to be in difficulties, and dropping back from the remainder. We altered our course so as to close on her, and that was when our casualties commenced, as we had to get inside her range to finish her off [illegible].

"Shells were whistling all around us, and all of a sudden there was a terrific explosion right underneath me. It was about the nearest thing I ever had. When I picked myself up there was a heap of wounded officers and men lying right at my feet, and Engineer Captain Taylor, not an arm's length away, mortally wounded.

"I shall never forget it. His last words were: 'Remember my wife and daughter.' He expired before he could finish the word 'daughter.' It was that shell which accounted for the majority of our casualties. We avenged them by sinking the Blucher.

"The remainder of the enemy were by that time miles away, and with very little hope of catching them before they got under cover of their mine fields. We considered it a good day's work, and sounded the cease fire. It must have been awful on board the German ships."

Lieut. Elmsley, who was in the shattered turret, writes as follows:—

"H. M. S. Tiger.

"We have been very busy lately, doing our round of things, drills, etc., and to-day the King came up and inspected the fleet. He came aboard here, and we did the usual stunt in walking past and saluting. Then he inspected the ship, and looked at the places where we were hit, which have now all been mended.

The Turret Jammed.

"Now that everything is mended, I can tell you what happened. About two-thirds of the way through the action a shell, either 11 or 12 in., we don't know which, struck the top of my turret. It exploded, blew in the roof, and created havoc inside, killing two men and wounding three, and making most of us badly shaken. It also jammed the turret. I tried everything I could think of to get the turret going again, but didn't find the trouble till just after the 'cease fire' had gone. And so I didn't get the opportunity of getting some of my own back.

"Why we were not all killed I don't know. The worst part was looking after the wounded, for the men were too dazed to help me at first. I had rotten nightmares after it.

Famine a Fake?

"It doesn't look as if they will come out again except at a last resort, so we will kick our heels for another year or so. I wish they would land us and let us have an effort there. I do not believe for a moment that the Germans are short of food. That is all engineered for our press, and the submarine show is to try and cause trouble between America and ourselves, and nothing whatever to do with food. Their agents over here know quite well that our papers will put in any 'tosh' that is given to them in order to fill them up with yarns about the scarcity of food in Germany. I heard from some people who have only just returned from there that there is plenty."

Tiger's Boy Hero.

Lieut. Elmsley also repeats particulars of the bravery of one of the boys on the Tiger. "After Engineer-Captain Taylor and four stokers had been killed by a shell the periscope glasses of a turret were fogged by smoke and spray. A volunteer was asked for to venture outside the turret and wipe the glasses. A boy, first-class, climbed outside and cleaned the periscope. Firing recommenced, but the boy was forgotten. He remained on the turret and cleaned the glass throughout the action, being practically deafened by the roar of the guns."

New Regulation For Plug Tobacco

Indentification Marks Must be Shown

A new regulation for the sale of tobacco has been placed in operation by the inland revenue department. It applies to the retailing of plug tobacco, manufactured in Canada. Hitherto wholesalers have been in the habit of selling this class of tobacco in small quantities from the caddies as it comes from the manufacturer, which have been retailed in the stores without identity. It has now to be placed in a suitable box with a stamp bearing the number of the caddy from which it was originally taken.

The amended regulation now reads: In the case of plug tobacco manufactured in Canada, each plug having attached thereto the manufacturer's metal tag or brand, a dealer will be permitted to open a caddy not exceeding in weight 25 pounds, and remove from it such quantities of plugs, not less than one pound, as may be required for immediate need. The quantity so removed shall be placed in a suitable box made of cardboard or such other material as may be approved by the department. On the box shall be placed a stamp, signed by the dealer, to the following effect: This tobacco is the manufacture of ......, and has been taken from the caddy bearing duty paid stamp No. ...... (dealer's name) .... address. The contents of this package may only be removed for sale to a customer, and when the package is empty it shall be immediately destroyed."

Otonabee Couple Are Remembered

A very pleasant and memorable evening was spent at the home of Mr. David Rice, Atonabee, on Wednesday evening, when some two hundred of their friends and acquaintances gathered there and presented Mr. and Mrs. Rice with two handsome chairs and a set of china dishes. The following address was read:—

To Mr. and Mrs. Rice,
Otonabee,

Dear Friends,—

We, your neighbors and associations for so many years, having learned of your contemplated removal from our midst, gather around you this evening. Sentiments of regret and pleasure have brought us together, regret because of the thought that we are now to say adieu to you, on your departure from our midst, and pleasure because this opportunity has been afforded us to assemble about you and wish you [illegible] new field of labor. We wish to-night to express to you the very high esteem in which you are held in this community.

You are leaving Otonabee carrying with you the admiration, love and good wishes of all who have the privilege of knowing you.

Your ready, witty and genial way, Mr. Rice, have made you a person sought after by many friends. You, Mrs. Rice, always extended a willing hand, to help in everything that was good, especially where sympathy and aid was needed at the sick bed. This has won for you a warm place in all our hearts. Remembering this, we feel sorry at the prospect of losing you.

Permit us here to add that we will very much miss the sweet innocent voices of your children. In losing them we feel that in coming years there will be a gap which will be hard to fill.

Therefore, in view of your inestimable qualities and services rendered, we cannot permit you to depart from us without presenting these few earnest words to you and to these we desire to add and tender to you these chairs and dishes, wishing you peace, happiness and prosperity in your city home.

Signed on behalf of your friends:

GRAND MASTER FORDE REPORTS TO GRAND LODGE

The Bilingual Question Has Prominent Place in Summary of Years Work

Ottawa, March 19.—"In this city certain electors have brought action in the courts to compel the French separate schools to do their duty in the matter of the bilingual school question, and have obtained a favorable judgment. The case has been appealed and it is said that it will be carried to the Privy Council, but I am confident that in the end the government's contention will be upheld and eventually these schools will be entirely done away with."

The foregoing statements are from the anual report of Grand Master F. W. Forde, of the Grand Orange Lodge of Eastern Ontario, which is in session here. The Grand Master was unable to be present and in his absence Mr. E. H. McLean, of Bowmanville, presided, and read the annual report. Other addresses were given by the grand secretary, F. M. Clarke, of Belleville; the grand treasurer; Duncan Monroe, of Cornwall; Mr. T. H. Essanay, past grand master of Ontario West; T. H. Newcombe, grand master of Manitoba, and others.

The report of the committee on legislation was presented by Colonel John Hughes, and after this a committee was appointed to strike the standing committees for the year.

Order Expands.

"It is most fitting," says Grand Master Forde, in his report, "that we, whose claim is that everyone is a loyal Britisher, should at this crisis in the affairs of the Empire, hold our annual deliberations in the very heart and center of this great country which forms no unimportant part of that great Empire. I am particularly pleased to be able to announce to you that, notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions of the past year, our order has been wonderfully permitted to continue to expand. During the past year one primary lodge became dormant, and seven new primary lodges were opened, an increase of six; one new county lodge, that of Ottawa, has been opened. During the year, 1704 new members were initiated, 419 joined by certificate, 244 were installed, giving a total gain of 2,367. This showing is the more pleasing in that our new organizer and the members generally have made it the keynote of their policy, to look for quality rather than quantity, for their new membership.

Bi-lingual Schools.

"Certain fanatics among the French Canadians have stirred up an agitation with regard to the regulations of the department of education on this question, and many school boards have refused to obey them. The consequence is that the majority of these schools have had their grants cut off, and we are assured that they will not receive them until they mend their ways and obey the law. In this city certain electors have brought action in the courts to compel the French separate schools to do their duty in this matter, and have obtained a favorable judgment. The case has been appealed, and it is said that it will be carriedt o the Privy Council, but I am confident that in the end the government's contention will be upheld, and eventually these schools will be entirely done away with.

Irish Home Rule.

"The home rule bill has, through the treachery of the Asquith government, been passed during the political truce which the patriotic Unionists had consented to for the period oft he war. The matter is closed until peace has been established, but immediately that day comes, the loyal Unionists of Ireland will prepare ot resist by every means in their power the enforcement of this iniquitous measure, and we confidently expect and pray to God that their efforts in the cause of freedom may be crowned with success. It will be our duty to give them every assistance that lies in our power.

Orangemen at the Front.

"In the great armies that have been raised here numerically and in all ways Orangemen hav been at the forefront. From the minister of militia down, in every rank and arm of the service the Orangemen have more than done their share. We are informed that of the 33,000 who formed the first contingent, nearly one quarter are Orange brethren, and that the same proportion is carried out in the second and third contingents. We are proud that of all the church societies and organizations of this country, ours stands in this respect triumphantly supreme, consistently carrying out the principles it advocates and to which it adheres."

The Sentinel.

"The Sentinel, the official organ of our order, has as usual been a safe and sure tower of strength and has exercised sleepless vigilance on our behalf. It has not hesitated on all occasions to tell the public exactly what it thought, and has hewed straight to the line 'let the chips fall where they may.'

Prominent Men.

Dignitaries, past and present, here for the convention include ex-Mayor Hocken of Toronto, Deputy Grand Master, Ontario West; E. T. Essery, K.C., of London, Past Grand Master, Ontario West; Dr. Williams of Woodstock, Grand Master of Ontario West; ex-Mayor Sharpe of Winnipeg, Past Grand Master of Manitoba; W. T. Edgecombe, Winnipeg, Past Grand Master of Manitoba; Grand Master Col. John Hughes, Clarke, Ont., Ontario East; James Burney, Kingston, Past Grand Master, Ontario East; Duncan Munroe, Cornwall, Past Grand Master, Ontario East; George Boyce, Merivale, Past Grand Master, Ontario East; E. H. McLean, Bowmanville, Acting Grand Master, Ontario East; and many others. Nearly every town in Eastern Ontario is represented, and many as far west as Toronto.

ANNUAL ROLL CALL.

Tonight the annual roll call of Murray Street Baptist Church will be held. This is always a great gathering. At eight o'clock the congregation will assemble, and when the roll is caled each member present will have opportunity to express himself in a few words. Those at a distance have been notified of the date, and replies are in the hands of the clerk from every part of the county, from west to east. The meeting, which will only occupy one hour and a half, will be largely attended and of the greatest interest.

HAVELOCK STANDARD SUGGESTS ENQUIRY INTO RECENT FIRES

In the opinion of a great many of our citizens a fire inquest should be held to endeavor to place the responsibility of the fire that occurred on Saturday morning last, says the Havelock Standard. No one believes for a moment that the blaze originated itself, and the only logical conclusion is that fire bugs were the cause. We have had a great many fires lately, some of which caused the loss of the houses concerned, while the others were only saved by the exceedingly good work of volunteer fire fighters. If nothing is done in the case referred to above nobody will feel safe from fire bugs and it may be that the insurance companies would feel justified in cancelling risks in Havelock or raise their rates to a stiff figure. It is certainly up to the Council to hold an inquest in the ineresits of all our citizens.

BETTER AN EYEGLASS THAN A GLASS EYE

"Putting it off till tomorrow" is neither wisdom nor economy where the safety of your eyes is concerned. Little eye troubles lead to big ones, usually, unless steps to correct them are taken. By means of scientific instruments, we can tell you whether glasses will do much or little for you. Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

MR. BURNHAM'S SPEECH IN THE WAR BUDGET DEBATE

The debate on the war budget, at the Dominion House, occasioned some lively discussion, in which the local federal member took part. Some of the discussion as reported in Hansard follows:—

Mr. J. H. Burnham (West Peterborough): Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to follow the hon. member for Edmonton (Mr. Oliver) in this debate. Before beginning my remarks in reply to him, I should like to pay the Minister of Finance the best compliment I can, in view of his magnificent handling of his great historic Budget in a masterly, comprehensive and entirely satisfactory manner. It is true it is possible to find fault; it is indeed only too easy to find fault anywhere. I have been rather surprised, therefore, by the remarks, although I enjoyed the speech as a whole, of the hon. member for Edmonton (Mr. Oliver), because he has expressed the policy largely in crystallizing his views he has laid down what may be called two main principles of dissatisfaction, to one of which I shall proceed to refer. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Oliver) said:

But it is surely elementary, if our revenues are declining and if there is no other prospect than that they will continue to decline for an indefinite period, that it is the part of wisdom to introduce measures of economy of a substantial nature.

That means, if it means anything, that instead of spending money during this trying time to enable the people of this country to earn their daily bread on public works, when they cannot earn it on private works, he would prefer to see them tramping the streets in unemployment. I know perfectly well that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Oliver) does not mean that, but that is what he has said, and it shows how dangerous it is—if I may be permitted to judge so eminent a man as the hon. member for Edmonton—simply to oppose because you are in opposition. It would be far better for him, and better also for the hon. gentleman for Halifax (Mr. A. K. Maclean) to have taken the Minister of Finance and the rest of the Government party into their confidence, and told them how to construct this Budget, and wherein they are in error, and then supply details of reconstruction. They have done nothing of the sort; they have simply found fault. As I have said, it is easy to find fault—look at the weather; if they want scope for their feelings, let them turn their invective on the weather. Look also, if you will, at the universe—we find a lot of serious things happening, such as the earthquakes in Italy, for which we are in no way responsible. If these gentlemen want simply to find fault why not find fault there. It is very possible to find fault in such case, because it would seem according to the natural forces which work themselves out under Divine guidance, but these are things that pass our understanding, and if we cannot do better the least we should do is to keep quiet.

I would like also to pay a little attention to the Hon. member for Halifax. (Mr. A. K. Maclean). He made a tremendous deliverance in its way, but it was fired almost altogether in the wrong direction; but he was not firing at the enemy, he was shooting up in the air.

Do I understand that the tea is not of universal consumption? Perhaps the hon. gentleman refers to water. In any event, he has not made himself clear, nor has he taken us into confidence and provided us with the details of a better Budget. Mr. Middleboro asked, very pertinently, I thought:

Will the hon. gentleman give us his method of raising the taxation, which will measure up to the test which he has just suggested?

Mr. Ganvreau sprang into the breach and said:

It is your duty to give it to us.

That is his idea of fulfilling his duty as a member of Parliament. If you cannot make any capital for your party, try to throw the other side into confusion; but do not remember that you were sent here by a grateful country to do the best you can for it. Raise a row; make a disturbance, split the whole affair up, and then when asked for an opinion say: Oh, you go on and give it; I do not know anything about it at all. That is the purpose which the hon. member served in making that statement. Mr. Maclean, however, said in part:

My contention is that there is no necessity for any tariff increase.

Nor did he at any other time. Surely that is a fair question. We are living under conditions which the hon. member helped to create; and yet when he is fairly asked how he would construct a Budget or a war tariff under these circumstances, at the very moment of his criticism he absolutely declines to give us any consolation whatever.

To my mind the most important reference in the Budget was to unemployment. Wars may come and wars may go, but the great war with unemployment continues with us at all times; it is perennial. I am not referring, of course, to shiftlessness or incapacity, to insanity or any other weakness of that nature. I am referring to economic unemployment; and I maintain that it is the great breakdown of modern civilization, to which it is our duty, as indicated by the Minister of Finance in his Budget, to turn our immediate attention and to let it be no longer a reproach to our twentieth century civilization.

Why is it that there has been so much trouble? Why is it that in the midst of plenty, in the midst of a great and rich country where there ought to be such profusion, there is so much need? The taking of profit and the desire to take profit are, in my opinion, the sole cause of economic unemployment. What is profit? Profit is the taking of that for which we give no true equivalent. If we gave a true equivalent there would be no profit. Take the case of 'making money.' A man makes money when he takes out money that he has not put in. If he takes out only what he puts in counting his own labour, he will be extremely dissatisfied. The more he takes out, the better pleased he is. If by putting in $5,000, a man can take out $50,000, he is considered a genius, whereas what he has done is he has robbed some one else of that money, because it is a mathematical impossibility that he can put in $5,000 and take out $50,000 without taking the difference from some one else. The alleged stimulus to modern industry has been the taking of profit. That is what the whole system in modern industry has been built upon; and the consequence of its being so large a factor in modern industry and a direct cause of economic unemployment, is that the whole modern system in regard to labour and economic unemployment is mere anarchy—and so it is.

I will now touch upon the most extraordinary measure that was ever placed before any country: the British preference. The British preference is a trade advantage which Canada gives to Great Britain in the Canadian market by means of the operation of a protective tariff, and without that tariff it could not exist. That means that the opposition in advocating a preference, British or any other, are guilty of the wildest stretch of heresy that they could possibly indulge in, because Britain could not get a preference in our market for one minute without a protective tariff. The British preference or any other sort of preference has all the evils of protection, but none of its good points. Why? Because it sends the work out of this country; it sends money out of this country when we import goods, and it leaves the tax paying to us. That is all, it is a confession that a preference can be given to people by means of a Protective tariff, and that is the whole end and aim of protection, which in Conservative hands aims to give that preference to the people at home in Canada. The adoption of the principle of protection is a confession — notwithstanding any arguments to the contrary — that by means of protection you can confer a favor upon a friend and they propose to confer it upon the British friend. We propose to confer it upon the Canadian friend. That is the only difference. What is the British preference? It is the most on-British thing that ever was concocted—the most absolutely un-British.

THE KNITTERR

With the city's stir,
Or where leaves fall rustling
Through the quiet air,
There are women knitting

Or how does he fare?")
There are women knitting

High Treason.

The charges of high treason against several person, both in Canada and in other parts of the Empire, in that they have assisted a common enemy of his Majesty the King to leave the country in time of war, is a rare charge to be brought against a British subject. They are brought under subsection (1) of section 74 of the Criminal Code of Canada, which provides that (among other things) the offence of high treason consists of assisting any public enemy at war with his Majesty by any means whatsoever. In most cases the "means" charged is assistance to leave the country.

Everyone who commits high treason is liable to suffer death or a term of imprisonment. And until the year 1870, in Great Britain, the death penalty might be exacted in various barbarous ways. Nowadays it is paid by the traitor being hanged. During the Boer war there were many trials for high treason, chiefly under martial law, including cases of British subjects who had actually joined the Boer forces.

Treason is of several kinds, many of them having regard to the King's person, or that of his heir apparent, or that of his consort. In the reign of Henry VIII. many special treason statutes applicable to that monarch's domestic concerns were passed. By one of these it was treason not to believe his daughter Mary illegitimate and his daughter Elizabeth legitimate; by another to believe either legitimate; and by yet a third not to believe both legitimate. One witness is not sufficient for a conviction in a case of treason, unless, of course, the accused pleads guilty.

Ice For Farmers.

There are few localities in Canada that have not available a river or smaller stream from which a supply of ice may be obtained for use during the summer months. The ease with which the ice crop may be secured is probably the reason why it is not taken advantage of to a greater extent than at present. For economical harvesting operations it is advisable that a number of the farmers of a community co-operate, sharing the expense, and making the labor proportionately lighter.

A few tools are necessary to harvest the ice supply efficiently. A steel scraper to remove the snow covering is desirable; some styles of road scrapers may be used, or a very good homemade scraper may be made of wood and faced with a strip of steel. An ice plow facilitates the work of scoring into blocks for breaking off. A slice bar for breaking off the blocks can be made similar to a crowbar, with a sharp blade from six to eight inches wide. An ice saw may be improvised by removing one handle of a cross-cut saw. A number of pike poles, ice tongs and a chain, with heavy pair of ice tongs attached, complete the tools required. A platform, one end of which may be let down into the water, and the other end raised level with the floor of the sleigh, permits the use of a horse in taking the ice out of the water and loading on the sleigh.—Conservation.

Cherry Fruit Flies.

During the past five or six years cherry growers in Ontario have been complaining of little white maggots which were attacking growing cherries, rendering the interior of the fruit unsightly and unfit to eat. Prof. L. Caesar, of the Ontario Agricultural College, was given the work of investigation, and, assisted by Mr. G. J. Spencer, has just written the results of several years' observation, which have been issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture as Bulletin 227. Two distinct varieties of insects, the eggs of which become maggots, have been identified; one is the White-banded Cherry Fruit-fly and the other the Black-bodied Cherry Fruit-fly. The life histories of both these flies—which, happily, appear to attack no other fruit than the cherry—are given in the bulletin, together with methods of control.

Guard Not Necessary.

That there is no present need of guarding the boundary between the United States and Canada, as recently proposed by officers of the Canadian National Reserves, is the opinion of Colonel Ogilvie, district officer commanding at Victoria, B.C.

Colonel Ogilvie was recently instructed by the Minister of Militia to investigate the question of maintaining such a force and he has officially notified C. H. Stuart-Wade, adjutant of the National Reserves, that a boundary guard is not necessary at this time.

DUCK SEASON IS EXTENDED

Ontario Laws as to Ducks, Swan and Geese Will be Amended for Settlers.

Toronto, March 19. — Pleas for greater consideration to settlers in the matter of game shooting restrictions were made before the fish and game committee yesterday by Hon. M. Hogarth (Port Arthur), and Malcolm Lang (Cochrane), and in several important respects the law was changed with the settlers' conditions in mind.

"This year at least the settlers all over the north need the greatest freedom in getting game for their food supply, and I ask the committee to consider this sympathically," said Mr. Hogarth.

The Duck Season.

The open season for duck was accordingly lengthened by two weeks in the northern district. The season will now be from September 1st to December 31st in both districts, whereas the representations of game associations and individuals had proposed making the season six weeks shorter than this. The limit of ducks per man was lowered from 200 to 100, with the slaughtering sportsman in mind.

Geese and Swans.

The open season for wild geese and swans was made September 1st to April 30th in the northern district and September 15 to April 30 in the south. Both were formerly from September 15 to April 15.

Pump Gun Stays.

An attempt to abolish the pump or repeating shot gun or to reduce its capacity to two shots was defeated. Delegations made strong appeals for a propagation as well as a preservation policy for game birds, and A. C. Pratt announced that he would shortly propose the appointment by the minister of public works of an expert to study Ontario's food fish problem.

Detroit beautifiers plead for $69,320 to put trees on 165 miles of barren streets.

CURLING

The Tories had no difficulty in running up a big lead when they played the Grits at the curling rink last night. The Reciprocity party were captained by G. R. Stevenson, while the boot scandal investigators were in charge of "Willie" Campbell. The Tories' total score was 85 to the Opposition's 59.

The Grit party claim, however, that they would have come out on top if W. H. Denham, a neutral, had not been rung in.

In the early stages of the game the Grits had the Tories pretty well worked up, but the Tories kept their lead and came out with twenty-six shots to the good. The trophy played for was the anchor of the Bessie Butler.

Smallest Boy Scout in Uniform

Is 14 Years Old and Weighs 35 Pounds

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 16.—The smallest Boy Scout in the world lives at Blue Springs, Mo., just a little way from Kansas City. His name is Arthur Portwood. He is exactly 29 inches high and weighs 35 pounds.

Arthur is 14 years old and in the sixth grade at school. He is the Tiny Tim of the Blue Springs Boy Scouts and goes with them on all their hikes.

"Course, sometimes they carry me," he explained gravely; "my legs are so short I can't keep up with them when they go fast; but they always take me with them, and I attend every meeting."

His size does not bother Arthur a bit. He is not at all sensitive about it. When a visitor entered the room where he sat in a baby's rocking chair by the fire, Arthur immediately stood up.

"I expect you want me to stand up," he said sedately, and rose from the little chair. "Most folks want to see how big I am when I stand up you see."

Several years ago Arthur went into the squab business. He has several hundred pigeons in the yard behind his house and takes all the care of them himself. He sells all his squabs to a restaurant man in Kansas City at a good price, and every penny of the money goes right into his bank account. He likes the study of agriculture better than any other school course and wants to be a farmer when he is old enough.

Arthur is a leader in a boy society in his neighborhood. He is a born organizer and can arrange entertainment and trips for the Boy Scouts faster than the other boys can carry them into execution. He is exceptionally bright in his school work.

Victor Hugo's Modesty.

It is related that upon one occasion Victor Hugo, the great French writer, received a letter bearing an address of a single line, "To Our Supreme Poet." Hugo took the letter to Lamartine.

"Here, my dear friend," he said, "is a letter which certainly is intended for you."

After a long and extremely courteous discussion, which resolved itself into a combat of flattery, it occurred to them to break the seal, which they did and read, "My dear Alfred." The letter was for Alfred de Musset and came from Alexander Dumas. Lamartine smiled, but Hugo, who did not relish the turn of affairs, made no comment. Some time later Clovis Hugues asked the author of "Hernani," "Sir, who, in your opinion, is the premier poet of our time?" and received the following reply:

"The second is M. Lamartine, and the third is M. de Musset."

How It's Done.

When Abraham Lincoln sat book in hand day after day under the tree, moving round it as the shadow crossed, absorbed in mastering his tasks; when James Garfield rang the bell at Hiram institute on the very stroke of the hour and swept the schoolroom as faithfully as he mastered his Greek lesson; when Ulysses Grant, sent with his team to meet some men who came to load his cart with logs and finding no men, loaded the cart with his own boy's strength, they showed in the conscientious performance of duty the qualities which were to raise them to become kings of men.—Canon Farrar's Speeches.

WILL GO DRY DURING WAR

Sasktachewan Will Abolish Bars Says Premier

REGINA, Sask., March 19. — Saskatchewan will be the first province in Canada completely to abolish the bar. On July 1 next, not only will the retail sale of all intoxicating liquors come to an end, but the wholesale trade will be taken over by the Government and operated as a Government monopoly, under a system of dispensaries. Later, even these dispensaries may be abolished, if by a referendum vote the people of the province so decide.

This, in brief, is the effect of an announcement made by Premier Scott, in addressing a meeting at Oxbow yesterday afternoon, in company with J. G. Turriff, M.P. Premier Scott announced the policy by which his Government was prepared to stand or fall in the following words:

"The Government's proposals, put in brief form, are:

"To issue at once a proclamation curtailing the hours of retail liquor sale to 7 o'clock in the evening, beginning April 1.

"To convene the Legislative Assembly as early as possible in the month of May; and submit to the House a measure of which the outstanding features will be the abolition of all bar and club licenses from July 1, 1915, until the ending of the war, and the taking over by the Government of the wholesale liquor business throughout the province immediately.

"Provide in the measure that, following the ending of the war, the bar and club licenses shall not be revived, except as the result of a referendum on the question, to be taken at the time of the municipal elections held after peace is declared, but not earlier than December, 1916, a majority vote to decide, and the provincial franchise to be adopted for the referendum."

The Premier added that careful consideration had been given to the question of compensation to license-holders, but the decision reached was that the people did not owe the license-holders anything.

They Want Six Licenses Cut.

LONDON, Ont., March 19. — Although they will not appeal against the quashing of the London license reduction bylaw in Toronto, yesterday, the temperance forces of the city declare that unless the license commissioners cut off six licenses as called for in the measure they will take steps to have 12 or even 15 licenses cut off in January next. Indignation is expressed that the bylaw which was carried by a substantial majority should be quashed on a mere technicality.

Kaiser Cheers Reserve.

AMSTERDAM, March 19. — "The eyes of the whole world are upon the fighting in Champagne," declared Emperor William in a speech to the thirty-eighth German reserves. "The enemy in Champagne is increasing his forces all the time in an effort to bring about a decisive decision, but the Germans, by their bravery, have made this impossible so far, and they will continue to do so until peace is obtained."

Postage Reduced.

Arrangements have been made whereby the ordinary rate of two cents per ounce, applicable to all letters sent from Canada to the United Kingdom, will apply to letters addressed to British and Canadian troops on the continent.

The rate on ordinary letters from Canada for the continent is five cents for the first ounce and three cents for each subsequent ounce, so that this extension of the two-cent an ounce rate to letters addressed to our soldiers on the continent is a decided reduction in favor of correspondence going to the soldiers.

CHEER UP

Let's quit our senseless growling
And cheer up for awhile.
From bent brows drive the scowling
And change our facial style.
Our troubles will not matter
A hundred years from date.
Let's joy and gladness scatter
And let the worries wait.

Let's hunt up Fortune's number
And get her on the phone.
Then let our worries slumber
And court her for our own.
Insist that she shall meet us
And take a little stroll—
Where joy and hope will greet us
And sink into our soul.

No one will pay us money
For weeping every day.
There's nothing in it, sonny,
It really doesn't pay.
No smiling friends it brings us
Nor words of wisdom rare—
In fact, the mean thing stings us
And fills us full of care.

So let all grouches tumble
Back to the moldy past—
Yes, bid them go and crumble
Into oblivion vast.
Tell Trouble she must chase her
Grim self in double quick
Or else we will erase her
With Teddy's famous stick.

HORN A BELLIGERENT?

Dynamiter's Lawyer Insists That His Offence Was an Act of War.

BANGOR, Me., March 19.—Werner Horn's battle against removal to the Massachusetts District Court, for trial on the charge of illegally transporting explosives in connection with his attempt to blow up the international bridge at Vanceboro, remained unfinished last night after a day of lively legal skirmishes.

Before U. S. Commissioner Charles H. Reid, who held a preliminary hearing to determine the question of probable cause, Horn's counsel insisted that federal and state courts were without jurisdiction because Horn, as a lieutenant of the Prussian Landwehr, acted as a belligerent against Great Britain. Counsel asserted that any such action as the transportation of explosives should be regarded as part of a general continuous act of war. This contention was overruled by the commissioner, who sustained the protests of the prosecution in deciding that the evidence was admissible only under a plea of not guilty.

Several Diseases Epidemic In Serbia.

LONDON, March 19. — An appalling story of conditions in Serbia was related yesterday by Ernest Bicknell and Henry James, jr., of the war relief committee of the Rockefeller Foundation, on their return to London, after a tour of inspection through that country. They said that several diseases were epidemic in Serbia.

Typhus, the most deadly of these, already had caused the death of 60 out of 400 native doctors of the country.

Turkish Soldiers Run Amuck.

LONDON, March 19.—The Foreign Office was advised yesterday that Turkish soldiers recently ran wild in the Urumiah district of northwestern Persia, and killed several hundred civilians. The Turks are said to have burned several villages after looting them.

Ruin In East Prussia.

LONDON, March 19. — The Star has received a despatch from its correspondent at Copenhagen who says that statistics furnished by the president of the [illegible] of East Prussia show that 80,000 houses have been destroyed in East Prussia by Russian troops. Three hundred thousand refugees are said to be unable to return to East Prussia because they have no means of livelihood. Out of 100,000 houses only 6,000 remain.

1914 WAS DRIEST YEAR ON RECORD

The Ontario Agricultural College reports that the crop year of 1914 was the driest on record in Ontario. The precipitation from harvest 1913 to harvest 1914 lacked 5¾ inches of being up to the average. This is a shortage of almost 20 per cent. The college has often stated that tile drainage was effective in a dry season as well as in a wet one, and last year it was able to prove this in a most practical way. Since 1912 the College has been installing practical drainage demonstration plots in parts of the province where little or no drainage has been done. The plan is to drain half of a field, leaving the other half undrained for comparison. Both parts are sowed to the same kind of grain and the crop from each part threshed separately. Nine plots were drained prior to 1914. The average of the nine fields showed that at market prices at threshing time the drained half produced $14.12 more per acre than the undrained half, and that in the driest year on record. In an average season the average increase due to drainage is over $20 per acre, and in a wet season even more.

For a number of years the Agricultural College has been making drainage surveys for farmers free of charge, except for travelling expenses. This offer is again renewed. Farmers having drainage difficulties may secure assistance by writing the Department of Physics, O. A. C., Guelph, for information and regular application forms.

- THEATRICAL -

A large audience at the Grand last night seemed to be thoroughly pleased with the presentation of. It's a Long Way to Tipperary. There was plenty of life and action and the military camp scene in the third act was realistically staged. The finale which is supposed to be an attack on the enemy's trenches was enlivened to a high degree by the discharge of a machine gun. Popular songs were sung by the Tipperary quartette.

Cleveland police broke up an organized "beggars' trust" by arresting six unemployed experts.

The secret of the quality in "SALADA" packets, is in the immensity of the sales. The more people who buy "SALADA" the smaller becomes the necessary profit per pound, and consequently the greater value it is possible to give you for your money. With the bulk tea merchant the temptation is to make a greater profit at your expense by supplying an inferior tea.

REV. DR. CHOWN TO DEDICATE NEW EDIFICE

The congregation of Charlotte St. Methodist Church are beginning to show keen interest in their new church which is under construction and naturally are wondering when work upon it will be resumed and when it will be ready for occupancy. It was stated that the work would be recommenced Monday but this was denied today by Mr. W. G. Morrow, who said it would be the middle of April before the work would be started again. The roof has to be put on, and there is some stone work in the walls yet to be finished before the new edifice will be closed in.

Preparations have been going on however for the opening and Rev. Dr. Chown of Toronto has been secured to preach the opening services and dedicate the church. Rev. Mr. Wilson, pastor of Charlotte Street Methodist, informed the Review that they counted on moving into the new building about the middle of October, but he feared it would be later now and that it would be November before it was completed.

The order for the new organ has been already placed with a St. Hyacinthe firm who specialize on church organs and this will be ready by September.

Whether the dedicatory services and the formal organ opening will be held the same time will depend upon when the church is ready.

Appointments by Ennismore Council

Fence viewers—Eugene Maloney, Edward Harrington, Patrick Twomey, Sr., John K. Galvin, Eugene Murphy, Thomas Flood, Jr., Joseph Doran, William J. Clark, David Quinlan.

The matter of having pamphlets printed in book form stating the assessed valuation of the property of every assesable property holder in the Township of Ennismore, to be printed and distributed after the compilation of the roll of 1915, was left over for further consideration.

On motion of Messrs. Perdue & Holland Samuel Killen was appointed chairman of the Board of Health to take the place of the late Paul Costello. Parties applying for payment for breaking roads or shoveling snow are required to present their account with the names of each man that has done the work and signed by the roadmaster of the division where the work was carried out.

DAME FASHION ON PARADE AT THE TURNBULL STORE

Most of the feminine population of the city visited the Turnbull Store yesterday afternoon and evening to see the living model parade of the latest styles of ladies' wearing apparel. A sprinkling of men was also on hand, who seemingly exhibited as much interest as the women, and as the models paced leisurely up and down, the married men assumed strictly judicial expressions.

The display was held on the second floor, and in the evening it was literally packed. Ladies stood on counters and tables, three and four deep. Those unfortunate enough not to find elevated positions had to stretch their necks until they ached, but still they stayed on, satisfied to catch occasional glimpses of the two fair models as they lightly tripped along the carpeted platform, amid the roses and to the entrancing strains of "Aba Daba Honeymoon" and "Nights of Gladness."

It was estimated that over a thousand persons saw the models in the afternoon and evening combined.

But to come back to the models. Two young ladies displayed the latest word in suits, gowns, and hats, and those ladies who have been fearful of breaking in with a wide skirt didn't think they looked so awful after seeing the said skirts correctly displayed upon the models. Their extreme width did not look so terrifying, in fact there was nothing to be alarmed about. The skirts flare considerably and are decidedly more abbreviated than last year's down-to-the-ground styles, but there appeared to be nothing about them but what the average girl or woman could wear without appearing ridiculous.

A smart-looking check coat three-quarter length, tailored rather square at the bottom, was applauded, and certainly was a neat little garment. A suit of battleship grey also proved popular as well as a stylish trim-looking military suit of brown or tan. Several New York models, one called the "Josephine gown," looked most becoming. The summer dresses displayed the overdress reaching to within a few inches of the underskirt and it will be in vogue this summer. There is slightly more expanse to the skirts on the summer dresses than on the spring garments.

In the afternoon and evening, Mr. Howard Russell, lyric baritone, sang Irish and Scotch songs in costume, his vocalism being popularly received and encored. Mr. Might, manager of the Turnbull Store, was highly pleased with the manner in which the public turned out to obtain their first-real knowledge of this year's styles.

EX-MAYOR OF OWEN SOUND PASSES AWAY

Owen Sound, Ont., March 19. — Death removed one of the oldest and most widely known residents of Owen Sound, John Rutherford, who had been in failing health for the past two years and whose condition since last Saturday had caused concern to his family. Mr. Rutherford was in his 76th year, having been born in Toronto and coming to Owen Sound in 1851, at the age of thirteen. For a number of years he was joint proprietor of The Owen Sound Times, his partner being David Creighton of Toronto.

From the first he took a lively interest in municipal affairs, and for many years served the town in various capacities. He was mayor of Owen Sound and while holding that position initiated many progressive steps. Later he was appointed county clerk which position he has held for many years. He was also secretary-treasurer of the Owen Sound Board of Education.

Until a few years ago he took an active part in politics, being a staunch Conservative. He was president for several years of the North Grey Conservative Association and on one occasion declined the nomination for this riding for the house of commons.

In religion Mr. Rutherford was a member of First Methodist Church, and was a member of the official board. He was among the foremost in all movements toward a realization of blue ribbon ideals. In fraternal circles he was well known, being a past master of St. George's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., a past Z in Georgian Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, a chapter member of the A. O. U. W., of which he also was past district deputy for this district.

He is survived by Mrs. Rutherford, six sons and one daughter as follows: Peter Rutherford, Toronto; William J. Rutherford, West Toronto; Jas. H. Rutherford, Owen Sound; Dr. A. B. Rutherford, Owen Sound; Fred Rutherford, Owen Sound and Miss A. G. Rutherford, Owen Sound.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon to Greenwood Cemetery.

Corporal "Bert" Carpenter Writes

Another letter from Corporal A. E. Carpenter has been received by his mother, as follows:—

February 27th, 1915.

My Dear Mother:—

Your loving letter received today, and glad to hear all are well.

No doubt, Mother, you have heard that the 2nd Batallion was under fire. We were in the trenches twice, 2 to 4 hours each time. A company were put in the trenches with the.. .... The Germans were entrenched aout 500 yards from us, and anyone with his head above the parapet was sure to get it. They have snipers, or sharpshooters, as the term is often used. The casualties of the 2nd were very small, as each trench is like a small fort. There is a continual rifle fire from both sides; the artillery does not bother the trenches. The German artillery in the district we were in try to damage buildings which the British make use for Billets. Some say we were in Belgium when in trenches and in France when in billets. We are in barns now and comfortable under the standing conditions. We will be here for a short time, and, of course, out of range of the big guns.

Aunt Clara sent me another box of pastry, and it was certainly relished by the boys and myself. I wish you could arrange with her to send me parcels of the same character often. She has been so good to me. The money I received is needed here. Never mind the cost, even if you can send some eatables from Canada. Such things are a great luxury when a person lives on army biscuits. Please send Review regular.

Trusting you are in good health and not worrying. With fond love and best wishes,

Your Loving Son,
BERT.

Special Cast for the Girl of The Golden West

The cast of "The Girl of the Golden West," the second Lasky-Belasco production, which is to be the offering at the Empire Theatre tonight and Saturday matinee and night, was selected by Cecil B. DeMille, who has made the production of this dramatic classic for the film, not on the asis of the names of the players, but on the basis of their absolute ability to interpret the spirit of the days of '49 in California. Mabel Van Buren, who plays the title role, has already been seen in "The Master Mind," "The Man on the Box," "The Ghost Breaker," and "The Circus Man." Theodore Roberts, who appears as the sheriff-gambler, is of both dramatic and photo-dramatic fame. House Peters, who plays the road agent lover, is a new recruit to the Lasky forces, but already one of the favorite leading men of the screen.

B. F. ACKERMAN TO DUPLICATE THE BARRIE BUILDING

Plans and specifications have been prepared and accepted by the B. F. Ackerman Son and Company, for the erection of a building that duplicates in almost every particular the Barrie Ltd., structure, on George Street.

The site for the new factory is between the Barrie struoture and A. Comstock's, undertakers, which is one of the most valuable and high priced sites on George Street.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman, interviewed on the matter, stated that the construction of his building would be commenced just as soon as he was convinced that there was a demand for it. He could not give the reporter anything more definite, but said that just as soon as he was assured that this demand existed he would commence building.

If Mr. Ackerman erects another factory such as contemplated, it will represent an expenditure of approximately $35,000.

TAIT OPTICAL CO.
410 GEORGE STREET

A Good Example

(Toronto World.)

Corporation Counsel Geary has decided to go on active service and the board of control has released him from duty. There is too much of the spirit abroad that denounces a man as a fool for giving up his safe, snug quarters at home and going out to fight for those who jeer at him for his pains. The man who can go and does not go to the front in this war will have a lot of explaining to do in after years. They may complain who remain behind in these days, when those who went become the only people who are considered in public life or in council, but they now have their chance, and woe be to him who sneers at those who now hear the call of duty.

There are many parents who would, if they could do it, take the places of their sons in the struggle, and go in their places so that the young might survive while the lives that are farther spent might devote what is left to the last great call. But the call comes urgently and persistently for the young, the strong, the forceful, the brave and eager, the best of the land. Those who, without ties of disability, refuse to go, stamp themselves of an inferior mold. The finest cause in the world asks for succor and suport, and those who hang back, and, most of all, those who would dissuade by their jeers or their sneers, are poor caitiffs, or, in modern slang, stiffs.

Scarcely yet have all the people waked up to the desperate need of the case. The word from Great Britain about the shortage in ammunition while the men who make it dispute about terms of pay or spend their time in demoralizing idleness, is a grave and serious one. But these conditions will be rectified, and ammunition and men, too, will be had in plenty before the last great battle in the west.

The fight is for freedom and liberty and independence, for all that Britons have ever held dear. To flinch from it is dastardly, to fail in it would be the end of British ideals and of all our civilization as the west has known it for generations past. Germany oposes to the British ideals of freedom and good faith her own pride of dominance and her own methods of treachery and falsehood. To Germany the end justifies the means—any means, no matter how contemptible. While we all hope for an early close of the hostilities, there must be no slacking up, and the nations of the allies, and Great Britain and her offspring especially, must be prepared for constant sacrifice until the end comes.

Mr. Geary has set a good example. He has followed the fine British tradition. There should be no word of disparagement in connection with the arrangement made with the board of control. He is to receive his salary, but he will supply substitutes from what is paid while he is absent. Young men who can go should be encouraged rather than dissuaded from what is a duty to the nation, to the empire, to the cause of humanity. Our contingents are going to the front with the best hearts in the world. The young men who could go and who stay behind lose that immediate jewel whose loss makes them poor indeed.

THE HOLY CITY

A splendid practice of "The Holy City," Gaul's beautiful work which is to be given by the amalgamated choirs of George St. Methodist and St. Paul's Presbyterian choirs, on Tuesday evening, March 30th, was held last night and everything points to this being one of the finest choral recitals ever given in this vicinity.

The capabilities of both of these choirs are well known and this, combined with long and faithful study should insure a real musical treat to all who attend. The work abounds in beautiful numbers including solos, duets, trios, quartettes and choruses. The massive double chorus "Let the Heavens Rejoice" is most dramatic. St. Paul's choir forming one chorus, answered by George St. choir, which forms the other, the two choirs finally combining in a grand outburst of song.

The soloists are from both choirs and Mr. Allan and Mr. Renwick, the organists and choir directors of the two churches, divide the task of playing and conducting the work, assisted by Miss Pearl McKee at the piano. Further particulars will be found in the advertisements in later editions.

ENTER APPEAL AGAINST AWARD OF ARBITRATORS

City Council Decides to Act on Advice of Chief Counsel

WILL COST $300

The City Council met last night in special session and unanimously carried a motion of Ald. Edgar and Evans to appeal the award made by and the Peterborough Light and Powcent case of City of Peterborough and the Petrborough Light and Power Co. by which the property of the company, expropriated by the city, was valued at $154,615. City Solicitor Gordon stated that he and M. K. Cowan, K. C., of Toronto, the city's chief adviser, had agreed that it would be wise to enter an appeal. He pointed out that whether or not the appeal could carry, would depend entirely on how the arbitrators determined their figure. He had written to all three members of the Board asking for their reasons but the reasons were not given out. The only manner in which the reasons can be learned is to examine the arbitrators. If after the examination is completed, the city's solicitors deem it unwise to proceed further, it can be dropped and the expense would be but $300.

In Mr. Gordon's opinion the award was about $29,000 too high and in view of that, the members of the council figured it was worth spending $300 to find out what was considered by the arbitrators in making the award.

The motion also authorized the city solicitor to re-engage Mr. Cowan as the city's chief counsel.

STAY WITH THE WATER WAGON

Protest Against use of Oil Will be Made

There will be protest made to the City Council against the use of oil on the streets and a meeting of auto owners, motor cycle owners, bicycle owners, grocerymen and those not in favor of oiled streets, has been called for the council chamber Monday at 8 p.m.

The local Automobile Association will endeavor to bring out public opinion on the subject and if supported will ask council to stick with the water wagon.

MAKE ADVANCES

Banks to be Empowered to Lend on Prospect of Crop

OTTAWA, March 20.—The House spent the greater part of the day in committee of supply.

Hon. Mr. White put through committee a resolution to amend the Bank Act, and a bill founded upon the same was introduced and read the first time. The measure authorizes chartered banks to make loans to farmers for the purchase of seed grain upon the security of the crops to be grown therefrom.

Mr. Proulx (Prescott) introduced a bill to amend the Independence of Parliament Act. The bill would make illegal all dealings between the Government and corporations in which a member of Parliament is a director or largely interested.

The Dominion Senate adjourned yesterday afternoon until Tuesday evening, and the debate upon Senator David's bilingual school resolution will not be resumed until Wednesday. The resolution, which expresses regret at the division of opinion in Ontario, will, it is expected, be given a six months' hoist.

LIEUT. ACKERMAN IN THE TRENCHES

Mrs. B. F. Ackerman has received the following interesting letter from her son who is in the trenches and face to face with the Germans:

My Dear Mother:

"This will not be a very long letter, but it is the first I have had time to write for a few days.

"I am sitting in the trenches listening to snipers trying to find our Ross rifles. I have tried a few shots but my loophole was so small I could not see the effect. I had some fun a few minutes ago with a periscope looking at their trenches, when they took a few shots at it. I haven't seen any yet, but I hope to very soon, as their trenches are not very far away.

"Our company had the honor of being the first contingent to go up to the line, and I had the distinct honor of being the first officer to take men into the line. We hadn't any casualties, but heard a great many stray bullets just near enough to make it interesting. It is quite safe in the trenches if one takes the proper precautions. Arthur was up the other night, but haven't seen him since, but I guess he is still all right as there are very few casualties now along this line.

"It seems hard to realize that we are at last right up and face to face with the Germans, and I guess we are all glad to be here, as it has been a long and rough pasage, which we will not likely have to go through again.

"The English officers are very decent and seem glad to se us here, though we are only colonials. I think before long they will have more respect for our military discipline than heretofore.

"Just saw a British aero fly towards the German lines looking for something to fire at. It will then come back, and our artillery will likely get whatever target the aeroplane has picked out. The starry shells that are thrown out at night are wonderful, as they light up a very large area, and as a rule any person that happens to be out of the trenches usually digs for cover until the danger of being seen is all over.

"We have had some very fair weather during the past two or three days, and it is a treat to be albe to move around without getting drenched. Our trench is exceptionally dry, at least the part I have my platoon in. In fact, we have a brick sidewalk in some places. We have a number of charcoal braziers, so that we keep warm and also have hot tea.

"I received the magazine you sent me the other day, but we were just moving out, so I haven't had much time yet to read it. We moved up to quite a large city, and have comfortable billets with beds to sleep in and good meals.

"It is very hard to get any war news up here, and we are all anxious to know what happened on the 18th, or whether the German army came out at all.

"Your loving son,
"CHARLIE."

Mrs. R. Z. Rogers of Grafton, has received the following letter from her son, Lt.-Col. C. H. Rogers, second in command of the 2nd Battalion:

France, March 2, 1915,
5 p.m.

Well we're back on the line after a short rest and have been given a section of the 1st line relieving some of the original British troops, so our first trial must have been satisfactory. My work is principally during the night when Col. Watson and I take different sections of the trenches. In the day we have central positions. Today the artillery has been firing over us constantly and has lessened the singing. I much prefer the shells to the constant crack of the small ammunition. I mean the (crack the whip) noise that they make when they hit anything within one hundred yards. I am proud of our men, they are a splendid lot and feeling fine. We are all looking forward to our four days out in billets. A few more casualties early this morning but only one serious. Our friends, opposite were evidently expecting us as a few nights ago one called across and asked, 'when the Canadians were coming. Our little dugout is about 6x8, and 4 ft. 6 in. deep with 6 in. of earth cover. Just been advised that the brigadier will visit us tonight so we will dine in an adjoining cellar.

EVIDENCE FOR THE DEFENCE

Witnesses Tell of Condition of Farm Lands

No judgment had been delivered at a late hour this afternoon in the Garnsey vs. Sampson case which was opened at the court house yesterday and resumed today.

Yesterday afternoon considerable evidence for the defence was heard, including that of Mrs. Sampson, the defendant in the action. This morning the case was continued at ten o'clock.

James Sampson, Mrs. Sampson's husband, testified that the farm in question was owned by Mrs. Sampson. Before the lease was drawn up Garnsey had said he was all over the place. When Garnsey took the farm considerable fall ploughing had been done, last fall he didn't do any. Not having had the ploughing done last fall damaged the farm for this year. Garnsey also had permitted weeds to become quite prevalent and the damage, in the witness' estimation would not be covered by $150. Witness also had other claims fgr damages he claimed Garnsey caused by being on the farm. One of the items was for two ploughs left out in the field all winter. In answer to Mr. Gordon he thought the ploughs would depreciate about $7 in value. As to the amount of wood Garnsey used, he thought it was 12 cords. Mr. Gordon reminded him that his wife said five cords. Witness expressed himself as being confident that he knew more about wood than his wife.

Too Young to be Sworn.

Victor Wynn, a lad in knee trousers, was called to the stand but his father who was in the court room claimed he was too young to be sworn. The court ruled that the boy was too young. His evidence was not taken.

William J. Sampson, and Clarence Sampson, sons of the defendant, were called. The latter was on the farm for a short time last fall and it was in very poor condition. Weeds were very prevalent as compared with the year previous. The fact that no fall ploughing was done by Garnsey damaged the farm about $150. Clarence Sampson was on the farm the year previous to Garnsey. He quit it because he wasn't financially able to operate such a large farm.

Stewart Clysdale gave evidence as to the size of certain fields of the farm and also stated that the land in general was quite stoney.

Garnsey, the plaintiff, was re-called and said he used but two cords of wood. The arrangement was that he was to leave as much wood cut as he used. As to the ploughs he brought one of them from the field. He likewise contradicted the evidence as to weeds.

In answer to Mr. Humphries, Garnsey said when he took the farm between thirty and forty acres were ploughed. He admitted that he could not pay off the $300 chattel mortgage held by Mrs. Sampson. Since the mortgage was put on Garnsey's list of chattels changed to some extent.

BOMBARDMENT DESCRIBED BY EYE-WITNESS

London, March 20. — The Daily Telegraph's Tenedos correspondent says he observed the engagement in the Dardanelles on Thursday through a glass from the peak of Mount Elias on Tenedos Island, 1,600 feet above sea level.

"At 9 o'clock in the morning," the correspondent says, "six British warships left their anchorage at the foot of Mount Elias and were followed at a distance of three miles by a French squadron. The first shots were fired at 10.20 o'clock. An hour later a Turkish warship appeared around the point of Kilid Bahr, but retired after receiving a heavy artillery greeting from the allied battleships.

"The fire on the forts began to tell before noon. There was an explosion at Chanak, which looked like a powder magazine. As the ships drew nearer the forts the fire of the latter became more accurate. Spouts of water rose all about the ships, and occasionally a Turkish shell took effect on one or another of them.

"At noon one of the French ships was in flames. It left the line and disapeared from view.

"Another squadron of British ships left Tenedos at 1.45 o'clock in the afternoon and passed within the entrance and joined in the attack on the forts.

"The two front ships were badly hit. Clouds of smoke rose from them for ten minutes.

"At three o'clock a shell from the British battleship Queen Elizabeth caused a tremendous explosion at Kilid Bahr. Several sections of both Kilid Bahr and Chanak were afire and smoking furiously.

"At five o'clock a French ship emerged from the straights convoyed by two other ships. She evidently was badly damaged, and was beached on a small island.

"The other ships were still in the straits when night came. Chanak, in flames, was silhouetted against the black sky."

Wounded Canucks Are Doing Nicely

OTTAWA, March 20. — News has been received by the minister of militia from France that all the wounded of the Canadian forces are doing well. Sir Max Aitken and Col. Carrick are keeping in close touch with the Canadian troops and make a daily report as to the condition of those who have been wounded. Everything is being done that can be done to get the fullest details and information for relatives and friends of those who are wounded or sick. News was received that Sir John Gibson's son was making satisfactory progress.

GERMANS ARE HELD.

PORT ARTHUR, March 20.—Held on suspicion of being German spies on a tour of inspection of bridges and railway tracks of the C. P. R. between Sudbury and Port Arthur, Carl Schmidt and Gustoff Stephens were arrested aboard a train by Port Arthur police on the formal charge of carrying loaded revolvers. It is said they crossed into Canada at Detroit.

BE PATRIOTIC BY PRODUCING

An Address by G. G. Publow at Empire Theatre

This morning at half past ten a number of patrons of the Peterborough Creamery gathered in the Empire Theatre, where they were given an address by Mr. Publow of Kingston along the lines of Patriotism and Production.

Mr. Publow dealt chiefly with the methods of increasing and bettering the production of milk by the creamery men. He appealed to the creamery men to raise the standard of their butter. The creamery butter condition in this country he considered to be in a critical condition. The northwest was now supplying more than they could consume, consequently they were looking for a market. They were looking to the east or else across the water.

The west was taking advantage of the mistakes that had been made by eastern makers and were now grading their butter thus raising the standard of quality. As a result when the east came to compete with the west they fell down.

Mr. Publow urged the dairymen to co-operate with the creameries and get the cream to the factories in good condition. A great many dairymen were supplying first-class milk to the creameries but yet they didn't get first-clas butter.

His address took more of the nature of a heart to heart talk. Those who were present felt greatly profited from the instruction they received.

The meeting was held by the Peterborough Creamery.

ADMIRAL CARDEN SAID TO HAVE BEEN KILLED

British Admiralty Statement Makes no Mention of His Death

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 20. — A News Agency despatch from London says: "The report is current in London that Admiral Carden has been killed, although the official account of the operations states that he is ill and has been relieved by Admiral De Robeck. In the Admiralty report it is stated that the battle cruiser Inflexible, the admiral's flagship, was hit by a shell in the forward control and damaged so heavily that she will be laid up.

No mention is made of the fact that the admiral's cabin is located in that part of the ship.

GERMAN AEROPLANE DROPS BOMBS.

LONDON, March 20. — A German aeroplane dropped several bombs today off Deal. The bombs all landed in the sea. A patrol boat opened fire on the aeroplane, which turned and disappeared.

ITALIAN SOLDIERS GET IDENTIFICATION CARDS.

ROME, March 20. — The military authorities have caused to be distributed to Italian soldiers identification cards or badges worn customarily only during an active campaign. This incident is regarded in some quarters as highly significant of Italy's preparedness for any eventuality.

THE USUAL STORY FROM BERLIN.

BERLIN, March 20.—(The German official statement.)—"On the road between Wytschaete and Ypres, near St. Eloi, German soldiers captured from British troops a group of houses on the slope of Lorette heights.

"In the Champagne district the day generally was quiet with the exception that early in the morning German troops occupied some French trenches to the north of Beausejour.

"French attacks to the north of Verdun in the Woevre plain, and at a point near Combras, to the east of the heights of the Meuse, all were repulsed, the enemy sustaining heavy losses.

"French troops made several advances against German positions at Reichackerkopf and Hartmann-Weilerkopf, but these attacks soon broke down and the French sustained heavy loss under German fire.

"On the eastern front the day was comparatively quiet.

"Memel, the Prussian port on the Baltic, has been occupied by the Russians."

NOTHING TO COMMUNICATE, SAYS PARIS.

PARIS, March 20. — The report of the French war department this afternoon on the progres of hostilities was confined to the simple statement that there was nothing to communicate.

NETHERLANDS SAID TO HAVE PROTESTED.

LONDON, March 20. — The Government of the Netherlands, according to a correspondent of the Reuter Telegraph Company at The Hage, has sent to Great Britain and France a protest against the British blockade of Germany.

BLIZZARD IN BERLIN AND PRUSSIA.

LONDON, March 29. — A blizzard raged Friday in Berlin and over the greater part of Prussia, according to a despatch reaching here from Amsterdam. Traffic in Berlin and elsewhere was brought to a standstill, and in the approaches to the Kiel canal there were several accidents to shipping.

WEATHER STOPPED ALLIED OPERATIONS.

LONDON, March 20. — Six battleships re-entered the Dardanelles on Friday, according to a despatch to Reuter's from the Island of Tenedos. This resumption of action after the loss on Thursday of the French battleship Bouvet and the British battleships Irresistible and Ocean, failed to accomplish anything for the reason that unfavorable weather conditions made operations impossible.

$60,000 FIRE

Plant of Gunns Ltd. is Destroyed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, March 20. — Early this morning fire destroyed the entire fertilizing plant of Gunns Ltd., wholesale merchants, St. Clair Ave. The loss is sixty thousand dollars.

The destruction included a quantity of potash imported from Germany and now almost impossible to procure.

W. J. O'Brien Enlists With Artillery

William J. O'Brien, son of Mr. Michael O'Brien, Separate School inspector, leaves on Monday for Ottawa to join the artillery forces of the third overseas contingent. Mr. O'Brien is well known in Peterborough particularly in athletic circles. He was principal of the St. Peter's School a few years ago but he has been a student-at-law with the firm of Blake, Lash, Anglin and Cassels of Toronto. Mr. O'Brien is in the city today.

Real Reason of Election Talk

Ottawa, March 20.—The real reason of all the talk about a general election in June or September is that by that time unless the war is nearing its close at least two hundred and fifty millions more will have to be provided for by Canada. The question will then be that of asking the electorate first if it is willing to pay more taxes to that end. No government could under the circumstances mortgage a country without its consent. La Fortune and other Liberal members have already protested that Canada has done enough.

UNION LABEL

BETTER NEWSPAPERS.

THE SIMCOE REFORMER calls attention to the cost of producing bright, newsy weekly newspapers. It maintains that the increasing cost of producing the better class of weekly has been borne by the advertiser, and that the time has come when the subscriber should bear a larger part of this cost than he does. The two main obstacles in the way, it says, are the dollar daily and the six-by-nine patent inside weekly without force or individuality.

What the Reformer says of the weekly is partly true of the daily. One hundred years ago subscribers paid about twice or three times as much as they do now for newspapers, and some were only weekly journals at that. The great improvements in machinery led to constant reductions in price with consequent enlarged circulations which caused increases in advertising rates. The rising cost of production has now made many publishers consider increasing the subscription rate. This actually took place in Winnipeg last year, and there are other newspapers that have already done so. The trend of events points to a better class of newspapers being published, both daily and weekly, and that the subscriber will have to bear a larger share of the increased cost than he has heretofore. It is difficult to see how a newspaper can keep improving its plant, paying higher wages and furnishing better and larger news services without eventually doing so.

WHERE ARE THE CANADIAN POETS?

WAR has always been held to be a great stimulant to literature, and particularly to poetry. Looking over English newspapers, there is hardly an issue that does not contain some verse relative to the war, yet Canadian newspapers have scarcely any. No doubt there is considerable verse being written which is not poetry, and should not be printed, but at any rate there is hardly any good verse coming into existence that relates to the war. With three Canadian contingents mobilized, and a fourth forming, with thirty thousand men on the firing lines, five thousand in England, and twenty or forty thousand ready to sail, this country is taking an active part in the war. Already men have died on the field of honour, and yet there is little poetic expression of Canada's part in the war. There is some, much of it merely words and rhymes, that is being set to music of a popular kind, but no strong verse is apparent. Perhaps Canadians have not yet taken themselves seriously enough, perhaps they do not yet realize how great the issues are in this struggle, and what victory or defeat means to the Empire, to express any high thought in strong and measured lines. It may be that not until after the war, when the Canadian army returns from battle, will the real spirit of the Canadian people find poetic expression. Perspective or distance in time and space are usually necessary for historical and literary estimation.

WHAT RUSSIA IS DOING.

THE TIDE OF WAR has been flowing backward and forward on the Russian frontier for some months with no decisive engagement. Germany, which was ready for war, has been obliged to make terrible sacrifices even to hold her own against the constantly increasing strength of Russian armies. The uncouth names and unfamiliarity with that part of Europe has prevented people from realizing just what the last great drive of Von Hindenburg meant. The Westminster Gazette says of this last important and very costly offensive of the German forces:

"We now begin to be in a position to estimate the loss and gain of the last great German rush in the eastern theatre of war. Two stages must be distinguished in these operations. In the first the Germans succeeded by a clever surprise movement in driving the Russians from East Prussia and inflicting a considerable disaster on their right wing. In the second, the Germans attempted to break through the fortified river front north of Warsaw, with the apparent object of cutting the railway between Petrograd and Warsaw. Large forces coming from Chorzele on the north and Mlawa on the west advanced on Przasnysz and Ciechanow, and endeavoured to cut the Russian front between those two places by a simultaneous attack in front and from the rear. It was a daring and ambitious plan, and, if it had succeeded, would have resulted in the capture of both Przasnysz and Ciecaanow and the destruction of the Russian army which lay between them. Fortunately, it did not succeed, being splendidly countered by a rapid Russian diversion which ran parallel to the German attack from the north, prevented the junction of the two enemy forces, and finally brought the whole German movement to confusion in what is known as the battle of Przasnysz. Both the attacking forces are now in retreat northwards; Przasnysz, which for a short time was in possession of the Germans, has been recaptured, the front between Przasnysz and Ciechanow is now securely held, and the railway between Warsaw and Petrograd is safe.

AN ELECTION.

THAT an election is imminent seems to be accepted by the majority of people. The Globe has advised all faithful Liberals to organize for the coming fray and get candidates in the field. The Globe's editorial makes an evident effort to be strong and convincing, but the tone of its call does not possess that buoyancy that expects victory. Liberals have called for an election and now they do not regard it hopefully. As a matter of fact, there is little to lead them to regard it so. The Toronto Weekly Sun puts the case rather vigorously when it says:

"It is now clear that the Government has decided to go to the country as soon as a favourable opportunity offers, even at once were a favourable result assured. The issues are being shaped, not the least of which is the issue which is, as usual, to set Ontario and Quebec in violent antagonism. The Liberal senators offer consolation and sympathy to the French, demanding liberty of instruction in Ontario, and an obscure French Nationalist rises in the House to grumble about the war expenditure. We can see it coming — a roaring, strepitant conflict, out of which is to emerge a divided Quebec and a solidly Tory Ontario.

"In the East the appeal will be to employment, and for the rest the issue will be upon the tariff, the armouries and the army scandals. The intention of both parties is to avoid discussion of the true condition of the country and the remedies which must be presently applied. But the truth will be discussed, and the effect on the electorate may disappoint the most confident expectations."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WE do not wish to be small in these matters, but the following reply of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Sir Robert Borden, when the latter was trying to expedite business, does not strike us as being in the interests of the country. Why should members be allowed to delay the business of Parliament by reason of private business?

"I would suggest that it would be inconvenient to have a sitting next Saturday, as some members have made engagements which will prevent them being here on Saturday or Monday morning. If the right hon. gentleman will agree not to sit on Saturday next but on the Saturday following, and that the morning sittings shall commence on Tuesday next instead of on Monday, I will agree to the motion."

AS there is now ample evidence that German submarines have torpedoed British merchantmen without warning, and that in consequence unaided British sailors have lost their lives, the rage of the German press against the British Government for segregating prisoner crews of submarines with a view to putting them on trial for violating the rules of war will not make a pleasant impression upon neutrals, says the New York Sun. No such wanton sacrifice of life can be charged against the British navy. It has consistently saved every German sailor who could be reached after any and every collision with the enemy. This consideration ought to have some weight with the German editors. At least that is the way neutrals will look at the matter.

IT BEGINS to dawn on Germany that there is considerable momentum in a Russian army.

Twenty-five Years of Imperialism.

(Toronto Weekly Sun.)

Clearly, as a valued correspondent suggests, the progress of imperialism is not wholly due to the necessity of defence, which drives the weaker nations to defensive alliances with their stronger neighbours. That is proved by a recital of the progress of imperialism during the past twenty or twenty-five years. The recital includes Japan's taking from China the Liao Tung Peninsula and Formosa, in 1896, and later the taking of Port Arthur and Corea, and the assumption of control over Manchuria. It includes Germany's taking Kiao Chow, the United States taking the Philippines (now regretted), Austria's taking Bosnia and Herzegovina, Britain's conquest of the Transvaal, and the partition of North Africa which gave to Britain Egypt, to Italy Tripoli, and to France, with terrible consequences for all the world, Morocco. It includes also the division of the control of Persia between Britain and Russia, to become, in time, no doubt, a perfected imperialism; and it includes the ferocious conquests of southeastern Europe, as well as the partition of the wilds of Africa among Britain, Portugal, Germany, Belgium, and France. During these recent years imperialism has been busy with conquest, and conquest in this recital has seldom been for defence.

What will be the effect on human liberty, or, as we are in the habit of loosely saying, on democracy? So long as imperialism was engaged with colonies growing in unoccupied territory, liberty was assured. Time will show whether it will be assured in the government of subject peoples.

Our Forces Have Made Their Mark.

(La Presse.)

Sir John French has addressed a message to General Alderson, commander of the First Canadian Contingent, in order to congratulate him on the brilliant qualities our soldiers have shown since their arrival on the line of fire. The eulogy of the English general, though brief, is none the less comprehensive and precious. We were confident our volunteers would give proof of the greatest courage on the field of battle, but the relatively short period given them to prepare for the fray did not permit us to hope that they would so soon attain so high a position of competence and efficiency. The admirable prowess of the First Contingent will no doubt serve as an example to the additional forces Canada will send to the front.

Must Disarm Germany.

(London Chronicle.)

We are bound to admit that if ever a people identified itself with its Government's acts, the people of Germany (including the mass of her Socialists) have done so in this instance; and, further, that unless Germany is so far "conquered" as to be disarmed, Europe will reap no long peace. The desire of defeated Germany after the war must be to divide the allies and set them quarreling for her advantage. The allied statesmen will be insane if they leave her the power to do so.

OUT UPON OUTHOUSES.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—I read in last evening's paper that the Horticultural Society and other gentlemen are taking up the project of converting the vacant corner lots of the city into garden plots. The idea seemed a good one to me, and its success should also stimulate private enterprise along the same lines. "By the way," thought I, "what's the matter with kitchen gardening? Why are our backyard gardens forsaken?" I had but to glance out of the window, and any of the backyards gave me my answer. Now, it was not old tin cans; it was not cast-off shoes and rubbers, soap boxes, etc., nor small boys, burdock bushes, nor the neighbours' chickens. It was SHEDS. In this city we have too many back sheds. We have woodsheds, when we keep our coal in the cellar, carriage sheds, when the only vehicle we possess is the baby carriage, and horse and cow sheds, when we haven't harnessed a horse or milked a cow since before Queen Victoria died. And such sheds! Ugly, tumble-down structures that the police won't let us use and won't make us tear down. They only serve to increase the fire insurance rates and to keep the whole place damp and unhealthy.

How can we have backyard gardens when our yards are filled up with these gloomy "left-overs"? How expect a garden to flourish under their damp shadows? I admit they afford very convenient sunning places for the neighbourhood cats, but what a nice lot of flowers and vegetables might be grown on the soil they now encumber.

So, before we citizens of Peterborough can begin to raise gardens we must raze our superfluous back sheds.

GARDEN LOVER.

SLUR ON THE CITY.

Editor Review.

Sir,—Beng asked for an opinion on the Helen Brown case, I would say that if it is let pass, it is a terrible slur on our town. The authorities should not quit till some of those men and boys are found out and made an example of.

It will be like the case of the forty dollar man who was let off easy and is turning round, besmirching all those he comes near and dragging fair names into disrepute and lowness. What is Peterborough coming to? "A dead fly makes the mixture rot."

AN UNBROKEN LINE OF FIRE

Officer Says Artillery Fire Was Hell on Earth

LONDON, March 20. — The Daily Mail quotes a letter from a captain with the Indian Expeditionary Force describing the capture of Neuve Chapelle. He says:

"We had about 350 guns simply letting drive for all they were worth. When I wanted to make a remark to anyone next to me I had to put my hands to my mouth and yell. The line of German trenches which they were shelling was a perfect hell on earth; they looked as if they were on fire, so awful was the concentration of shell fire. It was one unbroken line of bursting shells.

"Then the infantry dashed forward and you saw men dropping right and left. Barbed entanglements had been blown clean into the trench, and over it in some places and the trenches themselves was simply pulp of earth and boards, wire entanglements, and bags of equipment and Germans, some only boys fourteen years old."

The Mormons have bought the site of Joseph Smith's religious "discoveries" at Palmyra, N.Y., to erect a tabernacle.

Even if much immediate headway is not made, peace is a mighty good subject to discuss just at this time.

Metallurgical Department Important Factor in Big Auto Plant

Dodge Brothers' Department of Metallurgy Said to be Largest of its Kind in the Industry Both Raw and Finished Material Subjected to Strenuous Tests.

Realizing the importance of an extensive and thoroughly equipped metallurgical department, Dodge Brothers have just completed extensive additions and changes in this department of their big Detroit plant. F. E. McCleary, a thoroughly experienced metallurgist with long training in the automobile business, is in charge of the department which is said to be the largest of its kind in the automobile business.

With an expenditure of hundreds of thousands for raw materials hinging on the decision of the metallurgical department, the automobile manufacturer naturally figures that he cannot devote too great care to the selection of men and equipment for this branch of the industry. All materials entering into the manufacture of the car, including steels, paints, varnishes, and numerous others, must first pass the critical tests of the physical or chemical departments. And not until the metallurgist O. K.'s a particular brand of material does the purchasing agent concern himself in dealing with the outside manufacturer. At Dodge Brothers' Detroit factory the metallurgical department is more than a mere testing laboratory. It serves in a larger capacity as a "checker-up" on the entire manufacturing processes of the big twenty-four acre plant and is one of the greatest aids to efficiency in the entire organization. This checking-up is carried out even to the grade of coal used under the boilers in the power house. At regular intervals samples of the coal are sent to the metallurgist for test. If found wanting in quality, a report is made and the coal shipper is soon notified of the shortcomings of his product.

The Advantage of Royal Blood

By EUNICE BLAKE.

The village of Queen Anne on the south Atlantic coast was named for the queen who was on the throne of England when the place was settled. A natural son of King Charles II. fitted out the expedition that made a village on what was then an uninhabited ocean shore. He came out himself, and his progeny now mingled with that of the other settlers. The consequence was that at the middle of the nineteenth century every inhabitant of Queen Anne could boast that he had royal blood in his veins.

Notwithstanding the aristocratic atmosphere of the place, nearly all the men as soon as they became old enough to strike out for themselves left for more active regions, leaving the women behind them. Occasionally some persons who desired a restful place to live would settle in Queen Anne, but after staying there some time, finding that none of the residents called on them, moved away. The consequence of this considerable going and inconsiderable coming was that, in time, the village was reduced to several hundred maiden ladies, all of royal blood.

One of those persons who had attempted to make a home in Queen Anne was a lady named Rutledge, from the state of Alabama. She was an invalid, and her physician recommended her to change her residence to the seashore. Her husband was obliged to make a trip to Europe and left home the day his wife started for Queen Anne, he going to New York for the purpose of crossing the ocean.

Mrs. Rutledge, who was a ladylike woman, alone and needing attention, was dismayed to find that, not having royal blood in her veins like the others, she was left out in the cold by the citizens of Queen Anne. She remained there, however, till her husband returned to America, then joined him at their old home in Alabama, where she died only a few weeks after their reunion.

One day a gentleman aged forty, well bred and apparently having plenty of money, went to Queen Anne, looked over the place, expressed himself pleased with it and gave out that he intended to settle there. The ladies of the place soon learned that the newcomer was a widower. In a place divested of men the matter of royal blood when an unmarried man was considered suddenly ceased to be of overweening importance. Every maiden of marriageable age was in a flutter. Every maiden dived into old chests to get out finery that had been brought from England long before that she might modernize it and make use of it to catch the widower.

The stranger had not been in Queen Anne a week before it was learned that he was indisposed. Miss Chalmondelay, who lived opposite his house, first became aware of this fact and hastened to send over delicacies. The news spread down the broad street on either side of which the village was built, and everybody, even to the uttermost end of the town, sent broth or jelly or fruit or some other delicacy to the invalid.

Had he consumed all he received he would have soon died of overeating, but it is questionable if he ate any of it. His servants certainly had such a feast as never before. The invalid recovered and found an accumulation of cards bearing the names of the donors of the delicacies that had been sent him, which filled a sizable wicker basket. As soon as he was able he began calling on the ladies who had favored him and did not cease till he had thanked every one of them in person.

This required time, but when finished the stranger had a calling acquaintance with every lady in Queen Anne. Some were very old and some very young. These he favored but once. Those of a marriageable age he made a list of, and there was not a day or an evening that he did not make as many calls as the hours would admit. It was evident to every woman in the village that he was looking for a wife, and every unmarried woman was hopeful.

What the stranger said to these ladies, what hopes he excited in each heart, never became common property, though there was a good deal of speculation as to what fortunate spinster would secure the prize. At one time it would appear after the bee had been buzzing for awhile on a single flower that he was about to alight, but the very next day he would be seen seeking honey from a different source.

One morning Miss Chalmondelay on rising looked between the slats at the house opposite. The doors and windows were closed, and the premises seemed deserted. That day each and every marriageable woman received a note, which read as follows:

I have decided that since there is no royal blood in my veins it is not seemly I should unite with the descendant of a king.

These notes were signed "Rutledge." No one could explain what the stranger meant by his strange conduct till one of them discovered that this was the name of the invalid lady who had recently been among them.

For a time each recipient kept her secret, but one after another finally told, and the whole thing came out. Then they understood that they had one and all been punished for their heartlessness to the wife of the man they had hoped to catch.

Dynamitard Sent To Boston.

BANGOR, Me., March 20.—Werner Horn, who is charged with illegal interstate transportation of explosives in connection with his attempt to wreck the international railroad bridge at Vanceboro, will be taken to Boston for trial at the present term of the United States Court, as a result of the finding of Federal Commissioner Charles H. Reid here yesterday. The commissioner decided that the indictment warrant, which was the only evidence offered by the prosecution, was sufficient bases for holding the prisoner. The motion of the defence for the release of Horn, on the ground that he was a belligerent engaged in an act of war and was not amenable to the courts of this country, was denied.

SHE KNOWS ALL OF THE GOSSIP

Carrie of the Telephone the Best Posted Person in Town

In the American Magazine George Fitch, the Illinois humorist, writes on "The Homeburg Telephone Exchange," in which he describes the telephone in a small village. In the following extract he explains why Carrie, the telephone operator, knows more than any one else in town:

"When my wife wants to know if hats are being worn at an afternoon reception she calls Carrie. Ten to one Carrie has caught a scrap of conversation over the line and knows. But if she hasn't she will call up and find out. When a doctor leaves his office to make a call he calls up Carrie, and she faithfully pursues him through town and country all day, if necessary. When we are preparing for a journey we do not go down to the depot until we have called up Carrie and have found out if the train is on time. And when our babies wander away we no longer run frantically up and down the street hunting for them. We ask Carrie to advertise for a lost child seven hands high and wearing a four-hour-old face wash, and within five minutes she has called up fifteen people in various parts of the town and has discovered that said child is playing Indian in some back yard a few blocks away.

"Carrie is also our confidant. I hate to think of the number of things Carrie knows. Prowling into our lines while we are talking, as she does, in search of connections to take down, she overhears enough gossip to turn Homeburg into a hotbed of anarchy if she were to let it loose.

"But she doesn't. Carrie keeps all the secrets that a thousand other women can't. She knows what Mrs. Wimble Horn said to Mrs. Ackley over the line which made Mrs. Ackley so mad that the two haven't spoken for three years. She knows just who of our citizens telephone to Paynesville when Homeburg goes dry and order books, shoes, eggs and hard boiled shirts from the saloons up there to be sent by express in a plain package. She knows who calls up Lutie Briggs every night or two from Paynesville, and young Alexander Bane would give worlds for the information, reserving only enough for a musket or some other dueling weapon.

"There's very little that Carrie does not know. I shudder to think what would happen if Carrie should get miffed and begin to divulge. Once we had a telephone girl who did this. She was a pert young thing who had come to town with her family a short time before. It was a mistake to hire her—telephone girls should be watched and tested for discretion from babyhood up—but our directors did it, and because she showed a passion for literature and gum and very little for work they fired her in three months. She left with reluctance, but she talked with enthusiasm, and Homeburg was an armed camp for a long time."

The "Zone" Theatre, in which the shooting occurred was crowded when Lizraki entered, brandishing a pistol. He began firing at once, and his sister fell with a bullet through the heart.

CONFLICT UNDERGROUND.

Belgians and Germans Exploring Cellars Under Yser River.

NORTHERN FRANCE, March 20.—At the very moment some companies of Belgians are engaged with Germans in circumstances that would have appealed to the genius of Edgar Allan Poe.

Just in front of Ramscappelle is an old monastery, the walls of which have been battered to pieces, but whose cellars and underground passages form the background of a perilous yet picturesque struggle. Vast cellars pass underneath the beds of two small tributaries of the Yser, called respectively Great and Little Resmes.

Germans have discovered the northern outlet to this subterranean world and the Belgians occupy the opposite exit. For several days both sides have been advancing step by step through these dark, damp and slimy underground passages.

Five Hundred Officers Lost.

LONDON, March 20.—A casualty list of officers received from the British headquarters in the field under date of March 15, gives the names of 56 officers, including Hindus, who were killed or have died from wounds and of 120 wounded or missing.

This brings up the total casualties among officers since March 10, as officially reported, to 195 killed or dead from wounds and 316 wounded or missing.

Enticing Lobsters to Death.

In the neighborhood of the Bermudas the sea is extremely transparent, so that the fisherman can readily see the horns of lobsters protruding from their hiding places in the rocks at considerable depths. To entice the crustaceans from these crannies they tie a lot of snails in a ball and dangle them in front of the cautious lobster. When he grabs the ball they haul him up.

KARLSRUHE GONE

Admiralty Believes Report of Disaster to Raider

LONDON, March 20. — The Secretary of the British Admiralty announces that there is every reason to believe that the German cruiser Karlsruhe was sunk in the neighborhood of the West Indies at the beginning of November, and that those of her crew who were rescued reached Germany early in December on the stamer Rio Grande, which had been acting in concert with the Karlsruhe.

Reports of the sinking of the Karlsruhe have been current during the past few days. The most circumstantial stated that the cruiser was rent in two by an internal explosion, and that some survivors had been landed at a German port.

UNION LEADERS AGREE.

It Is Now Up to British Employes to Ensure War Supplies.

LONDON, March 20.—As a result of conferences with David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and a committee of the Imperial defence, workmen's representatives have decided to recommend to members of their unions that during the period of the war there shall in no case be any stoppage of work, that all differences regarding wages or conditions of employment be referred to arbitration, and that a relaxation of trade union regulations be permitted so as to allow the employment of semi-skilled and female labor.

An advisory committee from the organized workers will be appointed by the Government for the purpose of facilitating the carrying out of these recommendations which are made on the understanding that the Government will secure from employers assurances that changes shall be only for the period of the war. Mr. Lloyd George will now confer with the employers.

The conferees on the side of the Government included, aside from the Treasury sub-committee which had the conference in charge, Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George, Arthur Balfour, former Conservative leader, and Lord Kitchener.

The agreement, it is believed, will bring to an end the embarrassment which the Government has been under in both military and industrial branches because of unsettled labor conditions. The most recent trouble was with the coal-heavers, whose strike held up many of the merchant vessels upon which the Government is depending to maintain its maritime traffic, and with the armorers, whose attitude toward increased hours of labor seriously threatened the armament program.

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece. It cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters, wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

WARSHIPS LOST IN THE DARDANELLES

Crews of Irresistible and Ocean Are Almost all Transferred in Safety but Bouvet, of French Fleet, Goes Down With Nearly All Hands --- Floating Mines Set Adrift by the Enemy --- All Were Old Vessels

LONDON, March 20.—The British battleships Irresistible and Ocean and the French battleship Bouvet were blown up by floating mines while engaged with the remainder of the allied fleet in attacking the forts in the narrows of the Dardanelles Thursday.

The crews of the two British ships were virtually all saved, having been transferred to other ships under a hot fire, but an internal explosion took place on board the Bouvet after she had fouled the mine and most of her crew were lost. The Bouvet sank within three minutes of the time she hit the mine.

The waters in which the ships were lost had been swept of mines, but the British Admiralty asserts that the Turks and the Germans set floating containers of explosives adrift, and these were carried down by the current on to the allied ships gathered inside the entrance of the straits.

All the ships that were sunk were old ones, the Bouvet having been completed nearly twenty years ago, and the Ocean and Irresistilbe in 1898. They were very useful, however, for the work in which they were engaged in the Dardanelles. The sunken British ships are being replaced by the battleships Queen and Implacable, vessels of a similar type. They are said to have started sometime ago for near eastern waters in anticipation of just such losses as have occurred. The other ships engaged in the fighting, the British battle cruiser Inflexible and the French battleship Gaulois, were hit by shells and damaged.

The British casualties, according to the official British report, "were not heavy, considering the scale of operations."

The damage done to the Turkish forts by the heavy bombardment has not yet been ascertained. It is stated that the operations against them are continuing. The forts attacked were those on either side of Kephez Bay and on Kephez Point, outside of the Narrows, and those on Kilid Bahr and Chanak in the Narrows.

The Kephez forts replied strongly when the battleships advanced, firing up the Dardanelles, and all the ships were hit. It is asserted that these forts finally were silenced and a bombardment of those in the Narrows was under way when the three battleships struck the mines. The blowing up of the ships did not cause a cessation of the fighting, which continued until darkness intervened. It is understood that the engagement was resumed yesterday.

The British battleship Irresistible was commanded by Captain the Hon. Stanhope Hawke, and in times of peace had a complement of 780 men. She was the largest of the three allied battleships sunk, being of 15,000 tons displacement and 430 feet long. The chief armament of the warship consisted of four 12-inch and twelve 6-inch guns. She also carried sixteen 12-pounders, six 3-pounders, two Maxims, four submerged torpedo tubes and was protected by Krupp armor. The speed of the warship was 18 knots an hour. She was built in 1898 at a cost of $5,000,000.

The Ocean was commanded by Captain Arthur Hayes-Sadler and had a crew of 750 men. She was 418 feet long and of 12,950 tons displacement. Her armament was composed of four 12-inch and twelve 6-inch guns, ten 12-pounders, six 3-pounders, two Maxims, four submerged torpedo tubes, and her armor was of Harvey-Nickel make. She was of 18 knots speed and was built in 1898.

The French battleship Bouvet was a vessel of 12,000 tons displacement, laid down in 1893, with a complement of 621 men. Her armament consisted of two 12-inch guns, two 10.8-inch, eight 3.5-inch, eight 3.9-inch, ten 3-pounders and ten 1-pounders, besides two torpedo tubes.

"The casualties reported sustained on the British cruiser Amethyst were the result of a smart piece of work which she performed in the Dardanelles when, it is stated, she was entrusted with the difficult task of cutting the telegraph cable connecting Kilid-Bahr with Chanak," says the Malta correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. The correspondent continues:

"She succeeded in lifting and cutting the cable undetected, and had started her return journey when she was discovered. She then had to run the gauntlet of forts on both sides of the Narrows, becoming the target of a veritable hail of fire. Going at full speed, although frequently hit, she succeeded in getting beyond the range of the guns and reaching the entrance to the straits.

"It is officially confirmed that a Russian squadron has approached the northern part of the Bosphorus," says Reuter's Petrograd correspondent. "The appearance of the squadron caused a great panic in Constantinople."

The Turkish War Office announced that the Bouvet was sunk inside the strait by Turkish forts. It was stated that the allied fleet approached the Dardanelles forts and opened a heavy fire.

The forts returned the fire and shell the Anglo-French warships with great effectiveness, according to the Turks. Unofficial reports said that several of the enemy's warships withdrew from the battle line, badly crippled, before the Bouvet suddenly tilted over and began to go down.

NEUTRALITY IS NOT FOR SALE

Terms Offered by Austria Are Scorned by Italy

Rome, March 20.—What purports to be an outline of Austria's attitude with relation to the cessation of territory to Italy, is contained in a despatch to The Tribuna, dated Vienna, but telegraphed from the frontier. The statement is made that Austria, without reflecting upon Italian good faith, contends it is only natural that the Dual Monarchy, if she is ready to grant territorial compensation, should wish to insure Italian neutrality. For this reason, the despatch says, Austria feels she should carry out her part of the proposed agreement only when an Italian pledge of neutrality is fulfilled, especially in view of the fact that the cession of the province of Trent would imply a weakening of Austrian military resources with regard to Italy.

Commenting upon this report, The Tribuna says that the condition which Austria demands is absolutely unacceptable, and if maintained would make impossible any friendly agreement. No Ministry would accept as a satisfaction of national aspirations a simple promise to be carried out at the end of a war the results of which no one can foresee, the newspaper argues.

No Pay for Neutrality.

"The Austro-German point of view," The Tribuna says, "is wrong, because they think Italy is asking compensation for neutrality. The problem is totally different. Austria, provoked the war through aggression against Serbia, partly because repeated Italian warnings and partly without Italy's knowledge. This action was entirely contrary to mutual Italo-Austrian pledges and conflicted with the fundamental interests of Italy. Thus the European equilibrium was upset and radical changes in the map of Europe are inevitable."

Italy's Moment Now.

On this same matter The Giornale d'Italia says:

"Italy either can obtain peacefully immediate and certain satisfaction of her sacred aspirations, together with the protection of her great and complex interests, or she can have recourse to the supreme test of arms. It is absurd to think that Italy, after seven months of preparation, when she is in an especially advantageous diplomatic and military position, will be satisfied with the Biblical mess of pottage, or less — mere promises. Greece, Roumania and Bulgaria are awaiting Italy's move and will follow suit. Thus Italian influence is great at this moment, which must be seized, as it is in her power to contribute to the formation of a new international arrangement."

Crisis Near at Hand.

A despatch from Rome says Italy is preparing to denounce the Triple Alliance treaty linking her with Austria and Germany, according to reports from various sources. Baron Zonnino, Minister of Foreign Affairs, it is reported, is making ready to take this drastic step to force Austria to cede territory to Italy or face Italy's participation in the war on the side of the allies.

The majority of the Rome newspapers today warning the public that a crisis in the Austro-Italian relations is near at hand. The Messagero appeared with the flat announcement that Prince Von Beulow's efforts to obtain concessions from Austria have failed, and that the Foreign Minister is now actively engaged in negotiations that may plunge Italy into war.

THAW'S FIGHT FOR LIBERTY

Legal Battle is Postponed for One Week

NEW YORK, March 20. — Harry K. Thaw's legal battle to prove that he is sane and entitled to his freedom has been postponed for one week. Instead, his attorneys planned yesterday to bring up before Supreme Court Justice Bijour the issue under which they contend that Thaw's commitment to the Matteawan asylum was illegal. For that purpose they had obtained a writ of habeas corpus which temporarily superseded a writ previously granted, to enable him to submit to a test of his mental condition.

It was expected that after an argument over the question of jurisdiction, the hearing on the new writ would be referred to Justice Page before whom Thaw was tried and acquitted on a charge of conspiracy and who ruled that Thaw must be sent back to Matteawan unless prevented by legal process.

The purpose of this new move was to enable Thaw's counsel to take his case before the appellate division on an appeal from the decision of Justice Page if it proved adverse to Thaw.

As the result of various writs and orders sworn out in his behalf and the resultant legal tangle, Thaw is in no danger of being returned to the state hospital for the criminal insane at Matteawan for at least a month.

MY FIRELESS COOKER.

Some time ago I made a fireless cooker out of an old box and some asbestos matting, the heat being supplied by an electric iron. After putting an old wooden box 16 inches deep and 20 inches square into good shape with hammer and nails I lined it with asbestos to keep in the heat and prevent the wood from burning. I then made a tight-fitting cover and lined it with asbestos. Next I made a shelf the same size as the box and covered both sides of it with asbestos. To this shelf I nailed two thin strips of steel across the grain to prevent warping, and drilled numerous holes through it with a half-inch drill to allow the hot air to circulate freely. This shelf I fastened eight inches from the bottum of the box.

On the bottom of the box I fixed two triangular blocks of wood covered with asbestos. These blocks are to hold the iron in position, and complete the "cooker."

To use the cooker, place your electric iron upside down on the triangular blocks of wood and turn on the current to the required heat. Meanwhile place whatever you want to cook in a dish or pan, cover with a similar dish or pan, set it on the shelf in the cooker, and shut the lid down tight. Then turn off the electricity and do what you like until dinner time, and you will have the tenderest, juiciest roast you ever tasted waiting for you when you return.

After a little practice you will become expert in the matter of heating the iron to the right temperature to cook a given dish in a given time.—Alfred I. Tooke, Edmonton, in Technical World Magazine.

TWO FINES IN POLICE COURT

Man Who Provided Wet Goods is Also Caught

Peter McCrae was sailing along under a beautiful jag yesterday on George Street when a constable deemed it wise to offer him his arm and help him to the police station. Peter pleaded guilty without hesitation today and took his $2 fine without a flicker.

William Anthony, after a period of strict sobriety, that did him credit, fell from grace yesterday. He was tempted by Fred Sastland who gave him a drink from a bottle. Eastland said he did not know Anthony was on the list. Anthony was fined $10 for taking the drink and getting intoxicated while Eastland brought down a fine of $25 and the magistrate's severest censure for contributing to Anthony's fall.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself shoving a man down, when we are trying to save him.'

SPRING IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood-builder and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these Pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired —Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor — Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils — Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring, anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention. Some people dose themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken themselves. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand Dr. Williams Pink Pills actually make new blood, which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigor to weak, easily tired men, women and children. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you.

You can get these health-renewing Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GIANT CENTIPEDES.

A Foot Long and Armed With Forty Odd Poison Laden Claws.

Centipedes have nowhere a good reputation. Some of those in the tropics are terrible creatures indeed. The giant centipede of Trinidad and Venezuela is sometimes a foot long and can do very serious harm. Its foremost pair of feet are modified into supplementary jaws, which are fanglike and may inflict a powerful bite. Furthermore, each has a poison gland at its base that sends into the wound a venom deadly to small creatures and very painful even to mankind.

Moreover, the sharp claw of each of the forty-one feet is poisonous likewise, so that when the animal crawls over the soft skin of the human arm it leaves a trail of red, inflamed spots. It is dangerous to knock the centipede off, for instantly the creature drives the claws more deeply into the flesh and sends a greater amount of venom into each puncture. It may also take hold with its jaws.

When the centipede seizes its prey or is itself caught by an enemy it coils itself around its antagonist and grips it tenaciously with all its legs. It is therefore a very unlucky object to tackle. In this connection it is interesting to note that many myriapods are brightly banded with black and yellow, contrasting tints that show conspicuously against the dark soil of the forests where they abound. The giant centipede is a shining mahogany brown, with the legs bluish and ringed with yellow.

A singular fact about centipedes (which, in spite of the name, rarely have 100 feet and may have as few as fifteen) is that the number of legs is invariably odd and may vary in number even in specimens that belong to the same species. All are carnivorous. The smaller kinds feed on worms and grubs, the larger on any living prey they can overcome. They are, therefore, of service in destroying many noxious insects. Captive specimens are exceedingly cleanly in their habits and go through elaborate toilets, brushing their legs one by one and the sides of the body with their jaw feet, which are furnished with a mat of hairs adapted to this purpose.—Youth's Companion.

WHAT DOES DUKE THINK

One wonders exactly the views the Duke of Connaught holds about the strategy of the war. The fact that he is in Canada and that his valuable knowledge and advice are not available is a distinct loss to the British army. The duke is one of the keenest of strategists, and perhaps the first member of the English royal family since the days of the warrior Kings who has been fit to take command of an army in the field. The duke is a small man, but in his heyday was so perfectly proportioned that it was almost impossible to realize his lack of inches. There never was a man who so inspired his soldiers with confidence, nor was there ever a general who had so quick and keen an appreciation of all that was going on in a field of mimic war. There was a time when he was regarded as the only general we had capable of taking command of an army engaged in European warfare. Both Sir John French and the generals associated with him have proved their merit under extraordinary difficult conditions.

When the Duke of Connaught commanded the troops at Aldershot he was known as "Arthur;" and by that name, and no other, was he called in the barrack-room and mess. He has always been "Prince Arthur" to thousands of good soldiers, and one of his sayings is worth repeating. He was a very earnest student of continental methods, and, by the way, was the man who introduced the present cap which the soldier wears, and which his officers at first wore, into the British army. He is colonel commanding the Rifle Brigade, and when the cap was first introduced it is said that he went to lunch with the officers of that regiment. Coming unexpectedly into the anteroom he discovered a young subaltern officer engaged in trying the new cap, which was the duke's own, upon his head before a glass. Though discovered in the act the youngster was not abashed. "A nice cap?" said the duke ironically. "Yes, sir," replied the young subaltern, with the dust of Sandhurst still upon him. "What a pity the Salvation Army thought of it first."—Navy and Army.

Josephine's Many Names.

Josephine, empress of the French, was Yeyette to her intimate friends. Her name in reality was Marie Josephe Rose. Napoleon after the marriage exacted that she should be known as Josephine. He had a mania for rebaptizing the women of his entourage. He made his sister Marianne an Elise, of Annonciade a Caroline, of Paulette a Pauline.

Among her numerous friends Josephine remained Yeyette. Barras never called her otherwise.

In 1814, on the departure for Elba, the Debats designated Josephine under the paraphrase "the mother of Prince Eugene."

At Ruell her tomb bears this simple inscription: "A Josephine, Eugene et Hortense, 1825." The restoration did not permit her recognition as empress. —Cri de Paris.

Tyrone.

Tyrone takes its name from one of the eight sons of Niall of the Nine Hostages, the ancestors of all the O'Neills. Four of these sons carved out large portions of Ulster between them —Eogan's share becoming known as Tir Eogain (land of Eogan), which still survives as Tyrone, while Conall's share, long known as Tir Conall (Tyrconnell), is now Donegal. Fermanagh still bears its ancient name, which signifies "the mountain valley marsh district," which after centuries of wavering finally triumphed over the alternative, Maguir's county.—London Chronicle.

It is said that the Federals are trying to secure the Southern League as a farm for their cast-offs.

GENERAL ALDERSON, COMMANDER OF CANADIANS.

Ottawa, Ont., March 20.—The recent work of the Canadians on the firing line has been the subject of correspondence by cable.

When he learned that the Canadian division had taken part in the great success at Neuve Chapelle, Major-General Sam Hughes, the Canadian Minister of Militia, cabled to General Alderson, commander of the Canadian division, his hearty congratulations on their share in the great success.

He has just received a reply from General Alderson thanking the Minister on behalf of the division for his congratulations "Upon the heroic work of the Canadians in the recent fighting."

BILINGUALISM IS DEALT WITH BY EX-MAYOR HOCKEN

The Most Dangerous Movement Ever Inaugurated in Ontario He Says

Ex-Mayor Hocken of Toronto was given an enthusiastic reception in Victoria Hall last ngiht when he discussed the subject of Bilingualism and the situation generally as it exists in Ontario and Quebec today. He urged Protestants to be alive to the dangers that threatened, as the object of the Roman Catholic hierarchy was to drive out the English language, to establish the parish system, and they also looked forward to the day when they hoped to be able to enforce the canon law as they do in Queec. Merchants, professional men and representatives of the people who have convictions and the courage to express them should be supported, the speaker said. The time might come when the hierarchy might be able to place twenty representatives from Ontario in the Dominion House, and then they would have sufficient to govern the province. "We must see to it," he said, "that a French-Canadian race does not grow up in Canada, no more than do the Russians or the Macedonians. If we give them the slightest inch, they'll take everything we've got."

In his opening remarks, ex-Mayor Hocken referred to his associations with Adjutant McElhiney, who, with Mayor Buller, had introduced him to the gathering. He expressed high regard for the Salvation Army. He was glad to learn that the local Federation was advancing. Protestants did not seem to understand that persistence was necessary to maintain those things in which they believed. It was encouraging to know that Peterborough had an organization that was growing in vigor and vitality. Protestants were perfectly satisfied that every French-Canadian and every Roman Catholic should have the right to express his own views and defend them. That was British. He claimed the same for himself, and that also was British. He had no blame for the poor habitant; it was his leaders who were stirring him up against the English-speaking race, and it was this force that kept him in his present plight—lack of education. If that could be remedied there would be a new Quebec inside of two generations. The French was as fine a race as the world had ever known. History showed that men of this race had made sacrifices and had given their lives for their convictions and principles. Such men were worth while, and their descendants are in Quebec today. But so long as they are denied education they will remain hewers of wood and drawers of water. He held that on account of this lack of education, the people of rural Quebec had no more idea of what patriotism is than if they had never heard the word. They simply work all the time and support the church.

The Spirit Needed.

Today Protestantism was in need of the same spirit as in the British army—every man willing to do his part until after the war is over. The essence of Romanism was submission and despotism. It was a fight between despotism and democracy. Men who have the courage to come out and express their convictions should receive support and gratitude. That was the way to strengthen the ranks. Protestantism was fighting a powerful institution. Incidentally the speaker remarked that the people were willing to support with money the Roman propaganda in a manner that would shame Protestants.

He repeated the statements of Premier Gouin of Quebec regarding the language question, but he held that Premier Gouin should first clear up the situation in Quebec. He should do justice to the minority of that province, before making his demands on behalf of the minority in Ontario. He takes a million dollars from the Protestants to maintain Roman Catholic schools. In Ontario every dollar the Roman Catholics paid goes to their own schools.

The speaker characterized the speech on bilingualism by Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, chief justice, as an outrage. He took the side of the French-Canadians. Yet he might be called upon to sit on this case. Would he do so after having showed his partizanship? The speaker thought it would be an extraordinary thing if he should.

Another incident mentioned was the criticism of the Ottawa Citizen towards remarks made by Dr. Edwards, M. P. for Frontenac, tending to imply that the speaker was endeavoring to stir up strife. Such things as these, he said, made his blood boil.

Bilingualism, he said, was part of the fight to get peaceful control of Canada. It was the most dangerous movement ever inaugurated in Ontario. The aim was to get into Ontario to establish the parish system and follow it up with the canon law.

When the Government decided on a camp at Valcartier, they took in one-third of a parish there. Now the church asked that the taxes lost be made up by the Government. They asked that $20,000 be set aside to provide tithes for the Roman Catholic Church.

Under the canon law the school system was so bad it could hardly be worse if there were no school at all, and it also suppressed free speech. No voice was raised in protest. There was such a state of fear that none dare protest. One newspaper that had exposed a priest had been banned.

The speaker had had some correspondence with J. H. Burnham, M.P., who had asked certain French-Canadian members as to where they stood on the language question. They declared they did not wish to drive out the English language, yet neither would go on record to that effect.

It was said by the leaders that a revolution would occur if their demands were not granted but said the speaker, "If they want to bring it on, I say bring it on, the sooner the better."

The musical part of the program was made up by a selection by the Army Temple Saxaphone quartette, somic songs, Chas. Coleman; solo, Mr. Naisn; recitations, Mr. Johnson; solo, Mr. Mayes; cornet solo, Bandmaster Beer. Miss Ivey Beer played the accompanists.

On the platform were: Ex-Mayor Hocken, Mayor Buller, Ald. Edgar, Fire-Chief Howard, Adjutant McElhiney and Mr. Albert Carpenter, president of the Federation.

A vote of thanks to the speaker and those contributing to the program was moved by Ald. Edgar, and President Carpenter.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe

Delegates from the various local unions assembled in goodly numbers this week, the fact that the meeting fell on St. Patrick's Day did not deter very many from the path of duty. Donald Wires presided.

The main business of the evening was the introduction to the members of the revised constitution and by-laws. This was taken up clause by clause and the consequent discussion took up the greater part of the evening, so now when it comes to the scribe to fulfil his duties and enlighten the public as to what took place he has to borrow the familiar phrase of the war telegrams: "There is nothing to report. At some future time, possibly, the preamble, constitution and by-laws will be published so us the public may know what the Trades and Labor Councils of Canada stand for.

The Helen Brown murder case was discussed, and the Review applauded for the stand it has taken. The Crown Attorney's letter instructing them with the information to consult the Chief of Police, was thought unnecessary. The arrest of Dr. Brown shows that there must have been sufficient evidence in the hands of the police (with accessories to both before and after). The following resolution was carried unanimously.

"In view of the many conflicting statements made in regard to the Helen Brown murder case, this Council calls upon the Hon. I. B. Lucas, Attorney-General of Ontario, to make further investigation into the matter."

Next meeting, April 7th.

AMALGAMATED SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS SEND MECHANICS TO WORK IN OLD COUNTRY

"In response to a cablegram from the general office, London, England, the Canadian executive of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers are sending a number of their members to jobs in the Old Country. The first batch of 30 members, composed of turners, planers, shapers, slotters and milling machine men will sail by the Allan Line on the 24th for Glasgow. Their passage is to be paid by the Union. The executive on this side intend to remove all members who are working in shops where low wages are being paid on shell work, so employers will soon find it difficult to obtain skilled mechanics unless they are prepared to pay fair wages."

The above announcement is made by the officers of the Society of Amalgamated Engineers. A movement is said to have started among the Old Country machinists some time ago, to return to their old firms in Britain to engage in the work of making shells and munitions of war. Word had been sent out from employers in the Old Country to former employes in Canada that good jobs were waiting them if they would return. Wages quoted, while not necessarily higher than those paid here, were higher than those ruling in the Old Country for British workmen. So far there have been few, if any, men to take advantage of the offers, though some of them were said to be considering. Newspaper advertisements are now calling for workmen of this class to go to Britain.

Has Returned From Salisbury Plain

Pte. Walter Starn of Lakehurst, who was a member of the First Canadian Overseas Force, has returned from England. He was discharged on account of defective hearing. Pte. Starn passed through Peterborough today en route to his home and when seen by The Review, he stated that owing to much rain, conditions were none too pleasant at Salisbury. The mud was knee deep and when a man was ill the medicine handed out was always "number nine pills." He left Salisbury, in company with 62 other privates, immediately after the first contingent left England for France. They returned via Halifax.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

Kant's Poverty.

Barring the ten years spent as tutor in private families, Kant passed the whole of his long life in Koenigsberg, where he was born in 1724. During his early tenure of the chair of philosophy his sole emoluments consisted of £20 a year, a sack of wheat every month and sufficient firewood to warm his house in cold weather. On becoming rector of the university only another £20 was added to his yearly stipend, so the greatest of all German philosophers was not much better off than the pastor of Goldsmith's "Deserted Village." However, in his latter years Kant's scanty means were supplemented by an annual allowance of £26 from the privy purse of Frederick the Great.—London Chronicle.

"Compounds" and Adulteration.

City and town dwellers in particular can remember the cans of syrup bought in the past—cans bearing the label "maple" in large type, made more conspicuous still by being printed in bright red ink, but which, upon closer examination after the can had been carried home, was also found to bear the word "compound" or "flavored," printed in type almost microscopic in size. The contents of that can was not maple syrup at all, and the label did not state that it was; but the label was so trickily printed that it conveyed the impression that the purchaser of the can was getting maple syrup.

That little game has been made illegal. Maple sugar or maple syrup manufactured for sale or offered for sale must be pure according to the standard; and the word "maple" must not be used along or in combination with other words on a label in such a manner as to make a person believe that the package or can to which such label is affixed contains pure maple sugar or pure maple syrup. To use such a deceptive label is deemed to be adulteration.

Last year some attention was paid to adulteration by the analysts of the Department of Inland Revenue. They examined 211 samples of maple products; 71 were found adulterated; and 4 were doubtful—that is 35 per cent. of the samples did not pass muster.

ST. ANDREWS BY-THE-SEA

The Algonquin Hotel, which is owned and operated by the C. P. R., has just been rebuilt. It is handsomely furnished, everything being carefully adapted to the requirements of a seaside resort, and it enables a stay of a few weeks to be spent most enjoyably. The Inn is also operated by the company and it excels in quietness and comfort. The large transitory population usually found at the average summer resort is not in evidence at St. Andrews. The parties go for a lengthened visit and they quickly form desirable acquaintances with people.

Net Debt Increases.

The monthly statement of the Finance Department shows an increase of $11,900,916 in the net debt of the Dominion during December. This is due to the war expenditures and the falling revenues resulting from the war. The total revenue for the month was $9,167,940, or $3,763,526 less than December, 1913. The customs revenue was $4,706,117, a decrease of $2,931,068. The excise totaled $1,952,837, a drop of $87,000.

Wheat For 1915.

It is predicted that by 1915 western Canada will produce 600,000,000 bushels of wheat annually. The population is increasing more rapidly than the railroad development, and there is serious apprehension that it will not be possible to handle the enormous crops.

EGGS DOWN TO EIGHTEEN CENTS

Big Offering and Brisk Buying at Today's Market

The downward trend in the price of eggs was very marked upon today's market, when the low sum of eighteen cents a dozen was asked. It looks as though eggs were destined to be within reach of the most humble pocketbook, in fact one meat dealer said this morning that eggs were as cheap as meat at that figure. One prominent poultry dealer ventured the opinion that they would not stay down very long. There was going to be a shortage this year on the egg market, and buyers would buy up eggs now they were down, and reap a rich harvest by holding out for a good price when the shortage began to manifest itself. This view looks quite feasible, and it would not be surprising if it happened unless some means is adopted to prevent or forestall it.

Today's market was good. The farmers turned out well. The buying was brisk and commodities were plentiful. Potatoes were much more abundant than they have been for some time. Some fine apples were displayed, selling at $2.50 a barrel. Meats were also fairly plentiful, mostly beef and pork, in which no material change of prices has occurred since last week.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, March 19.—After showing decided strength the greater part of the time today, wheat underwent a sharp setback just before the close. The sudden break was accompanied by disturbing bearish rumors about a crisis said to have been reached in the relations of Austria with Italy. Prices closed unsettled, 1-8c to 3-8c under last night. Corn finished 1-16c to 1-4c down, oats 1 1-2c off to a shade advance and provisions at a loss of 5c to 22 1-2c.

Higher prices at Liverpool had considerable to do with lifting the wheat market before the late reaction. There were also reports of unlooked-for Turkish successes in the Dardanelles and the Black Sea, and of huge import requirements of wheat for Italy—18,500,000 bushels. Large export clearances, a number of crop complaints and a big cut in Minneapolis stocks gave further temporary help to the bulls.

Corn was strong early with other grain, but sagged quickly when they turned weak. The bulk of transactions were between pit speculators. Lightness of offerings tightened the oats market until the bear flurry in all staples took place near the end of the day. Shipping sales were small.

Packers and others selling overturned an advance in provisions. The embargo on trade with Germany was said to be at least somewhat the reason.

Chased 48,000 Miles.

LONDON, March 20—Stokers from the cruiser Australia, says Reuter's Fremantle correspondent, declare that the Australia chased the German Pacific squadron 48,000 miles, using 6,000 tons of coal and 5,000 tons of oil. The pursuit lay in the Pacific, around the Samoan, Fiji and Fanning Islands and along the coast of Mexico.

Finally the men say the Germans were driven into the range of Vice-Admiral Sturdee's guns in the Atlantic off the Falkland Islands.

How empty are the fruits of war! Whoever finally gets the fortress of Przemysl will have to keep on pronouncing it.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

A PERFECTLY DEVELOPED BRAIN, BALL PLAYERS GREATEST ASSET

There is Nothing so Necessary to Success in Baseball as Mental Capacity — Tops Speed and Hitting Ability

A fan asked the other day what was considered the greatest possible asset for a successful ball player. "Is it better to have hitting ability than fielding worth?" queried this man. "Is it better to be fast than a good hitter? Or in what lies a player's greatest worth?"

Without giving the matter much thought, one might be constrained to answer that there is no one thing so conducive to baseball success as natural hitting ability. But after pondering the subject a moment, it seems as if there is one greater consideration—the requisite which overtops all others—and that is to have a perfectly developed and normal brain.

It is not difficult to run down the list of players who are or have been in the major leagues and pick out a score or more from every fifty on the list who failed entirely or whose careers were cut short—not because they did not have mechanical ability but because they lacked the mental poise to enable them to make the most of their physical powers.

Ping Bodie was released the other day by the Chicago White Sox. Bodie is a natural hitter. Josh Devore was given his unconditional release by the Boston Braves. Josh is one of the fastest men in baseball. Rube Waddell had a comparatively short term as a major leaguer. Rube was one of the greatest pitchers the sport has ever produced.

Why did they fail to last in the big show? For one reason, and one only—because they either were not able or did not care to put their minds on their work.

In discussing Tex Russell, the Chicago White Sox pitcher, the other day, an expert wrote as follows: "Russell is an example of the practical sort for the youthful players to observe. If Rube had been careful of himself he would have been the greatest star in the game. He had the arm, without a doubt. He did not have the head, however, to take care of his physical condition so as to protect that arm and get the big money."

There is nothing so necessary to success in baseball as mental capacity. Its lack has been a stumbling block in the pathway of many an athlete equipped with a perfect physique.

COMPANY SHOOT

One Hour's Overtime to Decide the Winner

On Friday evening No. 5 Company Home Guard, held a competition which was hotly contested, so much so that about one hours overtime was spent in shooting off. The prizes were eventually won by F. S. Edwards, with a score of 35. F. Raines was second with a score of 34, and R. Hendry, third, with 32.

Considering that the shooting was on the thousand yards range, the officers are highly delighted with the results. Other members who were runners up were Sergt. Graham, C. F. Jackson, Privates Maxwell, Harris and Howland.

THREE BIG GAMES OF BASKETBALL

There should be a big crowd at the Y.M.C.A. tonight to see the three games of basketball starting at 7.30.

Capt. Dobbin and his Beavers will meet the Collegiate. The students have only lost one game and are in their way for first place if Dobbin's quintet don't upset their calculations, which is liable to happen. Then Capt. Richardson's team will clash against Capt. Heaslip's Hustlers. The Hustlers have only dropped one game so they are tied with Collegiate this makes a sure bet that each of these teams is going to do its best to down the other.

Still another big drawing card, the Excelsiors and Unknowns are leading the A division and they meet tonight. The Excelsiors have not dropped a game yet, so there will be something moving when they face off against the Unknowns. First game starts 7.30. Everybody welcome.

Training a Dog.

It may surprise some people to be told that dogs have a strong sense of justice, so, unless you want your pup to gain a poor opinion of you, be careful when you punish him. Never punish unless the pup can associate the punishment with the offense. The circumstantial evidence may be very strong, but you had better wait and catch him in the act. Common sense is about all that is required to rear a puppy into a dog which will be a faithful, useful, steadfast companion—common sense and consideration. Whenever I find one of those "anything will do for the pup" kind of people I can see in my mind's eye what the humans in that family look like.—Outing.

And Still Has Them.

"Is he financially sound?"
"I should say so."
"Got the money, eh?"
"You bet. He has served a term in the penitentiary for misappropriation of funds."

Fatal Mistake.

"Why is he in jail?"
"For trying to be one of the criminal rich."
"Ah, I see! Didn't steal enough."

DEAF AND DUMB UMPIRE.

"Dummy" Taylor, the old-time big league pitcher, well known in the International League, may be given a berth as umpire in the Kansas State League. Taylor is both deaf and dumb, but his physical disabiliay bothered him little as a player. He will have more difficulty in umpiring. It is proposed that he announce his decisions with the aid of a whistle, blowing once for strikes and twice for balls.

"KNOTTY" LEE TO MANAGE GUELPH

Deal Will Likely be Closed Today — Thinks This Will be Good Season

Guelph, March 20.—"Knotty" Lee, prospective manager of the prospective Guelph team in the Canadian League, arrived in the city yesterday morning from Toronto. He came up to consult with the gentlemen, who are interesting themselves in securing the Erie franchise for this city, and promises that if he suceeds in landing the managerial position, he will put a first-class ball team in Guelph. He will remain in the city until tonight, and if Mr. O'Neill comes down from London today as he probably will, to close the deal, "Knotty" will be ready to make a deal for the position of manager.

He says that while times are hard in some places, he sees no reason why the Canadian League should not have a good season. He is quite enthusiastic over some of the players that he rounded up for the Toronto team last fall, and his connection with the Toronto management will enable him to get his choice of their surplus material.

DRAGON FLIES AT SEA.

The Puzzle That Came With Them and a Squall Later On.

In describing a voyage from Hongkong to Shanghai some years ago Admiral Fitzgerald relates in his book, "Memories of the Sea," a peculiar experience:

"One afternoon when we were lying at anchor out of sight of land, the weather being very close and sultry, we saw a great cloud approaching the ship from the direction of the shore, which was about fifty miles off. The cloud came slowly nearer and nearer. It did not look like rain, and presently, as it enveloped the ship, we found it was composed of dragon flies, and very big ones. They evidently made for the ship to get a resting place, but many missed and fell exhausted in the calm sea.

"The masts, the yards, the rigging and all the ropes in the ship were incrusted with them. It was a very sultry evening, and about 6 o'clock we all bathed. I remember the strange experience of diving into a sea of dragon flies, which stuck to our arms and shoulders, got into our hair and quite spoiled our swim. A light air then came off from the land, so we weighed anchor and made sail to the southward, and at midnight, just as the watch was changing, we were struck by a terrific squall, which laid the old ship nearly on her beam ends.

"We wondered whether the visitation of dragon flies was connected in any way with the squall. But if they were blown fifty miles off the land, where they certainly did not want to go, why did we not get the wind for six hours afterward?"

Old Time Ordnance.

In olden times pieces of ordnance were often named after birds and reptiles. Thus the sport of hawking gave us the "falcon" and "falconette," which were respectively six pound and three pound guns, the figures referring to the weight of the shot.

The "culverin" and "demiculverin" cannon were so called because the handle of the gun was shaped like a serpent, "culverin" being derived from the French "couleuvre," a snake.

Musket was derived from the old French "mousquet," which meant a male sparrow hawk.—Liverpool Mercury.

DISTURBANCE TOBE QUELLED

Indian Council Considers Measures Against Agitators

LONDON, March 20. — (Through Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—A special despatch from Delhi, India, says:

"At yesterday's meeting of the council the viceroy, Lord Hardinge, announced the introduction of a bill providing for special measures to secure the public safety, the defence of India, and for speedier trials for certain offences. His excellency said that the bill should not be considered as a slur upon the people of India, but the Government had information that such a measure was absolutely necessary to meet possible emergencies. Nobody, he said, was more jealous of the honor of India than himself. But he was not disposed to allow the honor and fair name of India to be tarnished by the criminal acts of a few unbalanced minds.

"Sir Reginald Cradock, in introducing the bill, subsequently congratulated the country upon the fact that the need of such a measure had hitherto not been felt. But in this instance it was required to give the military authorities special power to deal with emergencies, and to nip in the bud manifestations of disloyalty which were beginning to be shown.

"The bill was in two parts — the first modelled generally upon the British Defence of the Realm Act. The second provided for the creation of a special tribunal of three commissioners to hear such cases as were made over to them by order of the local government concerning offences punishable by death, transportation, or imprisonment for seven years."

It appears from the above despatch that the Indians spreading sedition were passengers on the Japanese steamer Komagatu Maru, who were refused admittance to Canada when the ship arrived off Vancouver last July. An official inquiry later revealed that German emissaries arranged for the chartering of the ship with the evident object of spreading disaffection in India, and that many of the Hindu passengers were the off scourings of Indian seaports.

HAIG PRAISED

British Cavalry Leader Mentioned in French's Report

LONDON, March 20.—One of the semi-weekly official communications from the headquarters of Field Marshal Sir John French, the British commander, was given out yesterday by the official information bureau. It is under date of March 18, and reads as follows:

"There has been no change in the general situation of our front since the last communication. The trenches south of St. Eloi, which has been only partially recaptured on that date, are either unoccupied by either side or held by us. Some of the trenches were blotted out in the course of the fighting in this neighborhood.

"The gallantry and dash of the troops during the operations of the last week in the vicinity of Neuve Chapelle, under the able and determined leadership of Gen. Sir Douglas Haig, proved conclusively that their sedentary work in the trenches during the last four months has in no way impaired their original fighting qualities."

Two Detroit fathers floated movie shows on funds gained by sending young daughters to sell papers on the streets.

RELIEF ACT NOW PASSED

Opposition Offers an Eleventh Hour Amendment Which is Lost

TORONTO, March 20.—The mortgagors' and purchasers' relief act passed the last stage in the Legislature yesterday and becomes operative as a statute of the province.

During the final discussion, Allan Studholme moved an amendment, in which he sought to eliminate the word "war" in the bill, and make it operative in all cases, thereby relieving applicants for relief from proving that the war caused their financial stress. Several members of the Opposition supported the amendment, which was lost.

Hon. T. W. McGarry in placing the new succession duty bill in committee argued for the tax of 1 1-2 per cent. on estates between $25,000 and $50,000. Last year the wealthy men had been taxed and since the vast majority of Ontario estates lay between these figures they should pay their toll. As it was, other countries assessed down to $500 for succession duties. With little opposition the clause went through.

The Ontaro Government is taking in hand the control of lands along the shores of the great lakes, which contain sand and gravel. Hereafter, annual licenses will be issued under special order-in-council to work any such deposit, and previous regulations are rescinded. Now licenses will be granted for one dredge only and will expire on Dec. 31, following issue.

Smith, at Lakefield, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Wednesday, March 10th, when their daughter, Miss Florence Parsons, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Carter, of Smith township. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. A. Ben Oliel in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The bride, who was attired in a becoming costume of tuscan voile trimmed with silk and lace, was given away by her brother, Mr. George Parsons. The wedding march was played by Miss Penberthly. After the ceremony the assembled guests partook of a dainty supper, the evening being then spent in a social manner. The happy couple will take up their residence in Smith, and have the best wishes of many friends.

On the 17th the secretary received from a little boy (11 years old) a very clever scrap-book which he made for the soldier patients. The book was too late for the bale, but has been sent by mail.

Greenwood's Career

Sir Hamar Greenwood comes into his baronetcy not at all unexpectedly, for the British Isles have been the Fortunate Isles for him, without any qualification. His career in England is looked upon by many Canadians as a sort of miraculous romance, somewhat resembling that of Sir Gilbert Parker.

Sir Hamar was born at Whitby, Ontario, in 1870. He graduated at the Toronto University. He practiced law a short time, spent a brief period as a civil servant in the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and then went to England without fortune or friends; with nothing but a lawyer's degree, a good physique, and plenty of self-confidence and ability. The following story throws light on both Sir Hamar's temperament and position shortly after arriving in England. It is related that on one occasion when he was lecturing on temperance (his first occupation in the Old Country) he was a guest at a magnificent country house in an English village in which he was to speak. In the morning a valet entered the guest chamber and proceeded to arrange the guest's apparel. Out of a trousers' pocket dropped a two-and-sixpence, which was at the moment the entire liquid capital of the coming statesman. After a time the guest opened his eyes. The valet, who no doubt had his own impressions about the meagre contents of the guest's pockets, remarked: "The two-and-sixpence which fell out of your pocket I have laid on the table, sir." Greenwood quickly replied: "Oh, that is for you, my man. I left it in that pocket for you in case I did not wake up."

Following his temperance work Mr. Greenwood made himself known as a stump speaker.

The first success of the aggressive young Canadian was to run for the British Parliament as a Liberal in York, a stronghold of Conservatism, and win a seat. Once in the limelight he stayed there. He won powerful friends, notably Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, now First Lord of the Admiralty, for whom he was for some time Parliamentary private secretary.

Mr. Greenwood made powerful connections in the law as well as in politics, and now has a large and lucrative practice in London. In 1911 he married Miss Margery Spencer, of Townhope Court, Herefordshire, Eng. whom he met at Kingston, Jamaica, at a lunch during which the first shock of the great earthquake was felt. His wife is the daughter of a wealthy landowner.

Sir Hamar is a strong Home Ruler, and on one of his more or less recent visits to Toronto he told the Canadian Club here that the Dominion ought to do her full share towards the defence of the Empire. He is at present member of Parliament for Sunderland, Eng., having been elected for that constituency in 1910. He has made himself prominent in the same way that Theodore Roosevelt, Sam Hughes, and many others have carved riches for themselves. This is not to say that he is vain or that he talks too much—but simply that he is best described as "a force."

PLAN TO ENLARGE CANADIAN HOSPITAL AT SHORNCLIFFE

LONDON, March 20.—Army medical authorities have approved plans for the enlargement of the Queen's Canadian military hospital at Shorncliffe, whereby accommodations will be increased to 125 beds. The extension will be completed in two months. Funds hitherto have been mainly provided by the Canada Lodge of Free Masons and the War Contingent Association. The hospital is now full. The same applies to the Canadian hospital at Clivedon, which will eventually become the main receiving hospital in England for Canadians.

Lord Brooke, formerly commanding the Canadian Cavalry Brigade, and now on Sir John French's staff, has been decorated by the French Government with the Croix de Chevalier.

Lieut. A. Reford, Canadian Contingent, has been gazetted temporary lieutenant of the Royal Regiment Artillery.

TRAIN IS PROMISED

C.P.R. to Improve the Passenger Service

As the result of a consultation of C. P. R. officials and local citizens, held here Thursday night, the public of Peterborough are to be accommodated with a passenger train service through to Chicago and points west without any delays. The train will leave here at three-fifty in the afternoon, will arrive in Toronto at six-twenty and connect with the Detroit train, for Chicago at six-thirty. This train will be equipped with a dining car.

Officials of the C. P. R. promised this service but refused to commit themselves with regard to a Sunday train, informing Mr. T. F. Matthews, Mr. Basil Hall and Mr. S. R. Armstrong who met them that the company had experimented here and found that a Sunday train did not pay. The officials also gave the deputation to understand that they would see if the seven-fifty train out of Peterborough could not provide a faster service.

ART OF THE 19th CENTURY

Address by Mr. Kenner to the Women's Art Association

A select audience gathered in the public library hall last evening to hear a most inspiring lecture delivered by Mr. H. R. H. Kenner on "Some Great Artists of the Nineteenth Century."

Mr. Kenner dealt with only the outstanding artists in the limited time at his disposal but he managed to impart a degree of interest and life to his subject which retained the interested attention of the audience from beginning to end. Mr. Kenner preluded his address by a telling recital of the horrors of war. He pictured the distress, and agony of mothers and wives parting from loved ones, the noise of battle, the beat of drums and the deafening roar of guns.

He then proceeded to describe masterpieces by the nineteenth century artists, giving short, interesting explanations of each as they were cast upon canvas by Mr. H. O. Fisk.

He divided his pictures into four classes, humorous, animal paintings, historical, and pre-Raphaelities and their successors. The widely different characters and choice of material used by the various artists who specialized in these lines was strikingly illustrated by the pictures. Under the division of humorous painters came the works of Wilkie, Webster, Faed and Frith.

Landseer, Herring, Rosa Bonheur, and Briton Riviere, excelled in animal paintings, imparting a lifelike and realism to their subjects that placed them in the front rank of artists.

Landseer's painting of "The Shepherd's Chief Mourner" was especially a most realistic picture, of a collie resting its head upon the casket which contained the body of its dead master.

Some of the outstanding historical painters were Maclise, Ward, and Cope, while among the preraphaelities and their successors, the work of Rossetti, Millais, Holman, Hunt and Leighton, were the most noted and brilliant. Millais' paintings of The Proscribed Royalist, The Order of Release, The Flood, The Beef Eater and Cinderella, were among the more famous in the past century and which are considered today wonderful masterpieces of artistic conception.

Mr. Kenner's address was greatly appreciated and he was tendered a motion of thanks by Mr. J. A. Pretty and Mr. Fred Roy.

Mrs. Vincent Eastwood acted as chairman for the affair which was under the auspices of the Women's Art Association.

Ontario Should Grow Flax.

Mr. James Crawford, of Belfast, Ireland, who has been through Canada with a view to arousing interest among agriculturists in the raising of flax as an industry, expresses the opinion that while the outlook is not very bright in the West, he thinks that if Ontario were to take it up it would prove a very profitable industry for the province.

You are almost sure to ask yourself—how is it possible to incorporate such quality at so moderate a price.

The equipment of the car speaks for itself: Timken bearings throughout; the S. R. O. ball bearings in clutch and transmission; the full floating rear axle; the 30-35 horsepower four-cylinder motor; the real leather upholstery and natural curled hair filling; the chrome Vanadium steel springs; the Vanadium steel gears; the single unit, chain-driven starter generator; the Eisemann water-proof magneto; the fact that in direct drive no transmission gears are engaged or in motion; the almost exclusive use of drop forgings and drawn work; the perfect stream-line body; the specially designed ovel fenders; the one-man type top—all these are recognizable as features beyond betterment.

The wheelbase is 110 inches.

The Canadian price of car complete is $1100.

To Develop Lignite.

A company of Regina business men has been organized for the purpose of developing the extensive fields of lignite coal in the southern part of Saskatchewan. The Government of the Province of Saskatchewan has been carrying on experimental work in connection with the lignite coal for some months past, and it is as a result of these tests that the Regina company has been organized. The reports previously submitted dealing with the quantities of lignite coal in the southern part of Saskatchewan show that there is practically no limit to the supply. A method of briquetting the lignite coal has been devised, and it is claimed that this product will result in a saving in fuel of from 40 to 50 per cent.

TRENCHES ARE RE-CAPTURED

Germans Made Fierce Attack on French Forces but Were Hurled Back With Heavy Losses

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 22. — Official statement. — "We recaptured yesterday some trenches which we lost Saturday evening at Notre Dame de Lorette, north of Arras.

"At La Boisselle, northeast of Albert, we blew up one of the enemy's galleries and occupied a larger part of the excavation thus formed.

"In the Argonne, near Bagatelle, we blew up three mines and two companies of ours stormed a German trench, in which they maintained their positions despite strong counter attacks.

"At a point nearby, Germans, after bombarding our trenches and exploding two mines, attacked fiercely, but were hurled back despite reinforcements, and coming under the fire of our artillery, suffered heavy losses."

COMMITTEE HAS A BIG PROGRAM

Tax Rate, One Item for Discussion To-night

It would seem that the committee of the whole council will have a big budget of business to deal with tonight. The report in regard to the tax rate will be received, and in all probability the rate decided upon.

The report of the special committee in regard to the insuring of the civic employes will also be received and should occasion discussion. The Auto Association will likely have a deputation present to try and induce the council not to use oil on the streets this summer. There is room for argument on both sides of the question. The aldermen who wanted to go over the estimates of the fire department will likely bring up the matter tonight. There is a rumor that some of the City Dads think the fire department can be run at a far less cost. They will have a contract on their hands trying to impress the idea on the minds of Ald. Green and Duffus.

Tonight's meeting will also appoint the representatives for the deputation waiting on Premier Hearst next Friday in the interest of rural radial lines.

VISITED CITY WITH VICE-REGAL PARTY

Col. Farquhar, Killed in Action in France

The news that Col. Francis Douglas Farquhar of the Princess Patricias was killed while fighting in France has occasioned no small amount of local regret. Col. Farquhar had many Peterborough friends and admirers. He was here a year ago with the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and rode in the carriage with His Royal Highness and His Worship Mayor Buller. Interviewed this morning, Mayor Buller expressed his deep regret on the death of the Colonel whom he considered one of Canada's most able soldiers.

Colonel Stanton, Military Secretary to His Royal Highness, stated last night in Ottawa that the Royal household was deeply affected by the news, and that the Duke and Duchess of Connaught had sent a cablegram of sympathy to Lady Evelyn Farquhar, while the Princess Patricia had also sent a special cable to the regiment named after her, which Colonel Farquhar was commanding in France.

WAR MIGHT HAVE BEEN AVERTED

Sir Edward Grey Says Germany Refused Every Suggestion

THE FOURTH AND LAST TIME

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 22. — "War might have been averted by a European conference when and where Germany desired," Sir Edward Grey told an audience in London this afternoon. At the time he was acting as the chairman of a gathering which was listening to a lecture on the strategy of war. Continuing, the Foreign Secretary said: "Germany, from her experience in the Balkan conference, knew she could count on our good-will, and that we were ready to do last July what we did before. But Germany refused every suggestion, and on her rests for all time the appalling responsibility for the war. We now know that Germany had prepared for war, and only those who have planned for war can prepare for it." Amid loud cheers Sir Edward added: "This is the fourth time within living memory that Prussia has made war upon Europe, and we are determined that it shall be the last."

BERLIN, March 22. — The German official statement says a fresh attempt by the French to take the German position on the south slope of Lorette heights last night resulted in failure. The French night attack north of Le Mesnil in Champagne failed, and French efforts to win back their position at Reich Ackerkopf also resulted in failure.

The statement also says that the Russians were yesterday driven out of the East Prussian town of Memel.

NO DEFINITE ACTION AS TO INSURING EMPLOYES OF CITY

A joint meeting was held on Saturday evening of the special committee recently appointed to take up the matter of insuring the civic employes and the Utilities Commission. Messrs. T. F. Matthews and R. Hicks represented the Commission. Nothing definite has been decided upon but the Commission asked the special committee to recommend that an appropriation of $2,000 be made this year to cover possible expenditure by the city and also to levy a rate on public work. Whether the city will carry the risk or whether insurance will be secured from a company will be decided upon later. Several companies have written, submitting their rates. A report of the meeting will be presented at the Council meeting this evening and in all probability the matter will be discussed.

AGAINST OIL, HOW MANY?

All persons who object to the use of oil instead of water on the streets, are reminded of the meeting in the City Council chamber tonight at 8 o'clock. It is important that there be a large gathering, so that any action taken will have strong backing.

Winnipeg, March 22. — The provincial treasurer has introduced a bill in the legislature giving power to the government to levy a tax of twenty cents for each seat in any theatre for which a license is necessary; a tax of $100 on each dancing pavilion and $250 on film exchanges. The theatre tax includes moving picture houses.

TURNING POINT OF WAR IN FALL OF PRZEMYSL

BRITISH NAVY HAS NEW TYPE OF FLOATING MINE

Operates Independent of Floats and Tackle

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

EDINBURGH, March 22. — The Scotsman says the British navy has developed a new type of floating mine which, unlike the German and French mines, operates independent of floats and tackle. It cannot easily be swept up, and its automatic mechanism allows it assuming its desired position at the right time.

MAN WHO SUPPLIED LISTER SCORED BY MAGISTRATE DUMBLE

In imposing a fine of $25 and costs of $3.75 on Harry McMullen in the Police Court today, Magistrate Dumble scathingly denounced his conduct in supplying liquor to John O'Reilly of Ennismore, a "lister" upon whom whiskey has a very maddening influence. The magistrate regretted that the law did not permit him to impose a more severe penalty.

O'Reilly came to the city last Saturday and met McMullen, an old friend, in the King George Hotel. O'Reilly requested him to get a 50-cent flask of whiskey. This McMullen did without asking any questions.

O'Reilly was arrested in Ennismore by the county constable and brought to the city to face a charge of being drunk while on the prohibited list. He recently was discharged from an asylum.

McMullen was defended by Mr. V. J. McElderry. He first pleaded not guilty, but later altered it to guilty.

Magistrate Dumble condemned his actions in the severest terms.

COMMANDER OF PATRICIAS FALLS IN FRANCE.

THE DEATH of Col. F. D. Farquhar, who was reported killed in action in France, is a most serious loss to the Canadian forces. He was commanding officer of the Princess Patricias, which were organized by Major Hamilton Gault, and previous to the outbreak of war was chief of the Governor-General's staff. Already it is reported the Patricias have been reduced by fifty per cent. through the fighting, and now their commanding officer has been killed.

All Canada is very proud of the men who are upholding her name and honour on the field of battle. Colonel Farquhar has already won medals and other distinctions for brilliant service in the South African war and in Somaliland. His last stand for the honour of Canada and the Empire will not go unrecorded. His was a true soldier's death. Very sorry are the Canadian people that he had to lay down his life, but the cause could not be nobler nor the manner of his taking off better ordered.

WHY APPEAL THE ARBITRATION?

THE ACTION of the City Council in entering an appeal against the award of the arbitrators is apparently a most peculiar and unwarrantable procedure. If the City Council has $300 to throw away, it might increase the grant to the Medical Association or to some other object that has a worthy purpose. When the city of Peterborough and the power companies agreed to submit their claims to arbitration, it was understood that the award would settle the matter. The arbitration has already cost this city a large sum of money, and, if we are to go on still spending money in law costs, it might have been better in the first place not to arbitrate at all, but merely fight the case through the courts in the ordinary way. An arbitration is usually agreed on to effect a fair and equitable settlement that will be final. Why the city should hand a plum of $300 to a couple of lawyers after the arbitration is a mystery that should have some explanation.

PROTECTION NEEDED.

THERE WAS a report in the news columns the other day of the murder of a fourteen-year-old girl near Orangeville by a Barnardo Home boy of about sixteen years, who afterwards committed suicide. We know very little about the case, but in any event it will not impress the public favourably with Barnardo Home children. A few days ago an English orphan suicided on a farm near Port Hope. It appears that mentally unsound children are being shipped to Canada and good respectable people induced to give them a good home. So far as can be learned, there was no complaint from the Orangeville home, but a tragedy has occurred. There certainly should be some protection furnished a family that takes into it a friendless orphan from Britain, by providing a thorough examination of character and mentality. If insane or unaccountable infants are to be placed in good homes, there is no telling when a repetition of this shocking affair will take place. People take these children with the best of intentions, and often are not even thanked for their pains. To suffer a loss such as occurred at Orangeville is too great to pass without some inquiry.

A MARKET TO RETAIN.

IN 1914 Britain imported Canadian produce in excess of 1913 to the value of $4,652,000, and in excess of 1912 of $22,690,000. For the last quarter of 1914 the excess over the same period in the previous year was nine and a half millions. These figures surely furnish some idea of the necessity there is for further production. To retain the market, Canada must h[illegible] goods. To have the goods she must cult[illegible] the best. It is this great and important doc[illegible] that the Patriotism and Production campaign is instilling and that the publications issued by the Department of Agriculture are intended to impress and further. Any of this literature can be had by sending a post-free application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, saying what is wanted. A list of upwards of two hundred publications from which to choose will be forwarded on request.

BRITISH NEEDS.

GREAT BRITAIN in 1913 imported 2,393,363 bushels of wheat and flour from Germany, Austria and Turkey; 6,663,300 bushels of barley from the same countries, and 11,273,459 bushels of oats from Germany alone. Great Britain's total import of wheat on the average each year during the past decade has been 216,843,300 bushels, of which Canada supplied less than a fourth. Of barley in 1913 Canada supplied about one-ninth of 52,358,245 bushels, and of oats, an eighth of 59,829,950 bushels. Will she do better this year?

A NEW CRIME IN THE CALENDAR.

A BILL has been introduced in the House of Commons providing an amendment to the criminal Code, covering the case of a person who aids or abetts an alien of an enemy country—one with which we are at war—in leaving the country. The Attorney-General, Hon. C. J. Doherty, explained the new amendment thus:

"There is also embodied in the bill a provision which is the result of a suggestion coming from one of the Chief Justices of one of the High Court Divisions of Ontario and which he deemed it proper to make in view of the result of a prosecution instituted there against a person for aiding an individual of alien enemy nationality to leave the country. In that particular case, it not being made directly to appear that the purpose of the alien enemy in leaving the country was to aid and to assist the enemy, and furthermore the mere act of aiding such a person to leave the country under those circumstances not amounting to treason, it was found that, notwithstanding the prohibition enacted against such alien enemy leaving the country, the person aiding could not be found guilty of any violation of the Criminal Code. It seemed to the learned Chief Justice, and to me, and also to the committee, desirable that provision should be made to cover such a case."

Asked by Sir Wilfrid Laurier as to the charge in the case he had in mind, Hon. Mr. Doherty continued:

"The charge was that the parties accused have aided a person of alien enemy nationality during the present war to leave the country, although it had been deemed desirable in the Old Country—and we followed their example—to prohibit such person of alien enemy nationality from leaving the country except when, after examination by a registrar, he was granted an exeat. Therefore the person leaving the country was acting in violation of that prohibition lawfully enacted; but it was found that there was no provision in the Criminal Code which would cover the case of a person aiding and abetting him to leave the country The parties were tried, and it was contended that such an act on the part of the accused amounted to treason; but the courts held that there was no provision in the criminal law which would reach to such a person. By this bill, the mere aiding and abetting of a person who is of alien enemy nationality to leave the country—and we are always supposing that the name 'enemy' means that we are at war with the sovereign of the nation of which the person is a subject—will be an offence now without its being necessary to establish directly on the part of the prosecution any direct purpose to aid the enemy."

The difficulty appeared to be that an alien was in normal times committing no offence in leaving the country, and, while he was committing an offence by doing so in war time, he was not committing one under the general criminal law. He is detained as a prisoner of war, not as a criminal. The penalty for aiding such a person to leave the country under the circumstances laid down in the clause is two years' imprisonment. The ends of justice appear to be served by this measure. In view of the cases of treason which arose in Toronto and Montreal a short time ago, and which occasioned considerable comment, this amendment is not a provision permitting them to be tried on a less serious charge. The Attorney-General admitted the amendment a very important one, but pointed out that it has a saving clause. The section reads:

"Every one is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to two years' imprisonment who incites or assists any subject of any foreign state or country at war with His Majesty to leave Canada, if the circumstances of the case do not exclude the possibility that assistance to the enemy is an intended object in his so leaving Canada, and if such inciting or assisting do not amount to treason."

However, it might be possible to deny intention and to substantiate such denial so that a charge of treason could be disproved or could not be laid, when the person charged had committed the more serious offence.

THE HEART OF ENGLAND.

(Westminster Gazette.)

Who said the heart of England was not the heart of old?
Who told us that it beat today for only games and gold?
That petty men who buy and sell, and only bargains make,
Had slain the soul that gave its strength to Wellington and Drake?

Who mourned for Britain's glory as a splendour that has passed?
Who wailed that England's mighty arm was weakening at last;
That her dream of glory faded just when Freedom called for men,
That the hand that smote the Corsican could never smite again?

Who said the heart of England was not the heart of old,
That the prowess of her heroes is a tale that has been told?
Who sighed for vanished valour and a might that is no more,
Who told the world Britannia was dying at the core?

O, ye who sang your sullen songs, or spake sharp words of blame,
The heroes of the Marne and Aisne are bringing ye to shame;
For the oaken heart of England beats as strong and high today
As when it won at Waterloo—and made a tyrant pay.

—Edward S. Van Zile.

Armament as a Peacemaker.

(Buffalo News.)

Modern armament, high velocity rifles and 105-centimetre guns may yet spell the world's peace. By divesting war of its glamor—by making the trade so precarious and devoid of thrills that it no longer makes an appeal to the fighting nature of man—the modern method of warfare may achieve against itself the very thing that peace tribunals, endowments and statesmanship have despaired of.

CIVIC GRANTS.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—Under this head I wish to make a few remarks with your permission.

The city authorities have as a rule been very generous with other people's money. Under this head it is a question with not a few that it might be a move in the right direction to abolish the practice entirely. However, as grants are still being made to this and that deputation, there are none more worthy than the amount which is earned, or given for services rendered by the 57th Regt. Band which gives a stated number of concerts in our parks for the period of three months, during the summer.

Those concerts are enjoyed by thousands of our citizens and many strangers who visit our city.

Why should some of our aldermen want to reduce this grant and give it to an inferior aggregation, one who is always begging everywhere, a sectarian, close, mercenary body?

There is no comparison between the two bands as to their methods of serving the public, or as to the services rendered. "The Army Band has not the instrumentation, or the music or are they allowed to use their own discretion as to how they serve the public. Therefore there is only a mere sprinkling of citizens present at their concerts.

Besides the 57th Band is an old established institution ready to respond when, and where its services are required and has always commanded the hearty support of the City Council and 57th Regiment, at a remuneration which is always reasonable. We have one city band, and that is enough for present needs, and is all that we can afford to support, also requiries our support. The citizens want the summer concerts continued by the 57th Band at Victoria Park every Friday night for three months this summer.

RATE PAYER.

VACANT LOTS.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Your suburban contempory troubles over vacant lots and empty sheds. The reader glancing at the prices in the seed catalogue and calculating the cost of fences and private detectives, wonders whether the editors head is as empty as his own pockets. This city garden scheme is only a dodge to feed fat cows and other people's children. If everyone would get rid of their vacant lots and empty houses there would be no need to compete with the gardeners and farmers in a way which is mostly waste of time and money. Besides it is all more or less an insinuation against the tenant, amounting almost to blackmail. Why, the city cannot look after one public lavatory.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

IT is a real test of a woman's ingenuity when she gets up a good supper without a thing to eat in the house.

Did you ever notice that it is always when you can't afford it that you do?

A clever man is one who never lets his wife find out how stupid he is.

A man who really prefers his wife's cooking seldom figures in a divorce suit.

One disagreeable thing about Duty is that she has such a habit of calling so early in the morning.

It is working without appreciation or applause that is the test of character.

It is a queer world. Some people get on by being foolish and others by being wise.

Dodging work and maintaining his dignity are a hard pair for a man to serve.

A man may be ever so fond of widows, but he hates awfully to have one of his own.

Money makes the world go round, and it also keeps the bills from coming round.

More Difficult.

"Do you think any one can become an orator?"

"Yes, by practice. Demosthenes talked with pebbles in his mouth so as to acquire clear enunciation."

"That was nothing. My wife can direct the movement of the entire household and hold up her end in neighborhood gossip with her mouth full of pins."

The Psychological Moment.

"What is the baseball score?" asked the woman in blue.

"The home team won."

"Good!"

"Are you interested in the game?"

"No, but I keep track of it. When the home team has won three games in succession I am going to ask my husband for a new dress."

Restricting the Vision.

Did you ever see a rabbit climb a tree?
Did you ever see a porker taking wing?
No; I never, never go upon a spree,
And the sober seldom see that sort of thing.

Slight Indication.

"How did he look?"

"Suspicious."

"About what?"

"He found the lock forced and things thrown all about the room."

"And he suspected"—

"Well, he half suspected that the house had been burglarized."

Gave Away the Secret.

"What do you call your country home?"

"Robbers' Roost."

"What!"

"Fact."

"But I didn't know you were a trust magnate."

Just a Precaution.

"He says a man should have no secrets from his wife."

"Don't you agree with that?"

"Yes, in theory."

"But in practice?"

"Well, I don't want my wife to leave me."

Charming Man.

"He is a very busy man."

"Seems to be. What does he do?"

"Keeps track of everything that is going on."

"For what purpose?"

"To keep his wife in good humor."

Charitably Inclined.

"Why do you give so much advice?"

"Why?"

"Yes."

"Well, you see, I am generosity itself and bound to give, and advice is the cheapest thing I have."

There is no disgrace in being poor, we are told. And we're glad of it, for there are enough other disadvantages about it without that one.

Look For Money
IN YOUR STORE-ROOM

There's more good money, madam, just going to waste right out there in that old storeroom of yours and down in the basement locker where they put "those old things you had no room for" than you have any idea of. How would you like a brand new, crinkly $10 bill for just part of it?

Here's what to do: If you have a good mirror—advertise it in the Want Ads of THE DAILY REVIEW. If you have curtains, carpets, even odds and ends—say so. Lamps, chairs, tables, porch furniture, stoves, heaters, irons, linens, bedding, beds, trunks, anything that can be used—for goodness sake list it. Make up a list, get it together, in as good shape as you can, and get it out where they see it all together, then put a Want Ad in THE DAILY REVIEW and get your money out of it. Use initials, numbers, or your address, as you please. Why waste useful articles or let them fall to pieces and be thrown out, when hundreds of people could use them to advantage in some way?

"Look for money in that old store-room—and get it out!"

A HALLOWEEN PARTY

At Which There Was an Episode.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER.

"Papa," said my daughter, Helen, "two weeks from today will be Halloween."

"What's Halloween?"

"Oh, papa, how ignorant you are! Halloween is the evening when young folk bob for apples blindfolded, strike at suspended bags full of nuts or candy and throw peelings over their shoulders."

"What do they throw the peelings over their shoulders for?"

"Why, the skins in falling will take the shape of a letter. That letter is the initial of the person the one throwing it will marry. If a girl looks into a mirror she'll see the face of her future husband."

"Halloween is for girls, I presume."

"Not at all. It's for boys the same as for girls."

"Well, what about your party?"

"Mamma says that if you consent we will give it at the Cedars."

The Cedars is our country camp. We had returned to the city after Labor day, a month before, and now it was proposed to go back for Helen's party. She looked at me wistfully. I remembered what such things were to me when I was a youngster and melted before that look. Indeed, I always melt before that look. I gave my consent.

This is what happened at the Halloween party. It came under my observation; but, not having woman's perceptive faculties, I saw nothing in it. The story was told me by my wife, and I tell it here as she told it to me.

The young persons assembled for Halloween at the Cedars were between sixteen and twenty-two years of age, though those above twenty were men. Some of them being too old to bob for apples or knock down bags when blindfolded, it occurred to my wife to invite a sort of bluestocking clairvoyant or something of the kind, who was to tell weird stories suitable to the occasion. She was a Miss Somers, thirty-five years old and altogether an odd person.

On Halloween after dinner the young folk assembled in the large apartment used for a living room, at one end of which was an enormous fireplace. The night was cool enough for a blaze, and logs in plenty had been provided. The room was sealed, the rafters above being left bare. On the walls were the heads of animals which I—something of a Nimrod—had slain, while several skins from the same source covered the pine floor.

Miss Somers seated herself in the center of the group before the fire, which gave the only light in the room, and began her stories. They all purported to have come under her own observation and were intended to show that for every boy and every girl there was somewhere in the world a mate. It did not seem to matter to her or to the youngsters, especially the girls, that this was impossible unless the pair were born at the same moment. There were several other big gaps which were not filled, but this did not seem to trouble any of the listeners.

Miss Somers had an eye on her listeners and observed on her right a young man, Joel Harker, in whom a love for the marvelous, judging from his features, was strongly developed. On her extreme left, partly in shadow, sat a girl, Marjorie Winthrop, one of those feminine creatures made especially to love and be loved. Harker was twenty-one years old; Marjorie Winthrop was not quite eighteen.

To a close observer it was evident that Miss Somers was casting or trying to cast a spell over these two. This was noticeable since, while telling her yarns, she would first look at Joel, whose eyes—as indeed the eyes of all—were fixed intently upon her, and then turn to Marjorie. It seemed that she was attempting by will power to draw these two together. At times, willed by her, Joel would look from her to Marjorie; then after an interval Marjorie would look at Joel and always with something of the expression indicating that she regarded him as her own especial property.

The young people listened to Miss Somers' stories and chatted till 9 o'clock, when they separated in order that each might go off alone in search of a Halloween experience. The camp was situated on the margin of a lake, surrounded by hills, the latter being part wood and part open. The young fellows, to whom the Halloween part of the affair appeared ridiculous, went into a room where there was a billiard table to play and to smoke. Joel Harker disappeared, and it was not known where he had gone. As for the girls, some of them went to their rooms, some out in the boats, while others scattered themselves on the shore. Where Miss Somers went was not noticed.

This roving about by night was facilitated by a full moon, which gave ample light.

From time immemorial there has been evidence of a power possessed by some persons to will others to do certain things. Most of these cases of mental domination have been either disproved or not proved. Nevertheless among the great amount of chaff there have been a few grains of wheat. Certain it is that Miss Somers was nowhere near Joel Harker or Marjorie Winthrop on that Halloween eve after 9 o'clock. Joel after the breaking up went out on the veranda and sat down in the moonlight. Then he felt impelled to walk down a road that bordered the lake. At a place where the sheet of water was wider than elsewhere he came upon a boat. What induced him he did not know, but he felt a desire to step into the boat. A pair of oars were in the bottom, and, taking them up, he pulled out into the lake. There were two other boats on the water, one near the camp, the other directly across from the point at which he started. He felt no inclination to go to the former, but was moved to pull to the other.

Joel's mind was during this time fixed upon Marjorie. He did not know where she was and had no idea of finding her. Marjorie was thinking of Joel and admitted afterward that she could not help thinking of him, though on looking over the young men she had met at the camp she had been favorably impressed with another. She chose the lake on which to receive her Halloween impressions and carried a hand mirror with her.

Marjorie pulled into a cove, dropped her oars and, taking up her mirror, looked into it for the face of her "fate." The only face she saw was her own, and she had no reason to be displeased with it, softened, as it was, by moonlight. She kept her eyes fixed on the glass for some time, but no face other than her own appearing she dropped it to enjoy a view of the water and the surrounding hills.

Occasionally a light breeze would ripple the water, breaking the rays of the moon into innumerable particles, but only for a few minutes, when the zephyr would die away, leaving the surface of the water and the leaves of the trees on the shore as motionless as before. Over the face of the moon far up in the sky passed the silhouette of a bird.

The stillness was broken close beside her by a fish, which jumped above the surface, possibly for a glimpse at the moon, possibly to see who was out at that time of night, when humans should be in their beds.

Presently there came a distant sound of oars—plunk, plunk, plunk! Marjorie on leaving the camp had seen most of the young men in the billiard room, and a couple of girls were getting into a boat at the landing. She inferred that the boat she heard contained these girls or at least some of her own sex. The plunk of oars grew nearer and seemed to be coming in her direction.

It occurred to her to turn her back to any one who might be approaching, raise her glass as if expecting to see the face of a lover, then turn and feign to be surprised and disappointed at seeing a girl. Facing the shore, she looked straight before her. When the coming boat drew near and the sound of oars ceased she looked into the mirror to enjoy the expression on the face of the person approaching.

A little shriek indicated that she had been surprised. Instead of seeing the face of a girl reflected in the glass she saw that of a man. There was scarcely sufficient light to recognize her reflected features, so she turned about and faced him.

He was Joel Harker.

This is all that is known of the story in detail. Whether Joel and Marjorie came back to the camp together or separately, whether they remained out late or early, they never told. Neither was in the group that gathered about the dining table for a supper and to compare Halloween experiences. Those experiences were invented and were proportionately marvelous. The only real one was that narrated here, but not then. The absence of the two persons concerned in it was noted and commented upon, but there were several other absences, and nothing more was thought of theirs than of the others. Indeed, on this occasion it would not have been proper to make minute inquiries.

The party did not break up for several days after Halloween, and during the remainder of the time there was a drawing together between Joel Harker and Marjorie Winthrop. They not only became inseparable, but did not take any pains to conceal the fact that they had suddenly become lovers. With this part of their mutual enthrallment Miss Somers surely had nothing to do, for she left the Cedars the morning after Halloween—that is, unless she worked upon them from a distance, which is not very likely. Indeed, it was not necessary.

Some months elapsed after Helen's Halloween party before an engagement was announced between two of our guests—Joel Harker and Marjorie Winthrop. Miss Somers was accused by my wife with having bewitched them, but she would not admit that she had exercised any influence whatever on either of them.

But my wife does not believe her, and I am of the opinion that my wife is correct. Marjorie has confided to Helen that while listening to the stories by the fireside she was under the thrall of Miss Somers. She felt impelled to go out in a boat and to remain where Joel found her. She also confessed that her shriek at seeing a man's face in the mirror was not genuine, but a bit of feminine affectation, for she felt all the while that she would see Joel's.

After the marriage between the two I questioned Joel, but got no satisfaction as to his having been affected by Miss Somers. But a man will admit to a woman some things that he will not admit to another man. He had acknowledged to my wife, feeling impelled to do what he did, but when I asked him about it he said that there was nothing in it. So there is no absolute solution to the matter.

Woman's World

Executive Ability Akin to Her Father's Miss Morgan's Gift.

MISS ANNE MORGAN.

Miss Anne Morgan, youngest daughter of the late financier of that name, seems to have inherited some of his remarkable executive ability. Since her father's death she has been the leader in several philanthropic schemes unusual in scope and striking in their success.

One of her most successful projects has been the vacation savings fund, out of which grew many projects for the benefit of working women. One of these is a lunch room and club for girls on Thirty-ninth street, New York. A second lunch service combined with a dance hall has been opened in the Strand theater building. The Lafayette fund, whose object is to supply emergency kits for the soldiers of France, is a hobby which has enlisted her interest as well as that of many other society women. The vacation war relief committee, in which Miss Morgan is interested, supplies work to girls who are out of employment. The work consists in the sewing of garments for the war sufferers in Europe.

Altogether Miss Morgan seems to be a busy and resourceful woman and rather notable for the practical and original form of her philanthropies.

Soudan Insurrection Story Untrue.

BERLIN, March 22.—"The report recently published by The Vossische Zeitung concerning an insurrection in Soudan and a British defeat has proved to be untrue," says an overseas news agency item made public here last night.

A despatch on March 18 said that a German merchant who had recently returned from Egypt was authority for the assertion that the whole of Soudan, including Khartoum and also parts of Nubia, were in possession of the Dervishes. This traveler, whose statements were published in The Vossische Zeitung, also described an engagement near Fashoda last December in which Gen. Howley of the British army and a number of other officers, together with almost 2,000 men, lost their lives.

MRS. WISENEIGHBOUR says:

"I should have told you the other day, when I was speaking of 'Eddy's' Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an Indurated Fibrewear Tub to hold your clothes, if you want to make a success of wash-day."

MRS. NEWLYWED says:

"I've heard of 'Eddy's' Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between fibre and wooden ware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece. It cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters, wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

Pope Benedict's Prayer for Peace

Was Said in Roman Catholic Churches on Sunday

In all the three Catholic Churches yesterday Peace Sunday was observed in accordance with the decree recently issued by His Holiness Pope Benedict XV. In the morning after the High Mass the Blessed Sacrament was exposed on the main altar and remain exposed to public veneration till evening. The decree had said, "and it is desirable that arrangements be made whereby children also should take due part in the public adoration." In view of this the children were present in large numbers during the afternoon. In the evening, previous to the deposition of the Blessed Sacrament, the Rosary and Litany of the Saints were recited, also the following prayer expressly composed by His Holiness in order to obtain the benefit of peace:—

Dismayed by the horrors of a war which is bringing ruin to peoples and nations, we turn, O Jesus, to Thy most loving Heart as to our last hope. O God of Mercy, with tears we invoke Thee to end this fearful scourge; O King of Peace, we humbly implore the peace for which we long. From Thy Sacred Heart Thou didst shed forth over the world divine Charity, so that discord might end and love alone might reign among men. During Thy life on earth Thy Heart beat with tender compassion for the sorrows of men; in this hour made terrible with burning hate, with bloodshed and with slaughter, once more may Thy divine Heart be moved to pity. Pity the countless mothers in anguish for the fate of their sons; pity the numberless families now bereaved of their fathers; pity Europe over which broods such havoc and disaster. Do Thou inspire rulers and peoples with counsels of meekness, do Thou heal the discords that tear the nations asunder; Thou Who didst shed Thy Precious Blood that they might live as brothers, bring men together once more in loving harmony. And as once before to the cry of the Apostle Peter: 'Save us, Lord, we Perish," Thou didst answer with words of mercy and didst still the raging waves, so now deign to hear our trustful prayer, and give back to the world peace and tranquillity.

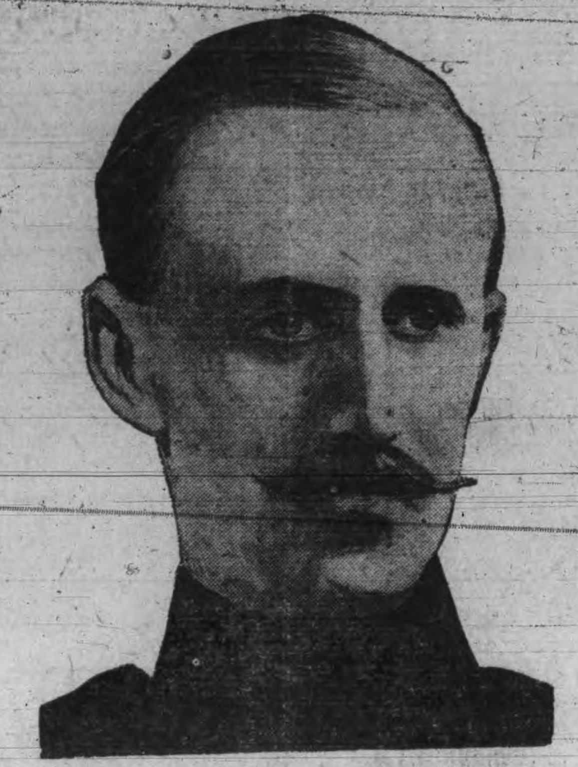
And do thou, O most Holy Virgin, as in other times of sore distress, be now our help, our protection and our safeguard. Amen.

A Day of General Communion.

The last clause of the decree was: In the hopes that Almighty God may pour forth in yet greater abundance His Divine Grace, the Sovereign Pontiff exhorts the Faithful to approach the Sacrament of Penance and to receive Holy Communion, and grants to all those who, after Confession and Communion, shall assist at one or other of the sacred functions as above ordered or shall pray for some time before the Most Blessed Sacrament while solemnly exposed, a Plenary Indulgence.

Thus, the day was one of general communion.

In the three local churches the numbers receiving Holy Communion were very large, particularly in the Church of the Sacred Heart where T.A.S., C.M.B.A. and Sodality of the Blessed Virgin received in bodies.



COL. FARQUHAR, COMMANDER OF THE PATRICIAS.

Col. Francis Douglas Farquhar, whose death is officially announced, was born in 1874, and was the only surviving son of Sir H. T. Farquhar. He married in 1905 Lady Evelyn Hely-Hutchinson, and leaves two young daughters. He joined the Coldstream Regiment in 1896, and was made captain in 1901. He served in South Africa 1899 and 1900, and was mentioned in despatches, receiving the Queen's Medal with five clasps and the D.S.O. He was with the Chinese Regiment of Infantry in 1901-2, and was a member of the Somaliland expedition 1903, receiving a medal with clasp for his services there. He relinquished his position at the Government House, Ottawa, to take command of the Pats.

NEW OFFICERS FOR BAR ASSOCIATION

Mr. F. D. Kerr, president of the local Bar Association, is in Ottawa attending the annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association at the Ritz-Carleton Hotel. Saturday morning the meeting listened to an address on "The Honor of the Bar" from E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., of Toronto.

A part of the morning session was taken up with the election of officers. For the afternoon a reception to members and delegates was arranged by the Montreal Bar at the University Club.

Sir James Aikins, Winnipeg, was re-elected President of the association. R. C. Smith, Montreal, was elected Vice-President to represent Quebec. The following were elected as added representatives on the Council from the Province of Quebec: F. C. Meredith and Gonzalves Desaulniers, K.C., Montreal; Louis St. Laurent, Quebec, and L. T. Perrault, Arthabaska.

Lady Gibson, of Hamilton, received a cable stating that her son, Lieut. Colin Gigson, who was wounded in France, was out of danger and would be sent to England to recuperate.

R. F. S. Dowling, who has accepted a call to College Street Presbyterian Church, Toronto, as assistant to Rev. Dr. Gilray, was presented by his congregation at Deseronto with a fitted leather club bag and an address.

ANCIENT TOOTHPICKS.

The employment of toothpicks is very ancient. In Grote's "History of Greece" we find that Agathoeles, "among the worst of Greeks," was poisoned by a medicated quill handed to him for cleaning his teeth after dinner.

Toothpicks were in common use in the time of the Caesars. Martial tells us those made of a chip of mastic wood (lentiscus) are the best, but that if you run short of such timber a quill will serve your purpose, and he ridicules an old fop who was in the habit of digging away at his gums with his polished linetiscus, though he had not a tooth left in his head.

Toothpicks occur early of silver, but pieces of wood or of feathers with a red end as quills in our day were most usual. The toothpick is the Anglo-Saxon tothgare. The old name was picktooth. It was imported by travelers from Italy and France, and the using of it was long deemed an affected mark of gentility. It was worn as a trophy in the hat, and Sir Thomas Averbury describes a courtier, the pink of fashion, "with a picktooth in his hat."

Bishop Earle says of an idle gallant, "His picktooth bears a great part in his discourse."—London Telegraph.

FLOOD CUTS OFF GERMAN FORCES

Russians Are Pressing Forward at Northern Extreme of Line --- Civilians Called in to Protect Memel

PETROGRAD, March 22. — The Russians have succeeded in delivering the first blow of the spring campaign inside German territory. The lower Niemen is now flooding wide stretches of her marshy banks. This separates the northern column of the German left wing from its base at Koenigsberg, from which it is now impossible to send reinforcements overland. A week ago the Russians began pressing the Germans through Tauroggen towards Tilsit and further north across the frontier upon Memel. Some German horsemen were drowned in the Niemen river. The main body had to struggle northward and westward towards the coast of Kurinscho Haff, a shallow sea separated from the Baltic by a long, narrow sandbank, beginning a dozen miles above Koenigsberg, and ending at Memel. The Russian advance ended in a complete victory Thursday evening. The German column, which had been driven eastward across the frontier, scattered along the waterside.

Eight thousand infantry from the fortress placed in the trenches outside of Memel were driven back into the streets. The commandant had armed the civilian population with rifles from the armory, and a confused mob of soldiers and civilians opened fire from the houses and barricades upon the leading Russian detachments. The ony method of attempting the relief of Memel seems to be to bring ships from Danzig. These will have to shell their own town and expose themselves to an obvious challenge from the sea.

At Prsemysl the garrison poured out 20,000 strong during Thursday night, forming to the north and south. Then half the garrison made a sortie eastward and attempted to drive off the besiegers. The effort was a complete failure, and the Austrians lost heavily in dead. Over 6,000 prisoners, many miserably underfed, accepted capture with infinite relief.

Hard Battle In Vosges.

PARIS, March 22. — Massing an immense number of troops on Saturday, the Germans delivered a strong attack on the French positions in the Great and Little Reich Ackerkopf of the Vosges Range, and after desperate fighting, in which both sides were exhausted, carried both positions. The losses by both sides were heavy. The French commander at once hurried up reinforcements and succeeded in regaining the Little Reich Ackerdopf, and by nightfall the fresh troops were regaining the French hold on the Great Ackerdopf.

The cathedral of Soissons was again bombarded by the Germans and seriously damaged. Twenty-seven shells were discharged at the edifice. The French War Office takes occasion to contradict German assertions that observation posts were ever established on the structure, or that the Red Cross flag was hoisted upon it.

A counter-attack of the enemy was made on French position west of Perthes, in Champagne region, but did not succeed. The French in turn made a slight advance to the east of the ridges near Mesnil. This was followed by a bombardment of the position by each side.

French progress at Les Eparges was continued by the repulsing of two strong German attacks and the carrying of the greater part of a German position for which a two days' struggle had been raging. Three attacks in succession were made to regain this position, with the result that the Germans left many dead on the field and the post in the hands of the French soldiers. Further attacks on the French trenches in the Bouchot wood were repulsed. A hot rifle fire was kept up in this region over Sunday, and two violent counter-attacks of the enemy were repulsed.

A German blockhouse in the Montmarc wood in the Woevre region was destroyed by French artillery fire, which also blew up several ammunition wagons with stores.

WHAT PLANTS ARE GREATLY BENEFITED BY LIMING?

The following list is given by Prof. Wheeler of the United States Agricultural Department:—Spinach, lettuce (all kinds), beets (all kinds(, okra (gumbo), salsify (vegetable oyster), celery, onion, parsnip, cauliflower, cucumber, eggplant, cantaloupe, asparagus, kohl-rabi, cabbage, dandelion, Swedish turnip, pepper, peanut, English or flat turnip, upland cress (pepper grass), martynia, rhubarb, common pea, pumpkin, summer squash (scalloped), golden wax bean, red Valentine bean, horticultural pole bean, bush Lima bean, lentil, Hubbard squash, saltbush, hemp, tobacco, sorghum, alfalfa, clover (red, white, crimson and alsike), barley emmer, wheat, oats, timothy, Kentucky blue grass, Canada pea, Cuthbert raspberry, gooseberry, currant (White Dutch), orange, quince, cherry, Burbank Japan plum, American linden, American elm, sweet alyssum, mignonette, nasturtium, balsam, pansy, poppy, and sweet pea.

What Plants Are but Little Benefited by Liming?

Indian corn, spurry, rye carrot, chicory, Rhode Island bent and red topo.

What Plants Are Slightly Injured by Liming?

Cotton, tomato, cowpea, zinnia, phlox (Drummond), Concord grape, peach, apple and pear.

What Plants Are Distinctly Injured by Liming?

Lupine, common sorrel, radish, velvet bean, castor bean, flax, blackberry, black-cap, raspberry, cranberry, Norway spruce and American white birch. Other plants said to be injured are the chestnut, azalea, and rhododendron.

Should Lime Be Spread with Manure?

No, nor with any other fertilizer. But you may use a manure spreader or a fertilizer drill in applying the lime. It should be spread on the surface, usually after plowing, and then be harrowed in thoroughly. It should not be plowed in deeply, because it works down anyway. On grass land it may be spread on the surface.

Is There Any Danger in Lime?

It is possible to "burn" the soil with quicklime, or caustic, if it is spread in too great quantities in its raw state. Use a little judgment, and there is no danger.

THE LAWN THIS SPRING

Every lawn requires much spring attention to keep it at its best. The bulk of this work must be done before the grass begins to grow or soon afterward. An open winter is severe on lawns, especially those not as yet firmly established. Grass plants heave badly during an open winter from the effects of the frost, and unless the proper spring attention is given the drying winds will kill many of the plants. It is always the more desirable grasses that winter out, leaving the coarse, deep-rooted plants in possession of the lawn. Lawns properly attended become better each year, but neglected swards rapidly decline. A lawn is never at its best until three or four years after planting.

No lawn can be left unattended this spring, or at any other time. Every lawn will need much attention. Rolling, fertilizing, weed digging, raking, reseeding and other duties must be given the turf this spring. The work should begin the very day the frost has left the ground and the soil has become dry enough to work. The initial attention should be to clearing the sward of all rubbish, including the old dead grass about the plants. Take a fine-toothed iron rake and first rake the area one way and then the other. If the plants have heaved badly from the cold, then roll the lawn before raking it.

Not enough stress is placed on the importance of rolling the grass. Only a comparatively few lawns are rolled and those given the firming treatment are not rolled half enough. Grass must have a firm plant bed, and unless the soil is very heavy and moist too much rolling cannot be given. Rolling early in the spring pushes the heaved plants back into the soil, where new rootlets can be sent out and a hold obtained on the soil. This prevents the drying spring winds from killing the plants or reducing their vitality. The best part of a lawn is the plants already established, and to prevent the loss of a multitude of these, easy rolling is imperative.

When the frost has left the ground put the roller to work. Do this whether the soil is likely to freeze up again or not. If the grass was rolled at every winter thaw, provided the earth became sufficiently dry, there would be a great saving of grass, with its subsequent beneficial effects. The roots of grass begin to grow as soon as the frost leaves the ground in spring, so the rolling cannot be done too early. Let the first rolling be done with the weights off to make the roller as light as possible. Working the soil with a heavy roller while the ground is stil wet is likely to cause the turf to buckle and become uneven. Be careful not to cause the turf to become wavy through the use of a heavy roller at first, or the sward will be ruined.

The Board of Control of Hamilton appointed Frederick Todd, of Toronto, city auditor at a salary of $2,500 a year.

DEAD SOLDIER WAS CRACK SHOT

Sergt. Ross Herman of Frankford Among the Killed

Belleville, March 22. — The first soldier of the 49th Regiment to fall in action in France is Sergt. Ross Herman of Frankford.

A cable to that effect was received in the village of Frankford by Mr. Charles Herman father of the deceased hero. Sergt. Herman was killed on March 2nd.

He was about 21 years of age and was the first of the many gallant lads who enlisted at Frankford under Capt. Vanderwater. While in Belleville he stayed at the Windsor Hotel.

Sergt. Herman was an employe of the Frankford paper mill. He was the possessor of a great deal of talent, and manifested his abilities by appearing at many entertainments in the village. He was a member of the Church of England.

He had drilled with the 49th in camp for three or four years and was a very efficient non-commissioned officer. He was connected with "C" company.

Ross was a crack shot and it is thought by some that he was engaged in some very dangerous duty, on account of his efficiency with the rifle.

He was single and was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herman. Two brothers are also bereft by his heroic death on the battlefield. William of Trenton and Charles of Frankford.

WEALTH OF THE CZAR.

The Romanoffs, the family of the Czar, might easily claim precedence over all the other families of wealth in the world. In his own right the Czar of all Russias has possessions and investments probably the match to those of any other man. His allowance from the treasury per annum, nobody knows. With various additions it may reach 50,000,000 rubles. In his name stand the titles to 98 grand palaces, to over 120 large estates; to churches, convents, houses and farms innumerable. A whole army of retainers, managers, overseers are on the payroll, say 50,000 without counting their dependents. There are over 100,000 head of horned cattle, some 30,000 horses; pigs and sheeps are counted into millions. He owns valuable mines in the Ural; many important industrial establishments.

When it is borne in mind that all his possessions are exempt from taxation a net revenue of another 50,000,000 rubles would hardly be considered an over estimate. The purchasing value of a ruble (though only about one-half the intrinsic value) is the same in Russia as that of the dollar in America.

Many Turn Gold Hunting.

Probably owing to the business depression and the difficulty of making money in other ways, there have been many applications of late for placer gold mining rights along the North Saskatchewan river, to the Edmonton district. As the sands are known to contain gold in sufficient quantity to make the operation fairly remunerative, the Government is issuing 100-foot licenses for one dollar, but requires practically continuous operation to prevent cancellation of license.

LEADER OF PATRICIAS HEADS HEAVY LIST OF CASUALTIES

A Dozen Members of the Canadian Forces Are Dead and Many Are Wounded, According to Bulletin Received at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, March 22.—Col. Farquhar of the Princess Patricias has been killed in action.

The message from the War Office to the Chief of Staff read:

"Col. Farquhar, Princess Patricias, dead. Lieut. Mason of some regiment dead. Three killed, twenty wounded."

The official list of casualties given out in Ottawa last night also included in the list of dead:

Lieut. F. L. Eardley Wilmot of the Princess Patricias. His next of kin reside in Westward Ho, Devon, Eng.

Lieut. W. N. Galaugher, a Chatham, Ont., man, formerly resident in Toronto.

Five other Canadian soldiers appear as killed in the latest casualty list, issued in Ottawa last night.

Col. Francis Douglas Farquhar, D.S.O., succeeded Brigadier-General (then colonel) Lowther in 1913 as Military Secretary, or Chief of the Duke of Connaught's staff at Ottawa, being temporarily promoted lieutenant-colonel, but resigned that position to take command of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. Previous to his coming to Canada he served for some time on the General Staff at the War Office, London, Eng. He was the only surviving son and heir of Sir Henry Thomas Farquhar of Gilminscroft, Scotland, and was 40 years of age, being born Sept. 17, 1874. The late Col. Farquhar is survived by Mrs. Farquhar, who was Lady Evelyn Hely-Hutchinson, a sister of the sixth Earl of Donoughmore, whom he married in 1905, and by two daughters. He joined the Coldstream Guards about twenty years ago, served in the South African war, 1899-1900, when he was mentioned in despatches, won the Queen's medal with five clasps, and received the D.S.O. Col. Farquhar participated in all the engagements of Lord Methuen's division up to and including the ill-fated engagement at Magersfontein, and took part in Lord Roberts' advance to Pretoria. In 1901-2 he was attached to a Chinese infantry regiment, and in 1903 participated in the Somaliland Expedition, again winning a medal with clasp.

Last September, Major Hamilton Gault, of Montreal, organized and equipped the Princess Patricias, and Col. Farquhar was placed in command, with Major Gault second.

A list of casualties among the Canadian Expeditionary Force was announced by the Militia Department this morning:

First Battalion—Killed in action, Lieut. W. N. Galaugher, March 20. Wounded, Corpl. Nathan C. Newman.

Second Battalion—Killed in action, March 2, Pte. G. Earle, Corpl T. Newman, Corpl. F. Bremner, Corpl. W. A. C. Mackay. Wounded, Sergt. J. Larkin, Bugler A. J. Mantle, Sergt. W. H. Lacey, Pte. W. Ramsay.

NEARLY ONE-HUNDRED THOUSAND CANADIAN SOLDIERS UNDER ARMS

Policy to Send Continuous Stream of Fighters is Being Effectively Carried out

Approximately 95,000 Canadian soldiers are now under arms. This comprises the men in the trenches in Flanders, the reserves in England, the men on guard duty in Canada and in Egypt, twenty thousand men for the Second Contingent, and twenty thousand for the third and future contingents now enlisted and in training at various divisional centres in Canada.

These figures will come as a surprise to most Canadians who have not realized how effectively the Government has been carrying out the policy laid down by Sir Robert Borden of sending a continuous stream of fighting units to the aid of the Motherland.

The 95,000 men now under arms comprises the following: First Contingent now at the front, with reserves in England, 33,000; Princess Patricia Light Infantry and reinforcements, 1,600 men; Royal Canadian Regiment at Bermuda 1,200 men; Regiment at St. Lucia, British West Indies, 500 men; Thirteen regiments of mounted men, 7,400; Second Contingent, including 4,000 already in England, 20,000; twenty-six regiments of third and fourth contingents, 20,000 men; men on home defence and guarding alien camps, 10,092.

In addition to the foregoing there have been sent forward various hospital, veterinary and other detachments which would make something like fifteen hundred or two thousand men.

In West Indies.

When war broke out, the British regular regiment stationed at Bermuda was recalled and the Royal Canadian Regiment, Canada's crack permanent corps at Halifax, was sent to take its place. In addition, a regiment 500 strong was sent to St. Lucia, British West Indies. No mention of this movement has ever been made in any Canadian newspapers, but as the regiment has been stationed there for some time and all danger of German attack by rading cruisers has passed there can can be no harm in publishing the fact.

The Second Contingent is fully recruited, and carrying on its training, preparatory for leaving for the front. Approximately there are 20,000 men, of whom 4,000 are already in England, and may be called upon if required as reinforcements for the First Contingent. The contingent consists of a full army division. There are twelve infantry brigades, a squadron of mounted troops, twelve field artillery brigades, a heavy artillery battery, ammunition columns, divisional engineers, signal service, etc.

Reserve Battalions.

In addition to the two army divisions, twenty-four reserve battalions, which are generally known as the Third and Fourth Contingent, although they will be sent to the front as reinforcements. Most of these regiments are at full strength and others are at half strength and are daily filling up their ranks. Several regiments have just been authorized and have only been recruiting for a few days. It is estimated by the Militia Department that twenty thousand men have been enlisted for these regiments. The number is growing daily.

In addition, the latest figures show that there are 10,092 men on active service in Canada. This includes the garrisons at Halifax, Quebec, Esquimault and other military towns; the guards on the Welland, St. Lawrence and other canals, guards on public buildings, and the alien enemies detention camp, guards at Petawawa, Fort Henry, Hearst and other points.

A gun carriage and team from C Battery, R.C.H.A., left Kingston recently for Prescott to be used in the military funeral of Aviator Sharpe, who was killed when his machine capsized in England. Prescott is paying the funeral expenses.

LOOSE IN HIDE SLICK IN HAIR AND BRIGHT EYES

"They were loose in the hide, slick in the hair and eyes bright."

The foregoing illuminative description was furnished in county court this morning by one of the witnesses in the cruelty to animals charge upon which Mr. Barnard Navin of North Monaghan is being tried before County Police Magistrate Langley.

Wm. Leslie was the witness. He was called by the defence to testify in regard to the condition of the cattle which Mr. Navin is alleged to have ill-treated.

Mr. Leslie said when he went into Mr. Navin's stable to look at the cattle they jumped up quite spryly, and they appeared loose in the hide, slick in the hair and their eyes were bright. That was on Feb. 16th. They wanted to play when let out. They were not greatly different from a great many other cattle he had seen at this time of the year. Personally he failed to discover where there had been any cruelty to them from their appearance. He said he knew of a farm near Buckhorn where cattle were to be found in no better condition than Mr. Navin's.

Mr. Steele, another witness for the defence, and an experienced farmer, saw Mr. Navin's stock, and declared that they looked in fair condition. He did not think from his observation that they had been cruelly treated. He had seen the backbone of hogs showing through and yet nothing had been said of it.

All the evidence was in by three o'clock and Magistrate Langley stated that he would enlarge the case till Saturday for judgment.

STEAMER IS TORPEDOED

Cairntore Destroyed but the Crew Escapes

DUTCH CRAFT HELD

LONDON, March 22.—The British steamer Cairntore was torpedoed yesterday afternoon off Beachy Head, in the English Channel, and sank, according to a Central News despatch from Eastbourne. Her crew escaped. When the steamer was struck rescue boats put out to her and attempted to tow her into port. She sank eight miles out, however. The Cairntore was bound from Newcastle for Genoa with coal.

Thirty members of the crew of the steamer Rievaulx Abbey, plying between Hull and the Netherlands, were landed here by the torpedo boat Immingham and transferred to a steamer for Hull yesterday morning. The vessel commenced to sink off Bridlington on Friday night. The reason is a mystery.

A new and highly important phase of the German blockade of Britain dawned Thursday, when submarine U-28, which for some time has been cruising in the neighborhood of the Maas lightship, held up, captured and confiscated two Dutch steamers, the Batavier V. of Rotterdam and the Zaanstroom of the Dutch Shipping Co., Amsterdam, and successfully convoyed them to Zeebrugge in broad daylight.

The town council of Weston has decided to take steps to secure a refund of all monies overpaid in the building of the town's sanitary system. This action is taken on the strength of the report of Provincial Auditor W. J. Sharpe, who investigated the engineers' and contractors' accounts.

BETTER AN EYEGLASS THAN A GLASS EYE

"Putting it off till tomorrow" is neither wisdom nor economy where the safety of your eyes is concerned. Little eye troubles lead to big ones, usually, unless steps to correct them are taken. By means of scientific instruments, we can tell you whether glasses will do much or little for you. Even if you do not need glasses, our assurance is worth vastly more than the time required to be examined. Why not be sure that your eyesight is safe?

FLEETS' GUNS ABLE TO DOMINATE DEFENCES OF THE DARDANELLES

Operations Thus Far Have Demonstrated Superiority of Naval Artillery Over Turkish Weapons, Says Official Bulletin—Bad Weather and Drifting Mines Have Again Delayed the Fleet's Advance.

LONDON, March 22.—The Admiralty last night made the following announcement:

"Unfavorable weather has interrupted the operations in the Dardanelles, and as seaplane reconnaissances have not been possible, the amount of damage done to the forts by the bombardment of the 18th cannot be ascertained.

"No great expectations should, however, be based on this, as owing to the losses caused by drifting mines the attack was not pressed to its conclusion on that day.

"The power of the fleet to dominate the fortresses by superiority of fire seems to be established. Various other dangers and difficulties will have to be encountered, but nothing has happened which justifies the belief that the cost of the undertaking will exceed what has always been expected and provided for.

"The British casualties in the personnel are sixty-one men killed, wounded and missing."

Admiral De Robeck has telegraphed to the Admiralty as follows: "I desire to bring to the notice of your lordships the splendid behavior of the French squadron. Their heavy loss leave them quite undaunted. They were led into close action by Rear Admiral Guepratte with the greatest gallantry."

A statement made public by the Admiralty last night shows that the total casualties among the officers of the British ships engaged in the fighting in the Dardanelles last Thursday, when the Irresistible and Ocean were sunk, were four killed and two wounded on the Irresistible and three killed on the Inflexible.

A casualty list of the men shows that 20 on board the Inflexible and four on the Irresistible were killed.

An Athens despatch says the Turkish forces on the coast of the Gulf of Smyrna have been reinforced to the number of 80,000. It is reported that 10,000 troops have been sent to strengthen the garrison on the Dardanelles.

An Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says:

"The Emperor received Djavid Bey, the Turkish Minister of Finance, at Berlin on Friday, when the Dardanelles situation was discussed.

"In an interview which appeared in the Berlin papers, Djavid Bey intimated that the Emperor was much concerned about the possible fate of Constantinople, not only because of the tremendous political consequences which would result, but also on account of the prosperity which the forcing of the Dardanelles would bring to Odessa. The Emperor is quoted as saying, "We cannot allow Odessa to become another Hamburg'."

Admirals of the allied fleet who conferred aboard the French flagship Suffren Friday regarding their future course in attempting to force the Dardanelles are believed to have decided unanimously to renew soon the general attack, says a Tenedos despatch to the Havas Agency.

The French battleship Gaulois, the despatch says, which was badly damaged along the waterline by shells from the Turkish forts, is anchored in deep water off Mavrais Island, while her sister ship, the Charlemagne, is standing by to offer assistance if it is needed. It has been found difficult to make immediate repairs to the Gaulois owing to stormy weather and high seas.

Complete details of the damage suffered by the forts have not been obtained, but the allied commanders believe it was serious. Fort Kum Kaleh, which has been repaired by the Turks, directed an accurate fire against the warships.

SHORTER MEN TO BE ACCEPTED

LONDON, March 22. — The standard of height for recruits has been reduced to 5 feet one inch in 25 infantry regiments. Age limits remain the same, from 19 to 38 years, as also the chest measurements of 34 inches.

"Rally round the Flag" is the latest recruiting inscription for London's taxicabs. The words stand on a brilliant yellow background, flanked by the colors of the allied powers draped around the Union Jack. The recruiting campaign of the War Office is maintained as vigorously as ever, with posters and band concerts.

But the call made to the shorter men is expected to considerably raise the percentage of enlistments.

Report Is False.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—At the British embassy Saturday this statement was issued:

"The British embassy learns there is no truth in a report emanating from Pekin that the British and Russian ambassadors at Tokio have made joint representations to Japan on the subject of China, or that the British and United States Governments are in consultation with a similar object."

Bangor, Maine, March 22.—The federal commissioner found that sufficient evidence had been offered to hold Werner Horn, charged with illegal interstate transportation of explosives, for appearance in the federal district court in Boston. Horn was remanded to jail in Portland pending his removal to Boston.

CARDINAL AGLIARDI DEAD.

Chancellor of Roman Catholic Church Passes Away, Aged 83 Years.

ROME, March 22.—Cardinal Agliardi, chancellor of the Roman Catholic Church and sub-dean of the Sacred College, died Saturday at the age of 83 years. He was the titular Bishop of Albano, and was proclaimed a cardinal in 1896. It was he who proposed to the Sacred College on Aug. 22 last that an address be sent to the belligerent powers asking that an armistice be arranged so that a successor to Pope Pius X. need not be elected while blood was being shed upon the battlefield. When there was friction between the French Government and Cardinal Merry Del Val in 1906 it was reported that Cardinal Agliardi was a candidate for papal secretary of state.

CARDINAL AGLIARDI.

Horn Must Face Trial.

BANGOR, Me., March 22.—Lieut. Werner Horn, of the German Landwehr, is doomed to be returned to Boston for trial on the charge of illegally transporting explosives from New York to Vanceboro in his attempt to blow up the international railway bridge at Vanceboro. This is the decision rendered by Commissioner Reid.

Car Backed Up; One Dead.

MONTREAL, March 22. — Peter Marusch, aged 27, a Russian, was killed and John Mackay, aged 32, of William avenue, Outremont, was injured last Friday when an electric engine behind which the two men were standing suddenly backed up, near the Maplewood avenue shaft of the Mount Royal tunnel.

A bill is up in New York State to allow Sunday baseball.

WAR SIGNS

Everything in Italy Points to Speedy Entrance Into War

ROME, March 22. — The official military journal publishes an order recalling under the colors, until Dec. 31, all reserve officers born between the years 1882 and 1887.

German and Austrian subjects who reside in Italy have been advised by their respective consuls to leave the country as quickly as possible.

It is reported here that so many German military spies have entered Italy that the General Staff has been obliged to change its mobilization plans because there is reason to believe that some of the secrets connected with them have been revealed.

Parts of the Italian police force have been detailed to keep under surveillance Germans who recently entered Italy under what are considered suspicious circumstances.

The Italian military authorities have caused to be distributed to Italy's soldiers the identification cards or badges which are worn customarily only during an active campaign.

Bouvet Saved 64 Men.

PARIS, March 22. — Official announcement was made here Saturday afternoon that 64 men have been saved from the crew of the French battleship Bouvet, sunk in the Dardanelles, March 18.

The losses on the other ships of the French division which took part in this action are declared to be very slight.

KITCHENER'S LAST APPEAL.

If Dockers' Refuse Then to Yield Other Steps Will Follow.

LIVERPOOL, March 22.—"If this appeal has no effect I shall have to consider steps that will have to be taken to ensure what is required at Liverpool being done," was the declaration made by Lord Kitchener in a letter which he personally handed to James Sexton, secretary of the Dockers' Union.

Lord Kitchener, who spent the week-end inspecting the Liverpool, Manchester and Birmingham Battalions of his new army, expressed surpries in his letter that "there is a section among the Liverpool dockers who still refuse to work overtime during the week-end and on Sunday. I feel sure that these men can hardly realize that their action in thus congesting the docks and delaying munitions of war and food required by our men at the front is having a very serious and dangerous effect and must be stopped.

"I hope this message will put things right for the future. At this time we look to every British man, whoever he may be, to do all in his power to help in carrying the war to a successful conclusion, and in this your men can do their share, thus helping their comrades now fighting in France."

TUMULT IN REICHSTAG

Herr Ledebour Denounces Germanizatism of Occupied Areas

LONDON, March 22.—A wild scene occurred in the German Reichstag Saturday during the second reading of the budget, according to a Berlin telegram received by Reuter's Telegram Agency, by way of Amsterdam. The tumult was aroused by a speech delivered by George Ledebour, a Socialist deputy, who protested against "the military administration trying to Germanize portions of French territory, from which arises on the part of Alsace-Lorraine a desire for French rule."

The statement was received with angry outbursts on the part of the deputies, some members shouting "What about the party of peace?"

Continuing, Herr Lebedour said:

"I endorse everything said in praise of our brave troops and their commanders, but in political performances the military authorities are not up-to-date. I am horrified to learn that for every German village burned by the Russians, three Russian villages shall be burned."

The leaders of the various parties protested again the remarks made by Deputy Ledebour, and the vice-president of the House declared that criticism of the army administration was not permissible.

Here's Your Pound of Coffee, Madam!

Here's Your 100 Grains of Caffeine, Doctor!

Same Drug---Different Form

More and more, it is becoming common knowledge that an ordinary cup of coffee or tea contains from 1½ to 3 grains of caffeine, an irritating drug.

Because of this drug, tea and coffee drinking frequently races the heart, interferes with digestion, upsets the nerves, and leaves one weakened and depressed. As a drug, caffeine has medicinal value, but only when administered by a competent physician.

If constant use of tea or coffee, with its drug content, agrees with you, why—keep right on—no one should object.

But—thousands of people have rid themselves of tea and coffee troubles, and experienced wonderful improvement in health by changing to

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

ZEPPELIN RAID WAS FAILURE

Four of Foe's Aircraft Started but Only Two Reached Paris

PARIS, March 22.—Zeppelin airships raided Paris early yesterday and dropped a dozen bombs, but the damage done was unimportant. Seven or eight persons were injured, but only one seriously. Four of the aircraft started for the capital following the valley of the Oise, but only two reached their goal. Missiles also were dropped at Compeigne, Ribecourt and Dreslincourt, but without serious result.

Paris remained calm while the aerial invasion was in progress and residents of the city exhibited more curiosity than fear, as to the results. Trumpets gave the signal that all lights must be extinguished as soon as warning was received of the Zeppelins' approach. Searchlights were turned on the clouds, anti-aircraft guns opened fire, and aeroplanes rose to attack the Germans, but their operations were hampered by a heavy mist.

Official communication regarding the raid declares it served only to show how well the defensive arrangements would work out when put to the test.

Official reports show that eight bombs were thrown at Asnieres, where three persons were wounded. An incendiary bomb set fire to a house at Neuilly, but no one was hurt, and the flames were quickly extinguished.

One of the projectiles fell through the roof of a residence at Lagarenne into the nursery, where a baby was asleep in its cradle. Almost every piece of furniture in the room except the cradle was smashed by flying fragments. The child was not touched.

Two women living in the Rue Pooard, at Levallois-Perret, whose husbands are at the front, were awakened by an incendiary bomb dropped through the roof. The chemicals which the missiles contained burst into flames, but the women escaped unhurt.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, March 20. — Misgivings that European developments before Monday would be against the bulls had a depressing effect today on the wheat market here. Prices, however, closed steady at a decline of 3-8c to 3-4c net. Other grain, too, showed a loss for the day—corn 1-4c to 3-8c and oats ½c to 3-4c. In provisions, the outcome varied from the same as last night to 7½c to 10c below.

Corn was firm early with wheat, but lost strength when wheat turned weak. The bulk of the business appeared to consist of transactions between floor traders. Cash call waned.

Covering by shorts lifted oats at the outset. Falling off in seaboard demand, however, tended later to give the advantage to friends of lower prices.

Selling by packers eased off provisions. There were no predictions of enlarged receipts of hogs next week as compared with the corresponding time a year ago.

Lively Riot In Theatre.

GUELPH, March 22. — The students of the Ontario Agriculture College, started on a rampage Saturday night and before they finished up there was almost a riot, the police force and the soldiers who are camped here being requisitioned to bring them to their senses. There has not been quite so much excitement in the Royal City for a long time as on this occasion.

The students interrupted a performance in a local theatre and the efforts of the police to eject the disturbers led to a riot. Soldiers came to the assistance of the police, who plied their batons freely. Several students were severely hurt in the melee and the police were roughly used, but there were no arrests made.

Times Expects Conciliation.

LONDON, March 22.—The Times, in an editorial Saturday morning, says it considers that nothing could have been more satisfactory than the tone of the correspondence between Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, and Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador, with regard to Great Britain's plans for reprisals against Germany. The Times thinks the courteous and conciliatory spirit displayed by both sides inspires confidence that the difficulties will be easily overcome.

Major-General Robertson Succeeds Sir A. J. Murray

LONDON, March 22.— Major-General Sir William E. Robertson has been appointed chief of the General Staff, to succeed Major-General Sir A. J. Murray.

He was educated at a private school, and entered the army as lieutenant of the 3rd Dragoon Guards in 1883. He was railway and transportation officer in the Miranzi and Black Mountain expeditions in 1891, and staff-captain and D.A.Q. M.G. of the intelligence branch at Simla in 1892 and 1896. He also served as intelligence officer at headquarters for the Chitral relief force in 1895, and was severely wounded in the campaign. He served through the South Africa war as Deputy Acting Adjutant-General of the intelligence branch.

Canada's Wheat Area.

The Canadian Department of Agriculture is alert to the supreme necessity of producing next year the largest grain yield in the history of the Dominion. Where farmers, from any cause, are unable to provide their own seed, the Government will see that no acreage remains untilled on this account. The fine weather experienced this autumn in Canada has enabled the farmers to prepare much more than the usual quantity of ground, and this will be an important factor towards increasing the area seeded in the spring. There will be no difficulty in obtaining a market for the crop. To this end the Canadian Government is completing storage elevators as rapidly as possible, and there will be sufficient capacity to provide for the increased yield. Europe will produce comparatively little grain next year, and must, therefore, necessarily look chiefly to Canada and the United States for her supplies. Everything produced on the farm will thus realize an increased price.

Waterways Commissioner.

P. B. Mignault, K.C., of Montreal, who has been appointed a member of the Canadian section of the International Waterways Commission, filling the vacancy caused by the retirement of Hon. T. Casgrain, Postmaster-General of Canada, is one of the best known and most prominent members of the Montreal Bar and a well-known authority on international law and a distinguished member of the law faculty of McGill University.

The appointment has been approved by the Imperial Government, which is necessary in the case of such international tribunals arising from treaty agreements.

Mr. Mignault was born at Worcester, Mass., Sept. 30, 1854, and is a son of P. B. Magnault, M.D., and Catherine O'Callaghan. He was educated at Worcester, St. Mary's Jesuit College, Montreal, St. Francois Xavier College and McGill University and is a B.C.L., A.M., LL.D. and a K.C., having been called to the Quebec Bar in 1878 and created a Q.C. in 1883. He has practiced his profession with great success in Montreal since 1878 and was syndic of the Bar in 1905, a batonnier in 1906 and was presented with his portrait in oil by the Bar on leaving office in 1907.

SIX NOMINATIONS ALREADY FOR OFFICE IN THE O.A.L.A.

"Woody" Tegart of Toronto a Candidate for Presidency—Annual Meeting Good Friday — Local Meeting This Week

TORONTO, March 22.—Six nominations for office in the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association have already reached Secretary Frank Doyle. For the first vice-presidency the old reliable C. L. ("Woody") Tegart, of Toronto, is a candidate. He is the only one as yet, but is sure to have an opponent or opponents for the office. For the second vice-presidency, J. B. Brown of Fergus is, to date, the only candidate. Mr. Brown it was who introduced the motion to reduce the number of men to ten instead of twelve. The motion was carried last year, and proved a success.

There are four candidates for the executive. They are: E. H. Johnson, London; J. Dundas, Toronto; Dr. W. T. Powers, Port Elgin, and C. Hocking, Toronto.

The annual meeting takes place on Good Friday, April 2, in Victoria Hall and is expected to be the largest and best the association has ever enjoyed. Clubs are reminded that nominations for the various offices close on Friday next, while amendments to the playing rules close tomorrow. Any players desiring reinstatement must have their applications in by Friday next.

Joe Lally was in Toronto conferring with Secretary Doyle in regard to the campaign to boom lacrosse. Mr. Lally will start his annual tour of the schools throughout Ontario today, when he will visit Brampton and address the school children of that town. Tomorrow he will be at Richmond Hill, Aurora, Newmarket and Bradford.

Local Meeting This Week.

A meeting is to be held some evening this week for the purpose of organizing the Peterborough Club, which will enter a team in the intermediate series of the O. A. L. A. The date of the meeting has not been announced as yet.

Custom House Humor.

A missionary was returning to Basel from Patagonia, bringing with him for the purposes of science a collection of Patagonian skulls. The custom house officers opened the chest and informed the owner that the consignment must be classed as animal bones and taxed at so much the pound.

The missionary was indignant. So the officials agreed to reconsider. When the way bill had been revised it appeared in the following form:

INTERESTING GAMES IN Y.M.C.A. BASKETBALL LEAGUE

Three battles royal took place on the Y. floor on Saturday night, when all the strength, skill and genius in thirty men was brought to bear in three of the fastest and hardest fought games of the season, and in the case of the Excelsiors' leaders in A. division and Collegiate of B. division, their colors were lowered, while the Hustlers succeeded in trimming the Maple Leafs, and putting themselves at the head of the B. division. The Unknowns by downing the Excelsiors tied up the Excelsiors for first place in A. division. Cressmans have only lost two games, so that by winning their next game, they will still be in the running for first honors. The games Saturday night practically turned the tables and gives to all the runners up a new lease on life and a chance to win the league. Another interesting feature about Saturday night's games was the number of ladies in the gallery. The games are getting infectious and the mothers, wives and sisters are getting the fever. This is a healthful sign.

The Beaver-Collegiate game was the first staged. The Beavers who have been under the water for some time succeeded in coming to the surface and a little more, they ducked the students to the time of 20-14. The Collegiate boys put up a good argument, and did the best to hold on to first place. But Capt. Dobbin and his team mates, have got the optimism and stick-to-itiveness that wins games. Every man on both teams played his position and gave all there was in him. The first half ended 13-10 in favor of the Beavers. About the middle of the second half Capt. Dobbin got his shoulder hurt and had to retire. Stuart, his check, dropped off with him and the game finished with four men on a side.

The scoring was well divided and each man did his share. It would be hard to pick one star more than another on either side.

Hustlers by Six.

Hustlers conquered the Maple Leafs and take the lead of B. division. Capt. Heaslip had all his team mates and all the others hustling on Saturday night and succeeded in setting fast enough pace to nose out a victory, but by a very small margin, the final score being 22-18. The game was replete with dazzling passes, and sensational shots. Capt. Richardson making many one handed stabs and getting away with them much to the disgust of his opponents. On the Hustlers' team Jones at centre was the phenom. He succeeded in scoring eight points. The first half ended with the Hustlers leading 12-6. But the Maple Leafs seem to be at their best in an uphill fight and they came back strong in the second half, and got 12 points to their opponents' 10, being just four points behind when the whistle sounded. It was a well balanced game right through and brought lots of cheering from the gallery.

Won by One Shot.

Unknowns and Excelsiors put up one of the best games seen on the local floor this year. The Unknowns succeeded in winning by one point and tie the Excelsiors for first place. The Unknowns got the jump at the start and scored two baskets right off the reel. The Excelsiors then got started and everything was nip and tuck right through to the finish. The game was characterized by good fast combination and good shooting. The first half ended 17-12 in favor of the winners, while the Excelsiors scored 14 to their opponents' ten in the second half, making the final score 27-26 in favor of the Unknowns. Just about a minute before the whistle blew for time up, Kitty Mulhern of the Unknowns got a long and very lucky shot, this won the game. Both teams were so busy playing the game that neither knew just how the score stood and were greatly surprised when they found the game had been won by one point. It would be impossible to pick a star on either team, and it would be useless to try and describe the game. It was one that had to be seen to be appreciated.

TRAINED FOR THE GAME.

He Played His Part Well and Won When His Chance Came.

Senator Harry Lane, who is also an M. D., was once superintendent of the Oregon State Insane asylum. One day he was telling a group of his colleagues some of his experiences while there. He said when he took the job he ordered the walls around the institution torn down, arguing that if any real lunatics escaped they would be detected and returned, but that if any escaped who could not be detected they did not belong there anyway.

"A patient came along one day," he said, "and began a performance that was new to all of us. The inmates of the asylum were turned out on the big lawn each morning for exercise. Well, the man I was talking about immediately began to run on a dog trot from one end of the building to the other. The patients having specialties of their own didn't notice him.

"Back and forth he went, not only on the first morning, but on every morning for months and months. He wore a path along the side of the asylum. We couldn't help but admire his perseverance. He certainly stuck to his job. But one day Mr. Man, the moment he was let out, wriggled away from the crowd and started across the fields. Guards followed in pursuit. Trained for months, and that had been his game all along, he rapidly made monkeys of the guards. He'd let them get almost within reaching distance and then he would sprint. So he vanished, and we never heard of him again."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A SAILOR'S GHOST YARN

By MILLARD MALTBIE

"You want a yarn, mates?" said the old salt. He was somewhere between eighty-five and ninety years old. "Well, I'll tell you one that'll give you an iceberg chill."

"A ghost story?"

"Yes, and a story of a real ghost. I didn't see it myself, but I see the man that seen it and where he was a-lookin' at it, too, and he tole me."

"How did you know he wasn't lyin'?"

"How did I know that? Did you ever see a man that was seein' a ghost? No? Well, when you do you'll know there's no mistakin' what he's lookin' at.

"To begin at the right end o' this yere yarn I must say that in the day when ships broke out with a cloud o' canvas agin the blue sky, instead o' movin' under a lot o' greasy machinery below, I sailed before the mast in a full rigged brig in the China trade. There wa'n't no Suez canal in them days, and to git around the African east coast one was obliged to double the Cape of Good Hope.

"One o' our crew was a feller that none of us felt like messin' with very clost, though he didn't seem to want to mess with us neither. He had a hangdog look about him, and if anybody come up behind him, suddent-like, he would start as if he was afraid he was goin' to git a knife in his ribs. There was stories about him among the men, though they was whispered and couldn't be tracked down to a startin' point. One of 'em was, if I don't disremember wrong, that he had shipped on a pirate in the West Indies. That might 'a' been, for he was more'n fifty years old, and that would throw him pretty nigh back into the century afore the last, when the pirates in these waters was still cruisin'.

"Murdock was his name—Joe Murdock. We didn't call him by his first name, as we did one another, but Murdock, which was part because he was so much older than we and part because he wasn't one of us anyway. Well, one day when we was makin' northerd along the east coast of Africy I was one o' the watch, and so was Murdock. We was on the fo'castle, we two, coilin' ropes, when we met a Dutchman that passed us so near we could see everybody there was on deck tol'able plain.

"All of a suddent Murdock caught at the capstan, and I thort he was goin' to fall on the deck. Thinkin' he'd been took sick, I caught aholt o' him, and, lookin' into his face, I saw the most onearthly—well, it was what I was tellin' you at fust. He was starin' straight at the Dutchman amidships, where there wa'n't nobody, and was shiverin' as if struck by an ar'tic wind. His eyes follered the Dutchman while she was sailin' past; then he fell into my arms like a lump o' lead.

"The second mate seen me holdin' him up and come along to see what was the matter. I tole him Murdock had been tooken sick, and he called some men to help carry him below, but he come to himself and, bracin' up, tole the mate he had had a dizzy spell and if he would send me with him nobody else would be needed. I supported him down, and when he got to his bunk he first covered his eyes with his hands awhile; then he says to me:

"'Did you see a man on the Dutchman amidships leanin' over the gunwale?'

"'No. I only saw the man at the wheel, some men holystonin' the afterdeck and a man aloft in the fo'most riggin'.'

"Murdock looked up as if he was goin' to collapse.

"'You mought jest as well out with it,' I says to him.

"And he did, though he wouldn't 'a' done it unless he'd been in the shivers. He tole me that when a very young man he had sailed with a Cap'n Webster; that the cap'n was mighty friendly and had promised to make him an officer. One day they was captured by a pirate on the Spanish main. They was all required to walk the plank, but Murdock saved his life by offerin' to tell where there was a treasure box concealed on the ship, and to join the pirate crew. When Cap'n Webster stepped off the plank he had turned and looked at Murdock—jest looked at him; didn't say nothin'.

"But Murdock never forgot that look. He served a year with the pirates—the only man of his ship's crew left alive, then made his escape.

"'Since then,' said Murdock, 'I've been sailin' over the world's waters keepin' the horrible secret. And every oncet in awhile when a ship passes I sees Cap'n Webster lookin' at me—sometimes in the fo'castle, sometimes in the riggin', sometimes over the taffril, but whatever place he takes it's always where there's no one else. And he always gives me that same look as when he turned and saw me just before he was goin' down into a watery grave.'"

The old man stopped and there was silence among his listeners. Presently one of them said, "Didn't it ever strike you that this man Murdock had thought so much about his cap'n lookin' at him that a-way that he made up the cap'n's ghost hisself?"

The narrator received this suggestion with contempt.

"If you'd 'a' seen him as I did you'd 'a' knowed he was lookin' at the real thing."

KILLED IN ACTION

Lieut. Galaugher Was Teller at Bank of Commerce Here

Killed in Action—GALAUGHER, Lieut. W. N., March 20. A resident of Omemee, Ont.

Two and a half years ago, Lieut. Galaugher was teller at the local branch, Bank of Commerce. He was also a popular member of the Belmont Club. Many friends in this city will regret his death. He was transferred to Sherbrooke from here.

A Chatham despatch says: Advice was received this afternoon by Col. H. D. Smith, Commanding Officer of the 24th Regiment, that Lieut. W. N. Gallaugher of the 1st Battalion, first contingent, had been killed in action on March 20. Lieut. Galaugher was accountant in the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and came to Chatham in October, 1913, from Toronto, where he was accountant in the Parliament Street branch. So far as is known here, he leaves his mother in Omemee, one sister, and one brother, W. H. Galaugher, in the Postoffice Inspector's Department in North Bay. The deceased officer was highly esteemed by all who knew him and great regret was expressed on the announcement of his death. He was over six feet in height, and every inch a soldier.

There are 413 Bank of Commerce men from Canada engaged in the war.

Lieut. Frederick Lawrence Eardley-Wilmot, whose name appears among the killed, was a nephew of Mr. Eardley-Wilmot, who at one time was manager of the Bank of Montreal here. Lieut. Eardley-Wilmot was with the Patricias.

MOVE TO BELLEVILLE

Orders For the 39th Battalion Are Received

Wednesday morning will see the departure of the 39th Battalion. After anxiously awaiting orders to move for a couple of months past, the men were beginning to believe that they would be left in Peterborough till the weather would be suitable for getting under canvas. Saturday, however, the rumor circulated that yesterday would be their last Sunday in Peterborough. The rumor was correct, for this morning Capt. Spencer received word from the commanding officer at Belleville that the local quota, consisting of not more than 110 men, must be in Belleville by noon on Wednesday. When interviewed by a Review reporter today, Capt. Spencer could not tell whether the men will leave via the regular G. T. R. train at 8.20 or on a special. The regular train would have them in Belleville at 10.55.

As yet no arrangements have been made for a formal farewell.

The boys of the 21st Battalion at Kingston have a new song they are singing on their marches. This is the song:

"Tell me the old, old story, tell me the old, old story,
Tell me the old, old story, we are going to leave next week."

No leave or passes will be granted to any member of the 21st Battalion after March 25th.

Pte. Peter Wallace is home from Kingston on a visit to his parents. Pte. Wallace joined the 21st Battalion last week. He has held a position at the Bowmanville branch of R. G. Sturgeon & Co.

A Glengarry woman, who could not give money, felt she could give something to the 21st Battalion, and has parted with a very valuable Indian brooch which will be raffled and the receipts applied to the purchase of the field kitchens, which the battalion needs.—Kingston Standard.

JUDGMENT FOR THE PLAINTIFF

Rent for First Year is Also Fixed at $200

AWARD OF $34.69 IN COUNTER CLAIM

At a late hour on Saturday afternoon the case of Leman Garnsey of Dummer vs. Mrs. James Sampson of Campbellford, was brought to a close and His Honor Judge Huycke gave judgment for the plaintiff for $142 and also decided that the rent for the first year should be $200. On the counter claim of the defendant he awarded $34.69. Each party will pay their own costs. As to the chattel mortgage it rested upon the recently passed Moratorium Act and His Honor reserved judgment in that particular.

Addresses of Counsels.

Mr. Gordon in addressing the bench submitted that by reason of having to do extra work through the acts of the defendant, the plaintiff should not be distrained for rent. Previous to the signing of the lease defendant told plaintiff that the pasture land was fenced. According to evidence this was a misrepresentation and as Garnsey makes a business of pasturing stock he was thus deprived of expected revenue. As to the defendant taking away the horses it did not permit plaintiff to sow buckwheat and as damages he asked the very conservative amount of $50. The absence of the seeder hose also caused his crop to be less valuable.

As to the mortgage Mr. Gordon stated Garnsey is not able to pay and under the recently passed moratorium bill proceedings canont be taken against him. By reason of the seizure the defendant had taken procedure.

Mr. Humphries pointed out that any alleged misreprsentations were not made in the lease. About those representations, there was contradictory evidence but Mr. Humphries submitted that the lease was final.

In regard to the crop of buckwheat Mr. Humphries stated that buckwheat may or may not be in the category of spring crop. Evidence had been given on both sides of the question. Defendant had told plaintiff in May that she intended taking the horses away but did not take them till June 11th. He contended therefore, that the claim for the horses falls to the ground.

In reference to the lease counsel for the defendant stated that as the lease was originally drawn up Garnsey was to pay $250 rent per year. Nothing was placed in the lease to the effect that the rent for the first year was to be $200. Plaintiff brought his lease to count and on it was endorsed in lead pencil that he was to pay $200 rent for the first year. On evidence of plaintiff and J. B. Pearce, J.P., of Norwood, who drew up the lease, the addition was made after the defendant withdrew from the office. This, he claimed, was not legal.

Mr. Humphries further contended that, as an order from the court had ceased the proceedings in the seizure and sale, these proceedings should be permitted to go on as soon as judgment is given. The counter claim of the defndant for Garnsey not doing the fall ploughing was $2 per acre, which as evidence went to show, was a very conservative figure. In all, the counter claim amounted to $250. The claim of $50 for allowing weeds to grow on the farm was justified because permitting noxious weeds to spread over a farm does a great amount of harm.

Mr. Humphries also submitted that there was nothing in the moratorium act in regard to chattel mortgages, therefore it could not be considered in this case.

He was forty-two years of age and had been employed as salesman in Peterborough for many years. He was born in North Monaghan, but resided in Peterborough most of the time, where he made many friends. The deceased was unmarried. He was a son of the late Samuel Cunningham.

PASTOR FOR PARK STREET BAPTISTS

Rev. Dugald Brown Has Accepted Invitation

Rev. Dugald Brown, of Otterville, has been extended a call to the pulpit of Park Street Baptist Church and has accepted, a long distance telephone message having been received on Saturday afternoon to that effect.

Since the resignation of Rev. F. A. Conners, the pulpit of Park Street Church has been taken by Mr. Joseph Wearing.

Rev. Mr. Brown is very highly regarded in the Baptist ministry. He is a brother of Dr. Brown, chairman of the Baptist Mission Board.

ON SAFE GROUND.

With a fraction of uncertainty on one or two points, such possibly as high prices for feed, scarcity of help, the dairy farmer nevertheless the whole Dominion over is actually engaged now in planning for a more abundant milk harvest than ever from his faithful, patient cows. The prudent, far-sighted man has cogitated nearly all points, such as seed selection, labor-saving implements, better stables, more alfalfa, a new silo, abundant water, and the best cultivation he can possibly give to the land owned or rented.

On many dairy farms, however, one more point needs immediate attention before the herd owner can truthfully be said to be on really safe ground. For if the abundant crop or the expensive feed purchased is given to a cow, or cows, whose dairy ability is lacking, sadly lacking, some one is bound to receive an unpleasant surprise and disillusionment. If dairy ability means ability of the cow to turn feed into good milk at low cost, is it not the step of wisdom to make sure that each cow on the premises does possess that ability?

Where no cow testing has been practised, a moderate estimate is that three out of twenty cows consume feed valued as high as the price received for the milk they yield. Dairy records aim at detecting these bovine crooks; but further, a study of records, kept so easily, show the dairyman which cows produce the most milk and fat and which produce them the cheapest (for instance, 63 or 95 cents per one hundred pounds of milk), so any man keeping dairy records is speedily on the home stretch towards the winning post inscribe "each cow pays a good profit." That is safe ground for the dairyman.

FRENCH DOES NOT LOOK FOR LONG WAR

TAX RATE IS LOWERED

Ald. Green's Amendment to Provide $5760 for Surface Drainage is Lost --- No Appropriation for Fire Chief's Trip to the Convention

Twenty-four and a half mills for municipal and school expenditure, plus one mill for the war tax levied by the Provincial Government, plus seven-tenths of a mill for garbage collection, is the tax rate for Peterborough for 1915 as decided upon last evening by the Committee of the Whole Council. Last year the rate for municipal and school expenditure was twenty-five mills and to this one mill was added for garbage collection. This year, in view of the increase in assessment and the balance of $11,860.94 from 1914 it has been possible to make a decrease of a mill and a half in the rate for municipal and school expenditure and still take care of the grant of $10,000 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Last year the rate for garbage collection was one mill but sufficient surplus was found at the end of the year to decrease the rate for garbage collection this year to seven-tenths of a mill. In the area where the garbage is collected the ratepayers will pay a total rate of twenty-six and one-fifth mills, which is a decrease of four-fifths of a mill over last year. In the area not visited by the garbage collectors the total rate will be, as stated above, twenty-five and a half mills or a decrease of one-half a mill.

When the matter came before the Finance Committee a short time ago it was referred to the City Treasurer, and the chairman of the Finance Committee, Ald. Stratton. That considerable time had been given the matter was shown by the report brought into the meeting last night. They had kept the expenditure down as low as possible, in every particular and figured the rate accordingly. Yesterday afternoon the committee met and with the assistance of City Clerk Armstrong prepared the following report which was submitted to the Committee of the Whole Council last evening:—

Making net increase 1915 over 1914 $12,439.99.

Ald. Stratton explained how the committee had kept the estimates as low as possible and he was confident that no balance would be left over in 1915, which would be nearly so large as that of 1914. A fixed rate of 13 mills provides for all of the proposed expenditure with the exception of $132,520. A rate of eleven and a half mills would realize that amount. This would make the total twenty-four and a half mills, to which must be added the one mill for war tax and the seven-tenth of a mill for the garbage collection.

Expenses to Convention.

Before Ald. Stratton had hardly completed his report, Ald. Edgar exclaimed the estimates were too high. On invitation of the chairman of the Finance Committee to show the committee "where to do the chopping", Ald. Edgar mentioned the item of the Fire, Water and Light Committee estimates of "Expenses to convention, $100." That started the ball rolling. Ald. Edgar sought to lower the rate by pruning the estimates of Ald. Duffus' committee still lower. Fifteen dollars is being spent annually in brooms which cost $1.25 each. He was of the opinion that the brooms could be bought for $1.00. He also thought the Fire Department could get along for the year with six brooms instead of the dozen. The next item he wanted explained was eighty-five dollars for painting ladder truck. The aldermen who were intimate with Fire Department affairs assured him that he could not get the work performed any cheaper. "Fifty feet of one inch hose, $25" was the next item discussed. Ald. Edgar stated emphatically that he could get the best of hose for nine cents per foot. His assertion met direct contradiction by Ald. Green. Then came the proposed expenditure of $500 for horses. Ald. Edgar thought the item should be struck off as the horses were in good shape. Ald. Saunders also failed to see why the horses couldn't last another year. Ald. Duffus, Green and Stratton all spoke to the effect that the horses at the fire station were not all in good condition. Ald. Green remarked that the city would make a grave mistake in not getting the horses this year. He knew of one horse in the Station which had a leg as big as two stove pipes. It was pointed out how last year an appropriation of $300 was set aside for horses but none suitable could be found. If none uitable were

HELIGOLAND ONE VAST FORT

This striking picture of the island of Heligoland, in the North Sea, gives an excellent notion of the amount of fortification work which has been lavished upon the island. In addition to the facilities required for a naval base, accommodation for Zeppelins and other aircrafts has been provided.

Since 1890 the island has been practically reconstructed. Heligoland has had $30,000,000 spent on her by the Kaiser. She is fortified against sea and cannon alike, with great granite buttresses 16 feet thick and 240 feet high on all sides. Even the fissures in her cliff have been filled up and bound together with ferro-concrete—thousands of tons of it. Heligoland's magazines contain millions of rounds of every class of ammunition. Mines, torpedoes, aerial bombs, and submarines are there in abundance.

ALLIED WARSHIPS HELD UP BY GALE

Officers and Men of French Battleship Bouvet Went Down With Ship Shouting Vive La France

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 23. — A Havas despatch from Athens says: "A gale blew through the Dardanelles yesterday and the allied warships did not leave their anchorages. It seems certain that several forts are still capable of offering stubborn resistance and field batteries are moved hither and thither along the shore firing from unexpected points."

The Athens Patris says, describing the sinking of the French battleship Bouvet: "The officers and men, standing at salute and shouting 'Vive la France,' went down with their ship."

When ordered to cross a dangerous mine field and force a passage to Chanak Kalessi, the captain of the Bouvet skilfully avoided two mines which were exploded by a torpedo boat, but the third struck the battleship near the magazine and she sank by the head.

When the Gaulois' captain saw the Bouvet sinking he, without hesitation, ordered full steam ahead, but his ship had been struck seven times by shells and he was obliged to put back.

MR. GORDON STANDS PAT FOR JUDICIAL ENQUIRY

No Decision Yet as to the Eligibility of Trustees

No mention was made by the aldermen last night, of the progress of the investigation to find whether or not G. N. Gordon, John Crane and W. H. Hill are qualified to sit on the Board of Education.

When the committee of three waited upon Judge Huycke, their main desire was to eliminate all possible expense. His honor informed the committee that he could interpret the law but his decision would not be binding unless all three members were willing to abide by his finding.

The committee felt that this should be satisfactory and the members were asked to declare themselves. The committee were of the opinion that the matter was one that should be settled either by three school trustees or by the School Board.

As the matter now stands, Mr. Gordon maintains that a judicial investigation should be carried out. He would act for himself and Messrs. Hill and Crane could provide their own counsel.

Statements from both Mr. Crane and Mr. Hill will be considered by the Board of Education at its next meeting.

LIBERALS FORGET ABOUT ELECTION

Ottawa, March 23.—Following the Laurier want of confidence motion, no complaints have been made by the Liberals in the House of an election. It is now conceded that the motion was made with that in view.

THE USE OF OIL

Secretary of Auto Association Figures it Would Cause Extra Outlay of $18,000

The Auto Association had a quota of members before the Committee of the Whole Council last evening to urge that the matter of purchasing oil as a dust-layer be postponed until the secretary of the association receives an aswer to a circular letter he has sent to the secretaries of auto associations in towns and cities where oil is used. The letter will ask several questions, in particular as to whether oil is injurious to rubber tires or not. The result was that his Worship Mayor Buller informed the auto association that the board of works will consider the replies from the auto associations before anything definite is done.

Dr. Amys, president of the association, was the first speaker for the deputation. He remarked that he has been dabbling in chemicals for a number of years and as yet has failed to find oil which is not injurious to rubber. On behalf of the association he urged that the matter be left in abeyance till the replies of the other associations be received.

Mr. S. Keyes, secretary of the association, presented figures showing how oil being used in Peterborough would be instrumental in causing auto owners to purchase more tires. The total increase in cost according to his figures, would be $18,000.

City Engineer Parsons stated that he has written city engineers in various cities where oil is used and they replied that it did not injure the tires. As to an odor, in some instances "a slight odor" but in the majority of cases it was to the effect that there is no odor. Mr. Parsons thought it is not oils which are injurious to rubber but certain kinds of oil. It is the sulphur qualities of oil which injures the rubber. He felt that it would be impossible to get oil which would not injure rubber to a certain extent but the degree can be made very small by using a good grade of oil.

A representative of an oil company was present and stated that he felt confident his company would give a guarantee that the oil would not injure the tires.

Dr. Amys thought the guarantee alright but would rather have a bond.

The oil man came back. "We're willing to give a bond if the auto association will pay six per cent. on the money."

A. B. Cunningham spoke about oil and ended up by making a few sarcastic remarks about the streets of Peterborough. Mayor Buller's ire was aroused and he made it very emphatic that Peterborough's roads are good when compared with roads of other municipalities. As to the oil, His Worship explained that he would certainly not be in favor of placing oil on the streets if he thought it would injure tires or cause an offensive odor. He wished the members of the auto association to feel assured that the oil would be nothing like that which was placed on the streets a few years ago.

Ald. Green expressed himself as being in favor of using the oil because it helps to make roads. He could not see where he was justified in spending the people's money in building roads and then wash them away. The company with whom the oil problem had been taken up offered to send a car of oil, have the city use it and if not perfectly satisfactory it need not be paid for. That proposition struck Ald. Green as being most fair.

HYDRO RADIALS

Mayor Asks for Large Representation From Peterborough

At the meeting of the committee of the whole council last evening Mayor Buller urged as many of the aldermen as possible to go to Toronto on Friday and help to swell the deputation to await on Premier Hearst in the interest of rural radial lines. As excursions will be run from western Ontario it will be necessary for Eastern Ontario to be present in very large numbers.

On invitation of the Auto Association any of the city officials going to Toronto today will represent Peterborough in the deputation to Premier Hearst to ask reciprocity with the United States in auto licenses. At the meeting last night Mr. S. Keyes of the Auto Association pointed out how reciprocity in the auto licenses would boom tourist excursions from the States to Ontario and thus help Peterborough.

ENEMY REQUIRES AMMUNITION MORE THAN DO ALLIES

Sir John French Reported as Having Made Statements Optimistic of Decisive and Definite Victory

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 23. — A Havas Agency despatch from British headquarters represents Sir John French as saying: "Everybody needs ammunition, but the Germans need it more than we do. I have had a feling for some time that they were sparing of their shells. Shortage of nitrates necessary for making explosives is making itself felt in Germany; neither is the morale of their troops the same. One gets from them an impression of fatigue and lassitude.

"Economic difficulties in the interior of Germany are daily becoming more serious. They are still far from famine, but are hampered in obtaining a food supply, and that is a great deal. I do not believe it will be a long war. I and all those here are convinced that decisive and definite victory awaits us at the end of all these hard months of war."

BOMBARD RHEIMS KILL CIVILIANS

Germans Fail to Regain Ground, Being Completely Repulsed

PARIS, March 23. — This afternoon's official statement: "The enemy yesterday bombarded Rheims. A German aviator dropped bombs on the town and claimed three victims among civilians.

"In the Champagne region we made slight progress to the east of Hill 196.

"In the Argonne, near Bagatelle, the enemy twice delivered violent counter attacks to recapture the ground he lost on Sunday. Both counter attacks were completely repulsed."

THE BERLIN VERSION.

BERLIN, March 23. — The official report says that two night attacks by the French near Carency were repulsed, as were attempts at Combres, Apremont, Flirey, Beausejours and Badonviller.

Enemy aviators dropped bombs on Ostend, killing several Belgians. One French aviator was shot down near Verdun, and another captured near Freiburg.

Germans are pursuing the Russians, who were driven from Memel, and have occupied the Russian town of Krottingen and freed more than three thousand German civilians who were prisoners.

Russian attacks in Poland were repulsed.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, MARCH 23, 1915

NEARLY TWO THOUSAND MILLIONS.

UP TO MARCH 31st of this year Mr. Asquith estimates that Britain will have spent a sum of 362 million pounds and which is made up as follows: Navy and army, 275; advances to Overseas Dominions, 38; advances to Allies, 11; miscellaneous, 38. The total of 362 million pounds means an expenditure of $1,810,000,000 that will have been spent. On March 31st the war will have been in progress for eight months, which shows an average of almost exactly seven and a half million dollars a day. This huge sum of almost 2,000 million dollars that will have been spent by the end of this month does not represent by any means the full cost of the war to the British Empire. There are many millions that have been spent that are not figured in this sum, such as the sums raised for patriotic funds, Belgian relief, and advances by provinces. The item of 38 million pounds to the Overseas Dominions covers merely the loans advanced by Britain. India has undertaken to finance the cost of the 200,000 men she has sent to the war. Besides all this, there is the cost of the war to France, Russia, Germany, Turkey, Japan and Belgium. This cost cannot be computed except in a very rough estimate until the close of the war.

RECENT BATTLES.

THE FIGHTING at Neuve Chapelle and later at St. Eloi will rank among the big battles of the war. Two hundred and sixty-five officers were killed and four hundred and twenty-seven were wounded in these engagements, figures which tell in their own tragic way how fierce has been the fighting. But the Germans have been driven back with terrible losses, and it is hoped they will continue to be driven back. It appears that these battles are but the beginning of a series of battles that from now on will be taking place in France and Belgium. In these advances Canada's men have already played a brilliant and important part. They received praise from General French and from Lord Kitchener, yet, while this is so, and while the Canadian soldiers will continue to do their part as bravely as they can, we should remember that we are at best only one of the small parts in the array of nations endeavouring to put down militarism, and should not, even in the hour of victory, make braggarts of ourselves. Let us do what we can and say as little as possible about it.

A BIG PRICE MUST BE PAID.

THE LOSS of the British cruisers Irresistible and Ocean in the Dardanelles is a serious one. While they were pre-dreadnoughts, they were powerful ships of war, mounting four 12-inch guns. The cost of these ships was about six millions each, and their loss brings Britain's loss of ships like these up to four. Britain has left, however, thirty-six pre-dreadnoughts, while Germany has only twenty. British newspapers speak of the Irresistible as an old warship—she was built in 1904—but that is merely to temper the British public to the loss. Britain can stand such a loss easily, but it shows what a big price Britain and her allies must pay to win out in this war. Powerful, expensive ships, vast sums of money, enormous numbers of men, must be expended to put down German militarism.

SIMPLIFY THE LAW.

SIR J. A. M. AIKENS, in his presidential address to the Canadian Bar Association, spoke of the need for simplification of Canadian law. This belated criticism should be acted upon, and a simple codification would result in great benefits. As Sir James pointed out, much of our legislation is fragmentary, ill-drawn, and contains unnecessary and disturbing provisions. Great points are left undecided and trivial ones receive elaborate judgments. The remedy, he said, was to write the principles now settled by decision or statute in a well-arranged code. Reduction of the law to a form of statute seemed the most likely course of codification for Canada.

"CRIMINALS IN THE MAKING."

THE CAPTURE and confession of the boy "auto bandits," whose sensational exploits the other day amazed Chicago, furnish another illustration—if one be needed—of the tragic truth that, in the words quoted in these columns not long since from a report by Prof. Gault, of the Northwestern University, juvenile delinquents and street idlers and loafers are "criminals in the making," says the Chicago Tribune. What a simple and familiar story, after all! Poolroom talk, vicious surroundings, a chance remark by a professional offender, ungratified instinct for sport and excitement, misdirected animal spirits, and a bunch of boys become a clique of bandits.

Fortunate indeed are the boys and the city that the auto adventure did not terminate in a fatal shooting and a trial for murder. A mere accident, a momentary panic, a gun in the hip pocket, and murder would have capped the climax of the day's work

And what is the community doing to arrest delinquency and crime at the source, to remove temptation from the path of undisciplined youth, and direct energy and daring into safe and beneficial channels? What are we doing toward the education and the amusement of the delinquents and criminals in the making? We send some of them to institutions that even judges from the bench name with repugnance and horror. We send others to Pontiac, but we do nothing to guide their footsteps after release. Qualities that might lead to distinction and honor in a boy scout regiment, in fire-fighting, in pioneering, in defense of the nation on land or sea, land boys in prison or in the shadow of the gallows.

Can't we cease wrangling and agree on a proper system of vocational training? Can't we organize the boys and girls of a neighborhood for interesting and inspiring work? Can't we realize that many a "desperate" boy bandit is a hero gone wrong, and that the juvenile criminal in the making, under happier and more intelligent auspices, might have been a credit and an asset to the community?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MR. W. SANFORD EVANS is chairman of the Royal Commission on the Georgian Bay Canal. Mr. Evans is an ex-mayor of Winnipeg, and a prominent broker in that city. He was born at Spencerville, Ont., in 1869, educated at Hamilton, at Victoria University and Columbia University. For some years he was in journalism on the staff of various Canadian and American newspapers, his last position being editor-in-chief of the Winnipeg Telegram — a post he resigned in 1905 to engage in the brokerage business in Winnipeg. He has loomed large in the journalistic, financial, industrial and civic life of Winnipeg. Mr. Evans originated the Canadian Club movement, and was the first president of the first club in the city of Hamilton, where he was a most popular man. The large majority he received in the election to the mayor's chair of Winnipeg told what the western city thought of him.

MILLIONS of dollars are spent annually by American and Canadian tourists and pleasure-seekers in Europe. Under present war conditions, European resorts will not be available. Canada possesses as fine scenery and means of transportation as any country in the world. Our resorts and railway and steamboat lines should at once undertake an active campaign to place their attractions before tourists.

AN EMPLOYEE of the Union Station, Toronto, picked up an endorsed cheque for $10,630, that he later handed over to the bank. The careless way in which some people leave small sums of money lying around should be discouraged. We never do it, do we?

ADVERTISING Professor Leacock's lecture, to be given to a Toronto audience, the "ad." says he will have the fullest license to be amusing—doubtless because a serious discourse might not take well in Toronto.

IT IS SAID that Billy Sunday got $60,000 for his services in Philadelphia as an evangelist. That is about five times the salary of the Canadian Prime Minister for one year.

PRESENTING pastors with well-filled club-bags should be discouraged, as it tends to make old sports of them.

The War and the Universities.

(Manchester Guardian.)

Mr. Asquith, in a few words which preceded the undisputed second reading in the House of Commons yesterday of the Universities (Emergency Powers) Bill, summed up very clearly the splendid response that Oxford and Cambridge have made to the need of the country. Between them they have sent over 6,000 men to the services, and many of the little remainder are qualifying for commissions. Such university life as there still is—and it is little more than formal—is maintained almost entirely by students ineligible on physical grounds for service. The eight oars and the spare man of the Oxford boat have gone, nine of the cricket eleven, and five of the lawn tennis six. But the new army has drawn brains as readily as it has muscle, for Oxford has given it forty Fellows of colleges and 300 holders of scholarships, Pembroke college, Cambridge, has lost over 75 per cent. of her students, and the number in residence at the university as a whole has decreased from 3,181 to 1,227. Such sacrifices need and deserve practical recognition. They mean a very grave financial loss to the universities. The Emergency Powers measure will partially meet this by allowing the colleges to borrow to meet deficits caused by the war, to encroach upon their endowments, and to delay repayments of loans. It will also, by postponing the termination of scholarships and suspending residence conditions, secure that the undergraduate who has enlisted shall not suffer more than can be helped in his academic career. The bill deals only with Oxford and Cambridge, for though the response from all the universities has been good, notably in the Army Medical Service of Edinburgh and Glasgow, the war has not elsewhere so shattered academic life and endangered university finances as it has in the south. Such help as legislation can give Oxford and Cambridge is small enough return for the burden they have shouldered.

Religious Revival Inevitable.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

France is just emerging from a long period of materialism and religious indifference, not to say antipathy. This is noticeable in all deparemtnts of philosophy, literature, the drama, and music. The war, which has steadied and softened the hearts of the nation, has made them more ready to accept true religion, but the war has likewise cripled the whole system of religious teaching, coming, as it did, with such crushing force after the state's suppression of the working organizations of the churches. The world will likely see a startling change in the temperament of the French people after the conflict. There is no example in modern history where a professedly irreligious nation has so suddenly realized the necessity of spiritual consolation, where so many homes have been so rudely called upon to choose between materialism and the gospel.

Breaking the News.

(Lippincott's.)

"Sis won't be able to see you tonight, Mr. Jones," said her little brother. "She's had a terrible accident."

"Is that so? What happened?"

"All her hair got burned up."

"Good heavens! Was she burned?"

"Nay; she wasn't there. She don't know about it yet."

WEATHER FORECASTS.

CANUCKS HELD IN RESERVE

Most of the Canadians Did Not Take Part in Recent Heavy Fighting

OTTAWA, March 23.—Up to date the total deaths among the Canadian troops number 194. This is the total list of those killed in action or who have died from wounds sustained in action. Twice this number have been wounded. The figures show clearly that the Canadian division is doing its share and contributing its quota to the cause of the Empire.

The heavy casualty lists from the Canadian forces arriving these days wth an unerring continuity show that our troops are in the thick of the fighting. The growing list of dead and wounded indicates its terrific character.

A despatch from London says that eight more Canadians have reached Queen's Canadian Hospital at Shorncliffe, bringing the total number of patients since the institution opened to over two hundred. Only one, Maj. Higinbotham, has died.

From what these patients say it is evident the greater portion of the Canadians were held as reserves in the recent costly operations. Their duty was to engage the German reserves if the latter were brought up, but as things turned out the Germans melted away before the British artillery's attack. Nevertheless the Canadians in reserve had nearly fifty of their number laid aside.

The following casualties among members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force were announced from headquarters this morning:

Princess Patricias — Died of wounds, Pte. Wm. Thorburn. Wounded, Lc.-Corpl. Charles Nevis. Seriously wounded, Sergt. George C. Aldridge, Pte. Cecil Miller. Severely wounded, Corpl. J. Cope.

First Battalion—Wounded, Corpl. Albert E. Thomas.

Fourth Battalion—Wounded, Pte. Thomas D. Webb.

Fifth Battalion—Wounded, Pte. John McKenzie.

Eighth Battalion—Died of wounds, Pte. Charles E. Webb. Wounded, Pte. A. J. Webb.

Tenth Battalion—Severely wounded, Pte. Clement Willmore.

Divisional Engineers — Slightly wounded, Sapper W. H. Milbourne.

The following list was issued yesterday:

First Battalion—Killed in action, Lc.-Corpl. Peter Nelson. Severely wounded, Pte. Earl Bain. Wounded, Sergt. T. H. Oliver, Pte. S. H. Raymond.

Tenth Battalion—Wounded, Pte. A. Genest.

Sixth Artillery Brigade—Seriously ill, Gunner J. Higgins.

Princess Patricias—Killed in action—Lt.-Col. D. F. Farquhar.

Fifth Battalion—Slightly wounded, Lieut. David Meikle.

FIRES ARE NEEDED

Only Flames Will Arrest Disease in Serbia

LONDON, March 23.—"Just as it took fire to stop the great plague in London, so fires are needed to clear Serbia of typhus. Infected houses and the clothing of the people must be burned, as the disease is carried by vermin, which is omnipresent," said Sir Thomas Lipton last night in a statement, in which he recounted the appalling conditions in Serbia, where he spent a considerable time in personal investigations.

"The situation is entirely beyond the control of the present force, which imperatively needs all the help it can get, tents, hospitals, doctors, nurses, modern appliances and clothing to replace the garments full of typhus-bearing vermin."

SUBSIDIES ARE VOTED

Little Over Half Asked for Steamers Will be Used

OTTAWA, March 23.—The House spent practically all of yesterday's sitting in committee of supply. The steamship subsidies, amounting to nearly $4,000,000, were passed after a brief discussion, and the estimates for the Indian Department involving $2,000,000 were reported last evening.

While the total steamship subsidy vote asked was a trifle under $4,000,000, Sir George Foster stated that probably not over $2,500,000 would be actually expended. He said that the arrangement made by the Government for improved mail service between Canada and the United Kingdom had been sadly demoralized as a result of the war. The Admiralty had requisitioned the Canadian Northern vessels, nearly all of the C. P. R. vessels and many vessels of the Allan Line. The steamship companies had, therefore, been unable to comply with the contract, and the payments, on account of subsidies, had been reduced accordingly.

When a vote was asked for the steamship service between eastern Canadian ports and Australia, A. K. MacLean asked what progress had been made by the Minister of Trade and Commerce toward securing a reciprocal trade arrangement with Australia. Sir George Foster said in reply that little had been accomplished. The new Australian tariff increased duties generally and gave a 10 per cent. preference to imports from the United Kingdom. No preference, however, had been given to imports from Canada.

Shortly after the House convened yesterday afternoon the Prime Minister referred to the death of Col. Farquhar, commander of the Princess Pats, who had been killed in action at the front. He said the news would be received with sincere regret by the people of Canada. None of the distinguished men holding the position of military secretary to the Governor-General had been more efficient or more highly regarded.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke briefly, joining in the tribute to the late officer.

TO BLOCK THE KIEL CANAL

Story Says Fleet of Dummy Warships is on the Way

NEW YORK, March 23. — When the White Star liner Lapland arrived here she brought a tale that the mysterious fleet of dummy warships, said to have been constructed at Belfast under the direction of Capt. H. J. Haddock, Royal Naval Reserve, had sailed from that port on a secret mission. The rumor was that the British Admiralty intended to use them for blocking the Kiel Canal.

These vessels are old steamships bought from the merchant service, and includes ships like the Campania, Oruba, and Orotava, which have been fitted with dummy funnels, wooden turrets and guns, and their holds filled with cement to lower them in the water.

The fleet has been manned entirely by volunteers, as it is a hazardous undertaking, and the captains are mostly retired rear-admirals from the British navy who have volunteered for the war and have received commissions as captains in the Royal Naval Reserve.

Another British Ship Sunk.

LONDON, March 23.—The British steamer Concord, of 1,825 tons, was torpedoed by a German submarine in the English Channel yesterday. The crew of 26 men were rescued by a patrol boat and landed at Dover. The vessel is reported to be still afloat.

A daily passenger and mail service between Flushing, Holland, and England, has been resumed, according to a despatch from Flushing to Reuter's Telegram Co.

A Copenhagen despatch to The Daily Telegraph says that during a great storm two big German merchant steamers were lost off Denmark.

Canadian Aviator Buried.

PRESCOTT, Ont., March 23.—The funeral of the late Lieut. W. F. Sharp, the Canadian aviator accidentally killed some weeks ago in England, took place from the residence of his uncle, J. W. Mills, here yesterday afternoon, the remains being accorded full military honors by the 56th Rifles.

Look For Money
IN YOUR STORE-ROOM

There's more good money, madam, just going to waste right out there in that old storeroom of yours and down in the basement locker where they put "those old things you had no room for" than you have any idea of. How would you like a brand new, crinkly $10 bill for just part of it?

Here's what to do: If you have a good mirror—advertise it in the Want Ads of THE DAILY REVIEW. If you have curtains, carpets, even odds and ends—say so. Lamps, chairs, tables, porch furniture, stoves, heaters, irons, linens, bedding, beds, trunks, anything that can be used—for goodness sake list it. Make up a list, get it together, in as good shape as you can, and get it out where they see it all together, then put a Want Ad in THE DAILY REVIEW and get your money out of it. Use initials, numbers, or your address, as you please. Why waste useful articles or let them fall to pieces and be thrown out, when hundreds of people could use them to advantage in some way?

A Romance of Moosehead Lake

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Moosehead lake is situated in the northern part of Maine. The other Maine lakes farther south have for some time been overrun with city people during the summer season, but Moosehead, being farther away, still retains much of its wildness.

There once lived a trapper on Moosehead lake, a widower with a daughter who was his housekeeper and companion. Gertrude Fleming was the only comfort of the old man's life. She grew up in the wilderness, but her mother was a refined woman and had kept her child from that uncouthness common among backwoods people. Her father was aware that some young man might pass that way and pluck his wild flower, leaving him in solitude.

Gertrude occasionally accompanied her father in his hunting and trapping expeditions. She would take a gun with her, and several of the heads of animals that decorated their cabin had been brought down by her. But she was more fond of the lake than the wilderness and in her canoe would ride its waves like a duck. She dressed much like an Indian girl—that is, in gaudy colors, with her hair hanging down her back.

Arthur Brewer, a New York boy, was one of the first city men to discover the hunting grounds adjacent to Moosehead lake. He was a handsome youngster and a thorough sportsman. One October day—he always took his outings in the hunting season—he was standing on one of the arms of the lake wishing for some way to get across when a vision of loveliness shot out from beyond a point of land. It was Gertrude Fleming in her canoe. About her shoulders and fastened under her chin was a many colored blanket, a circlet of wampum bound her temples and held the feather of a bird she had shot herself, while the arms that swung the paddle were adorned with bracelets made from the antlers of a beast of the forest.

"Hello!"

The girl stopped paddling and looked about her.

"Will you put me across here?"

Without a word Gertrude recommenced to paddle, turning her course toward the man on the shore. On reaching it their eyes met, the man's expressing admiration for this human feminine contrast with the desolate region, the girl unconsciously revealing through her eyes that she had been suddenly caught by the engaging smile with which she was greeted.

Brewer got into the canoe, and Gertrude pulled him across to the spot he wished to reach. She told him that she lived near by and that her father had gone into the woods for skins. Brewer had put up a tent at the point on which they landed, and there he made his headquarters, though he frequently slept in the open. He had game in his larder, but no vegetables. Gertrude cultivated a little kitchen garden and had left from her summer stores carrots, potatoes and other vegetables designed for winter use. She offered to supply him if he would come for them.

There was a great difference between this daughter of the forest and the young girls to whom Brewer had been accustomed. Perhaps it was this difference, this novelty, that aroused his interest. There is no doubt that the picturesqueness, the unity of a single woman in a wilderness, contributed to his enslavement. At any rate, he realized at once that his passion was irresistible. Possibly similar causes affected Gertrude. They met near the beginning of the day, and at its end each was conscious of the unbreakable bond that had suddenly united them.

When Fleming returned that evening he saw by the flush in his daughter's cheek that he had lost her. His only expression of the pain the discovery gave him was a suppressed groan.

At Fleming's invitation Brewer took his meals for the remainder of his outing in the cabin. There was no effort made to conceal the situation. All recognized, though mutely, that two kindred spirits had met. Before Brewer's return to the city he asked Gertrude if she would go with him.

His words produced a sudden realization of the fact that she stood between a love on the one hand and her father and the life to which she had been reared and loved on the other. She gave no answer. Brewer did not urge her. He waited till it was time for him to go, then said:

"Will you come with me?"

Gertrude was standing between her lover and her father. The latter spoke no word. She looked first at her lover, then at her father. Suddenly she came to her choice. Running to her father, she threw herself into his arms.

Brewer, who had taken up his belongings, threw them on the ground.

"If you will not go with me," he said, "I will stay with you."

Brewer and his wife lived in the cabin with Fleming till the latter died; then the couple made a trip to New York. Brewer's father, who had disinherited him on account of his marriage, relented and furnished the funds for a comfortable residence that his son built on the site of the cabin.

The couple usually spend their winters in the city and the summers in their country home. But it was not till after the hunting season that they left the lake and the woods.

When Matter Conquered Mind.

Lord Wolseley maintained that Ostend would have been the scene of a desperate battle in 1815 if Napoleon's bodily strength had then proved on a par with his brain power. "The more I study the Waterloo campaign," Wolseley told Grant Duff, "the more highly do I think of Napoleon. If his physical condition and energy had been equal to the powers of his mind, I think he would have succeeded in his design and would first have beaten the Prussians and then driven us back on Ostend. * * * In spite of his odious and contemptible character Napoleon was the greatest man of whom we know anything and quite unlike anybody else."—London Mirror.

ODDLY POCKETED COAT.

Spring Outdoor Costume That Is Quaintly Picturesque.

SPORTS HAT AND COAT.

This sports coat of tan and white plaid worsted has huge patch pockets both above and below the belt. The belt is held in place by wide straps of brown cloth, which material forms the buckle and faces the collar. One notes with interest the new outing hat shaped like a sou'wester. The gown worn has a deep plait in front.

LINGERIE COLLARS.

Easy Way to Wash and Iron Thin Neckwear.

See that the collars and cuffs are quite dry after washing before attempting to starch them. Place them in a clean, dry towel and have ready a basin of well made cold water starch.

Mix the starch up well from the bottom, lay in as many collars as the starch will easily cover at one time and let the starch soak well through them.

Squeeze them with the hands in the starch; then wring as dry as possible. Draw them out straight and lay smoothly on a towel, but do not put one on top of the other; roll each one separately between the towel. Leave for half an hour before ironing, but do not let them get too dry.

When ready to iron spread wrong side uppermost and iron first one side and then the other. Iron slowly at first, then more and more quickly until there is a glossy surface and the collar is dry.

The right side naturally requires the most ironing, but the wrong side must be ironed quite smooth. Lift the collar occasionally when ironing to let the steam escape and dry the sheet under it with the iron. A teaspoonful of powdered borax in cold starch will give an added stiffness to linen.

Travelers' Brushes.

Two flat clothes brushes packed into flat pockets of a leather case are sold in the shops. They are very convenient for the traveler, as they can be stowed away in the pocket of a suit case in an almost imperceptible space. They are likewise convenient for a man to carry in his overcoat pocket. They have black wood backs, and the bristles of one are gray, of the other white. The gray one is stiffer.

WHAT A GIRL SHOULD REMEMBER.

There are some things that a girl is richer for remembering and the poorer for forgetting. Here they are, and it is possible for most of us to acquire them without much expense; in some instances without any outlay at all.

Every girl should know how to sew and make dresses.

To cook and clean.

To mend her own and the household things.

To dress neatly and becomingly and daintily.

To keep a secret and respect confidences.

To be self reliant and not helpless.

To keep a house tidy and have a place for everything.

To respect old age.

To be above gossiping or listening to slander.

To control her temper.

To care for the sick and the young.

If she has these accomplishments then she need not trouble very much if fate has denied her the chance of acquiring some others that may be a trifle more fashionable, but are certainly not so delightful and useful.

COUSIN LISA

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

When I tell you that my name is Shovaloff you immediately picture a man with a heavy beard, shocky hair, large and thick set form. In other words, you fancy me to be a Russian. If you were to see me you would behold a rather small man with closely cut light hair and clean shaven face. Moreover I cannot speak a word of Russian. I can only speak English and American English at that, for I was born in the United States and till recently had never been off the North American continent.

My father was born in the province of Perm in eastern Russia, lying next to Siberia. He came to America when he was very young, married an American girl and died within a year after I was born.

My father brought a little money with him from Russia, which he used to a profit and left my mother in comfortable circumstances. When I was twenty-five a letter came to her stating that the farm which had been in the Shovaloff family for many years must be sold, and I was interested. She proposed that I go to Russia and look after the matter. I loved travel and caught at the plan eagerly.

When I reached my father's former home I did not wonder that he had left it. The country round about was thinly settled, though a village had grown up near the farm. The people had their own customs, which had been handed down to them through many generations. Some of these customs were very quaint.

My father had left a brother and a sister in Russia. The brother had died unmarried, but the sister, a widow, still lived. She had but one child, a daughter, who jointly with me would inherit the farm. She was a very odd, though a very pretty, little damsel about seventeen years old. I could not talk with my aunt or my cousin because they spoke no English and I no Russian, but we found an interpreter who served our purpose fairly well.

There was no hotel in the place, and I was obliged to set up a dwelling of my own. This I did in a small house which had been vacated. A middle-aged woman who spoke a little English consented to be my housekeeper and do my cooking. My aunt did not invite me to stay at her house. Why I knew not.

The business that brought me to Russia was very slow in working itself out, and the prospect of my getting away was not propitious. I had been in the village several weeks when one morning I was surprised by a visit from my Cousin Lisa. She came in, all blushes and with a shrinking manner. My housekeeper being present, I saw no impropriety in her coming, but I nevertheless wondered at it. Not being able to communicate with her more than to say good morning, I asked the housekeeper to inquire if there was anything I could do for my cousin. A few words passed between the two, and the housekeeper, with some embarrassment I thought, said that there was only one thing I could do for my cousin, but I had better find it out for myself.

I concluded that I had struck another of the strange customs of the country and that I might as well let it work itself out. Lisa assisted the housekeeper in the work, and I went out about the business concerning which I had come to Russia. I did not return till evening, expecting surely that my cousin had gone. What was my surprise to find her still there.

"How long," I asked my housekeeper, "is Lisa going to stay here?"

"Always, unless you turn her out."

"Turn her out!"

"Yes. And you cannot do that unless you are willing to suffer the resentment of every one hereabout."

"What does all this mean?"

"It means that Lisa has offered to marry you."

I was thunder struck. Little by little I drew from my informer that in this region of Russia when a woman wished to marry a man she went to his house and remained there, awaiting his action. If he refused her it was considered a great insult to her and her family. If she had male relatives they were likely to avenge what was considered a slight to her and them.

While I had been charmed by my little cousin I had had up to this moment no thought of marrying her. Her action put the idea into my head. A marriage between us would greatly facilitate the settling of the inheritance in which we were interested. She was very lovely, very modest, and in her quaint Russian costume she looked very pretty. If dressed as an American lady I would have no reason, at home, to be ashamed of her.

I accepted Lisa's proposal and as soon as I had done so sent her home to prepare for the wedding. My aunt told me that she had seen from the first that her daughter had given me her heart, and she had encouraged her to act as she had done.

When I took home with me a bride my mother was surprised, but when I told her how the betrothal had come about she was astonished. Fortunately my wife's modest demeanor did not permit my mother to associate any boldness with her act.

We have but recently returned to America and, although Lisa is studying English with great assiduity, we are not yet able to converse with much ease.

POINTS FOR MOTHERS

The Model Nursemaid.

The children's nursemaid should be neat and have a good disposition. Irritable manners and harshness have no place in the nursery, for they soon make the little ones sullen and bad tempered. By her influence as well as by their play and games she should make them feel the value of good manners, unselfishness and perseverance.

She should insist on obedience from even the smallest child. This once learned will give the nursery an air of sunshine and contentment it cannot otherwise have. Still she must realize that good discipline does not mean tyranny and hard discipline. Punishment should only be used as a means of last resource. Then it should be to deprive the child of some simple pleasure. Any severe punishment should be left to the parents.

It is nurse's business to see that the nursery is supplied with toys to amuse the children so there may be toys for all, but it is equally important to let the children feel that the toys are owned in common. She should direct their play and games, but let all the children pick up their toys and put them away after they have finished with them.

In her personal habits and appearance she should be neat and clean. Her work is clean, so there is no excuse for dirty hands and soiled aprons.

When Lessons Tire the Child.

"The child does not pay attention," the teacher says of the little boy or girl in the kindergarten, whose mind seems to be upon the thing that is being done and yet cannot accomplish it. But it very often happens that the child is not capable of concentrating attention for very long upon one thing. He watches the play or the drawing very carefully for a certain length of time; then he wearies through no fault of his own, but because of brain fatigue, and his eyes wander to the shape of the pencil he is holding or possibly to the waving leaves of the tree outside the window.

Mothers who study their children carefully can tell just how long they can hold the attention of the child without wearying it, but the teacher, having so many to think about, may not realize that she is tiring the child with the lesson.

Many children that are voted stupid by parents or children are only slow in their mental processes and require great patience and care in the first years in the nursery or school. Let the lesson be a little longer each day, and as soon as the child seems tired change to something else.

Celebrates Diamond Wedding.

At the residence of their eldest son, W. H. Fleming, lockmaster at Chaffey's Locks on the Rideau, was celebrated recently the diamond wedding anniversary of Capt. Fleming and his wife, who were married in 1854. To tourists and forwarders on the Rideau waters the name of Capt. Fleming has been a familiar one for the past 60 years. There has not been a season in all these years but has seen the captain actively engaged in navigation on these waters between Kingston and Ottawa. At the respective ages of 81 and 82, Capt. Fleming and his wife are bright and active.

The wedding anniversary brought together a large gathering of relatives and invited guests, among the latter being J. R. Dargavel, M.P.P., who acted as toastmaster at the banquet.

HONOR CONCEDED TO THE PRZEMYSL DEFENDERS

Fall of Fortress Most Important Capture of the War Not Excepting Antwerp

LONDON, March 23. — Przemysl has fallen. Fifty thousand of the enemy, mainly Austrians, piled their arms without firing a shot. The last effort of the exhausted garrison to break through was made on Thursday night, and met with a disastrous repulse. Famished by the pangs of hunger, weakened with disease, and their ranks thinned by repeated defeats at the hands of a superior and tireless foe, the heroic garrison, cut off from its main army, at length yielded to fate. Without food, the last available horse slaughtered to satisfy the pangs of hunger, the defenders of this Galician fortress saved their honor while surrendering their swords. The defence of Przemysl has won the admiration of friend and foe alike. The news of its fall led to an enthusiastic demonstration in the streets of Petrograd.

The London newspapers assert that the fall of the fortress marks the most important capture of the war, not excepting Antwerp, in that it not only releases considerable Russian forces which can be thrown into the fluctuating struggle in the Carpathians, but opens the door to Cracow and the plains of Hungary.

It is argued, moreover, that the moral effect of the surrender will be tremendous, the theory of the allies being that it will stimulate feeling in their favor both in Roumania and Bulgaria, just as the operations in the Dardanelles are causing an agitation in Greece and Italy.

Przemysl fell with honor, the British press concedes, for it withstood the onslaughts longer than any place during the war, the investment having begun something more than six months ago. The duration of the siege, compared with the length of time it took the Germans to capture such strongholds as Liege, Namur and Antwerp, was due to two causes, one being the desire of the Russians to keep the loss of life among the besieging army at a minimum, the other to the lack of great guns, which the Germans had in Belgium.

The investment was not a close one, the garrison having had up until recently a radius of about twelve miles in which to move about.

Sentry Shoots Buffalo Man

BUFFALO, March 23. — George B. Montgomery, of Buffalo, was shot by a British sentry while he was sailing in the harbor at Hamilton, Bermuda, last Saturday, according to information received here last night. One of his legs was so badly hurt that the foot had to be amputated. With him in the boat at the time was his wife and a negro pilot.

The report received here says the boat approached too near the prohibited water surrounding an island where German soldiers are imprisoned.

Dr. Karl Liebknecht Muzzled.

LONDON, March 23. — The Exchange Telegraph Co. has received a despatch from Copenhagen saying that Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist deputy, has been ordered to place himself at the disposal of the German military authorities, according to The Politicken of that city. Henceforth he must consider himself under military law. He is not to write articles, nor will he be permitted to attend public political meetings, excepting the Reichstag and the Landtag.

RUSSIAN MOVEMENT INTO EAST PRUSSIA IS STEADY ADVANCE

Town of Tangszargen Has Been Occupied and Prisoners and Supplies Captured---Decisive Advantage is Being Won by Russians in the Carpathians --- Germans in Belgium Are Moving

LONDON, March 23. — Russian troops continue successfully to prosecute their invasion of East Prussia by way of Tauroggen, and after considerable resistance in which they won an engagement, they entered Tangszargen yesterday, capturing a number of prisoners and a quantity of engineering stores. Elsewhere on the front from the Vistula to Memel, no important change is recorded. The claims of the Germans that they have recaptured Memel is not taken cognizance of by the Russian War Office. It is believed here that the report was inspired to encourage the German people.

The Russians appear to be gaining a decisive advantage everywhere in the Carpathian fighting. Stubborn resistance is being put up by the Austrians and Germans against the Russian advance on Bartfield. This is being conducted on the Bartfield roads, the Ondawa and Laborczs river valleys, and on the left bank of the San, and progress is being made in all these movements. The Russians continue the capturing of thousands of prisoners, including 50 officers and 20 machine guns in one day.

During the last few days there has been a great movement of troops all over Belgium, says Rotterdam advices. Whole German armies are going along the principal road between Bruges and Brussels. Heavy fighting has been proceeding, and the cannonading is ceaseless day and night.

According to a frontier telegram a German soldier in Belgium stated to the correspondent:

"On one day of last week, if the allies had been able to hold out for a few more hours and could have brought up a few more troops they could have broken through our line and could have gotten through to Ostend. Fortunately we got our reinforcements up first."

FIFTY DEAD

Avalanche Falls on Britannia Mine Buildings

WINNIPEG, March 23.—A Vancouver report which has just reached the city says that a snowslide which came down at midnight, carried away a number of bunkhouses filled with workmen at Britannia Mine, Howe Sound, twenty miles from Vancouver. The mine is several miles from shore and it is impossible to obtain full details of the disaster. One despatch says fifty miners were killed and as many others injured.

The slide swept away a bunk house containing 150 men, a cook house containing 10 men and several private houses, in which were a number of women and children. Several men who were going off the night shift at midnight were also killed.

At last reports rescuers were working on the pile of debris, but few bodies were found. Fifteen of the injured were being brought to Vancouver by steamer. Besides the bunk houses part of the aerial tramway of the mine was carried away.

A special steamer with doctors and nurses aboard has just left here for the mine.

Defence Law In Force.

ROME, March 23.—The King has signed the decree promulgating the national defence law, which became operative at once. The Government is empowered by the new law to prohibit the publication of news regarding the strength of the army, war preparations and military defences of the country. This prohibition will be strictly enforced, and the concentration of troops, the calling out of additional reserves and eventually the mobilization will be kept a secret.

Parliament has adjourned until the middle of May, and the Government will be free to attend to the final preparations.

Very Temperate.

"He was very temperate. He got drunk only once a week," remarked a witness to a Liverpool coroner.

CALIFORNIA 1915

The above is the title of a very handsome publication just issued by the Grand Trunk System, giving information regarding the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego and the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. The publication is printed on heavy enameled paper, is profusely illustrated with views of both expositions, scenes along the Grand Trunk Railway System and Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and vistas of interesting sights on the transcontinental lines west of Chicago. A comprehensive and intelligent map is also inserted, which gives a good idea of the new route to California, via the Grand Trunk Pacific to Prince Rupert, thence through the "Norway of Canada" to Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle, thence to California by steamship or rail. The descriptive matter is concise and well written and deals with the several attractive routes that are offered. The Grand Trunk System, with 16,000 miles of line, offers, through its veried services and choice of routes, incomparable advantages to the California visitor in 1915. Many of the fares between the East and California, which are included in this publication, are the same via Prince Rupert as via Puget Sound, while a small additional charge is made on the lowest fare excursions via that route, and includes charge for meals and berths on steamships between Prince Rupert and Vancouver and Seattle.

A free copy of the booklet may be had by dropping a postal card to Mr. B. A. Rose, city passenger and ticket agent, Peterborough, Ont.

Big Jobs

—are gained largely by doing common tasks uncommonly well.

But—to do unusually good work of any kind, fitness of body and mind are required.

Food plays a big part in this matter — food that contains true nourishment. And true nourishment—be it remembered — must include certain important elements which unfortunately are often lacking in the ordinary dietary — especially in white bread. These elements are phosphorus, iron, lime, sulphur, etc., stored by Nature in her field grains, and absolutely necessary for building strong, vigorous bodies and active brains.

Grape-Nuts

FOOD

—made of choice wheat and malted barley, affords all the nutriment of these grains, including these important mineral elements, in form for easy, quick digestion.

Grape-Nuts food is always fresh, crisp, sweet and ready to eat—with cream or milk.

Thousands have found that a ration of Grape--Nuts each day makes for real progress towards the bigger things of life.

His Reply to Mayor of Winnipeg in Regard to Mobilization

Many cities have tried to get troops stationed in them during the mobilization so that they would benefit by the money spent in providing for them. Peterborough was among them, and, while this city would make a good centre, it does not fit into the military plan to raise an efficient force. The reply of Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes to the mayor of Winnipeg is a good explanation of the reasons why troops can only be mobilized in certain places:

"Many thanks for your kind advice on mobilization of Third Contingent. Fully appreciate your desire to have money spent in a few local cities, towns and villages, but please do not overlook the fact that these troops are untrained, and it is impossible to train them in these cities, towns and villages. The motive in calling out these troops is the defence and honor of the Empire, and they would be worse than useless if untrained. They would be a menace. Therefore shall move them as soon as spring opens up to camps where they can have manoeuvres and absolutely ample target practice. It must be distinctly understood that, while we fully appreciate the local value of these troops to the very few communities concerned, this is not our object. The farmers of Canada as a whole are taxing themselves for the benefit of the very few cities, towns and villages as you can suggest. Please keep your eye on the firing line in Europe and not on the local business establishments. My aim is efficiency and rest assured I shall have it. Canada's honor has been upheld in the recent fighting because our boys have shown that they can shoot and shoot to kill. They got this training at Valcartier Camp. The second and third contingents must also get it in some suitable camp or I shall disband them.—(Sigsed) Sam Hughes."

Although Ald. Edgar and Ald. Saunders failed to cut off the horse item they were bound to take something out so the item of $100 for the chief to go to the convention was again taken up. A motion of Ald. Edgar and Ald. Saunders that the item be struck off carried. Ald. Edgar followed up his motion with a few remarks about the "fellows down there" spending $100 for general repairs, hardware supplies $125, and incidentals $100. Ald. Green asked for an explanation of the term, "fellows down there." Ald. Edgar stated he had reference to the firemen. Ald. Green replied that there is only one man who does any purchasing and he is the Chief. Not five cents' worth is secured without an order from the chairman. Ald. Green also remarked that he had all respect for Ald. Edgar's opinion but his view in these matters were the result of inexperience. He was sure that if Ald. Edgar was a member of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, or if he had had any connection with the department his opinions would be different. Ald. Green ended up by remarking that Ald. Edgar was dealing with a matter which he knew nothing about.

Before the discussion on the Fire Department closed, Ald. Duffus remarked that the action of the Council was not fair to Chief Howard, upon whom the Council placed the responsibility of keeping down the fire loss. If he does not attend the conventions he cannot expect to be up to date. Last year he was not permitted to go on the understanding that he would be sent every other year. Ald. Duffus urged that the motion be rescinded and the matter left in abeyance till the time of the convention arrives, then if the money in the treasury, to the credit of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, would warrant it, the Chief could be sent. No action was taken on his suggestion.

Before the final vote was taken upon the rate Ald. Green brought up the idea of making the rate 25 mills instead of 24½ and using the $5,760, realized from the increase, for work on a surface drainage system. He pointed out how his idea was simply to assist the workingman. He thought it a good idea to do it by small lots every year than to commence the whole task at once and to issue debentures for the money. The latter would call for the matter being submitted to the people.

Mayor Buller voiced previous suggestions to the effect that he favored going at the task in a business manner and not playing with it. He thought it best to issue debentures. His idea also met with the approval of Ald. Duffus.

Ald. Green again reminded the committee that it would be necessary to go to the people and thus incur more expense, besides increasing the debenture debt which is already becoming quite large. The Mayor contended that it would be possible to secure the money without going to the people but the chairman of the Board of Works argued to the contrary. The Drainage Act would not cover it.

Mayor Buller explained that the Ontario Government has made the promise that it will do anything within its power of legislation to assist in schemes to help the unemployed and bring about work. Ald. Green, however, thought it best to add the half mill and get started on the work. It would mean a smaller expediture at a later date.

Ald. Stratton pointed out how the aldermen were willing to assist the workingman in every possible way but in view of the increase in assessment the business man also had to be considered. He thought it would be an injustice to the businessmen to make the rate a half mill higher and therefor moved that the rate be twenty-four and a half mills, plus one mill for the war tax, plus seven-tenths of a mill for the garbage collection.

"On behalf of the workingmen," said Ald. Green, "I move an amendment that the rate be twenty-five mills and that $5,760 be used for the construction of a surface drainage system." The amendment was seconded by Ald. Weir but the original motion carried, the mover and seconder and Ald. Evans being the only ones to vote for the amendment.

A few minutes before midnight the meeting adjourned.

ROBINSON CRUSOE'S ISLAND.

The naval battle in which the German cruiser Dresden met her fate occurred off Robinson Crusoe's Island Juan Fernandez. The story of Robinson Crusoe, one of the oldest works of fiction in the English language and easily the most popular, is supposed to have been built around the adventures of Alexander Selkirk, a Scottish sailor, marooned on the Island of Juan Fernandez, off the western coast of South America, where he remained for several years. It is calculated that more than five thousand deserted island stories have been written in various languages based upon Defoe's fanciful tale.

PRESENTATION TO MAJOR MEDD BY THE MASONS

Eulogistic Speeches at Farewell Dinner in Masonic Hall

Major S. T. Medd, commander of "B" Squadron 8th Mounted Rifles, was the guest of honor last evening at a happy function in the Masonic hall, where he was presented with a beautiful Masonic emblem by the members of Moore Preceptory, Knights Templar, and Corinthian Chapter Royal Arch Masons. He is Preceptor of Moore Preceptory and second principal of the Chapter.

Everything came as a total surprise to Major Medd, who was greatly affected by the warmth and sincerity of the feelings shown.

The little farewell took place just about six-thirty, Hoopers' catered for a most attractive dinner. Immediately this was over, E. Comp. Lieut.-Col. Walker, who presided, proposed a toast to the guest of the evening. He voiced the warm regard and affection entertained by the order for him and their appreciation of his loyal attitude in connection with the present great conflict. Major Medd was a splendid citizen, a brave soldier, an esteemed member of the learned profession, and last, but not least, he was an active and valued Mason.

In reply, Major Medd referred to the importance of having men trained to go to the front. But those who remained behind had their duty to perform just as surely. For every one man who takes up arms, the ten who stay at home could fulfil their part by assisting in the production of equipment, armament and the necessities of life.

Short speeches were made by V. Em. Sir Knight J. E. L. Goodwill, who, on behalf of the Preceptory conveyed to Major Medd their hearty appreciation of his conduct in this crisis of national life, and assured him that every member of the order as well as the legal association of Peterborough would revere him for the gallant stand that he had taken and welcome his return safe and sound.

Comp. Major V. Eastwood also made a short patriotic speech full of inspiration and eulogistic of Major Medd's loyalty and citizenship. Major Eastwood spoke on behalf of the officers of the Peterborough garrison.

E. Comp. H. Rush and others made similar references. The guest of the evening was then presented with a handsome Masonic emblem by Ex-Comp. E. B. Fowler, who paid eloquent tribute to the exceedingly cordial relationship that has invariably existed between the members of the two chapters and the co-operation that took place between the two bodies was largely attributable to the influence of Major Medd.

A musical program was contributed by Mr. Walter Stocker and Mr. John Crane.

HOLLAND ASKS WHY.

Explanation of Confiscation of Ships By Germany Demanded.

THE HAGUE, March 23. — (Via London.)—The Netherlands Government at noon yesterday, after a meeting of the State Council, forwarded a telegram to Berlin asking for an explanation of the proceedings of the German submarine in taking forcible possession of the Dutch steamers Batavier V, and Zaanstroom, and conveying them to Zeebrugge and confiscating their cargoes. The question whether a protest will be sent to Germany will, it is said, depend on the answer of the British Government.

In semi-official quarters, however, it is argued that the Germans have no right to "capture" the vessels, but it is still uncertain whether a capture has taken place, as the reports of the hauling down of the Dutch flag and the hoisting of the German colors are indefinite. This is one of the chief questions the Dutch telegram asks Berlin to explain.

BETTER AN EYEGLASS THAN A GLASS EYE

"Putting it off till tomorrow" is neither wisdom nor economy where the safety of your eyes is concerned. Little eye troubles lead to big ones, usually, unless steps to correct them are taken. By means of scientific instruments, we can tell you whether glasses will do much or little for you. Even if you do not need glasses, our assurance is worth vastly more than the time required to be examined. Why not be sure that your eyesight is safe?

We manufacture and fit PEBLO glasses exclusively.

BOWSER'S DEAD FRIEND

He Comes Back to Earth in the Form of a Dog

By M. QUAD.

Mr. Bowser smoked and read.

Then he chucked the paper away and talked to the cat.

Then he hummed the air of a song.

Then he looked at the clock.

Then he rose up and stretched and yawned.

What he would have done next cannot be told, as the mournful howl of a dog came from the street to cause Mrs. Bowser to exclaim:

"Mercy on me, but go out and drive that beast away!"

"By George, but that's a curious coincidence!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he got up. "It was only this afternoon that I was reading a long article on transmigration, and here a dog comes howling in front of my door."

"I don't see any curious coincidence about it," replied Mrs. Bowser. "If you had been reading a long article about Noah and his ark the dog would have come just the same. Please go out and club him away."

"I'll do nothing of the sort. How can we tell that the soul of some of our dead friends has not passed into that dog and returned to the earth again?"

"Nonsense!"

"You may sneer and sneer, but there are thousands who believe in transmigration. I'm almost a believer myself.

THERE WAS A MIXUP FOR A FEW SECONDS.

Hear that howl? There's something about it to remind me of the voice of some one who I have known. I won't do any driving away until I've had a look at the animal."

Mr. Bowser put on his hat and passed out. The dog sat at the gate and was getting ready for another howl, but choked it off into a whine as the door opened. As no clubs were thrown or cuss words used he made bold to jump the fence and enter the yard. He was a long, lank, ill used bobtailed dog who had evidently cut loose from home and was freelancing around the country. Mr. Bowser was about to utter a yell and scare the canine out of a year's growth when Mrs. Bowser spoiled it all by opening the door and demanding:

"Well, why don't you drive him away, or has he turned out to be an old friend of yours?"

Mr. Bowser snapped his fingers, and as the dog came trotting up the steps he was ushered into the hall and through to the sitting room. The family cat was lying under a chair and seemed asleep, but it didn't take her over the thousandth part of a second to wake up and light on that intruder. There was a mixup for a few seconds, during which Mrs. Bowser ran upstairs. Mr. Bowser got a chair, and cat and dog rolled over each other on the floor. Then the cat flew upstairs after Mrs. Bowser, and the dog sat down and looked at Mr. Bowser and waited for further instructions.

"What on earth did you do that for?" called Mrs. Bowser from the head of the stairs.

"Because I'm going to give this dog a show," answered Mr. Bowser. "I'm going to give him something to eat and then study him."

It happened to be the cook's night off or there would have been a riot in the kitchen. As it was, Mr. Bowser cleared the pantry for the dog, and when there was nothing more to eat he returned to the sitting room. Mrs. Bowser came down just then to say:

"I never heard of such a silly thing in all my life. Why don't you turn him out?"

"Let me tell you something," replied Mr. Bowser. "There's a familiar look about that dog's face. There's an expression about the mouth which awakens a memory. Say, now, but just as true as you live one of the best friends I ever knew had just such an expression! Upon my word, I believe the soul of Will Baker, who died two years ago, has passed into this dog!"

"Then it had better pass out again. I'll open the door and you jump at him."

"I'll do nothing of the kind. That expression almost clinches my belief in transmigration. Suppose it should be the soul of my friend come back to earth again? See him look at me! Why, woman, that dog seems to understand every word I say!"

"Well, you can talk over old times with him, and I'll go upstairs," replied Mrs. Bowser. "If he suddenly runs mad and bites you don't blame any one but yourself."

"It's queer, mighty queer," mused Mr. Bowser after a long study of the dog's face. "That is Will Baker's mouth to a dot. If he comes back to earth in the form of a dog I'll not go back on him. A dog can't talk, but if this is poor Will there ought to be some way of making sure of it. Doggie"—

The dog didn't wait for him to finish. He lifted his head and indulged in a long drawn howl which made things rattle.

"For heaven's sake, but what is going on down there?" shouted Mrs. Bowser.

"The dog howled. I was going to ask him if the soul of Will Baker had returned to earth in this form when he"—

There was another howl. It was louder and longer than the other, and there was something so uncanny about it that Mr. Bowser found chills racing up and down his back. He determined to turn the soul of Will Baker into the street forthwith, but he instantly discovered an obstruction in his path. The soul objected—that is, the dog stood firmly planted on his feet before him and not only howled again, but finished up with a menacing growl and a vigorous scratching of the carpet with all four feet.

"What is it now?" shouted Mrs. Bowser.

"The blame cur won't let me move! I believe he's going mad! You'd better open a front window and yell for the police!"

"We don't want to arouse the whole neighborhood and have them laughing at you. If that's the soul of your dearest friend he'll go out if you'll ask him to. Is the expression of the mouth the same as it was?"

"It's a heap worse! Can't you slip down and open the front door?"

Mrs. Bowser said she'd try it, but she didn't. The dog decided to take a view of the second story and made a start. She heard him coming and had just time to reach her bedroom and shut the door when he banged against it. He tore around for a minute or two and then got downstairs and drove Mr. Bowser on to the lounge and stood before him and growled and chuckled and gurgled in a way to freeze the blood. It was evident that the soul of Will Baker had shut his eyes and felt his helplessness when the family cat came to his rescue. She had been licked in the fight, but she had been taken by surprise and hadn't a fair show. Burning to recover her lost laurels after hiding for fifteen minutes under the bed, she had sneaked downstairs, and all of a sudden she landed on the dog's back. The soul of Mr. Bowser's old chum was both pained and surprised at the sharpness of her teeth and the length of her claws. He made two turns around the sitting room, three around the parlor, and then there was a smash, a crash and a howl. With the cat clinging to his back and putting in ten hours a day the dog had taken a header through a parlor window, and the Bowsers were saved.

"And this," said Mrs. Bowser as she got downstairs and found Mr. Bowser pale faced and trembling and his knees bending under him—"this is transmigration, is it?"

"I thought—I thought"— he stammered, but she pointed to the broken window and interrupted:

"Yes, I know, and that's the result of it! You'd better let souls and dogs and transmigration alone and find some boards to nail over it till tomorrow!"

Mr. Bowser tried to work up a bluff and save his dignity, but it was a vain effort. There was a feeling as if a cold iron was being moved up and down his spine, and the wabble of his knees took his breath away.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, March 22.—The wheat market opened unchanged to ½c lower, oats unchanged to ⅛c lower, and flax ½c higher to 2c lower. The volume of trading was very light in futures and with little or no export or cash business prices declined rapidly. The range in prices before noon was 2¾c on May and 2½c on July, and 2c on October under Saturday's closing figures, with a tendency to go still lower.

Oats and flax were quiet. Inspections on Saturday 390 cars, as against 340 cars last year, and in sight today were 800 cars for inspection, being the largest receipts for some time.

Wheat lost 1¾c to 3c on the day, and oats 1½c to 1⅝c. Flax was 3½c to 4½c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, March 22.—A few loads of Manitoba spring wheat were sold over the cable today for March-April shipment, but the market on the whole is very quiet and ocean freight space very scarce in all positions. The local market for coarse grains was quiet with an easy undertone to the market for oats in sympathy with the decline in prices in the Winnipeg option market. The demand for all lines was limited. Flour continues quiet and the market is without any new feature to note. Mill feed is fairly active and steady.

There is no change in butter, for which the demand is rather quiet.

Hogs.

Selects, weighed off cars, sold at $8.50, and $8.35 fed and watered, and $8 f.o.b. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 22.—At the Montreal Stock Yards there was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle today, the feeling being firm on account of the fact that the supply was much smaller than a week ago, and the quality better than ever. The demand from packers was good, owing to the near approach of the Easter trade and a fairly active trade was done, but there was no disposition on the part of buyers to pay fancy prices for stock, as in former years. A few loads of extra choice steers were sold at $8, but the bulk of the trade was done in ordinary choice steers from the above figure down to $7.75, while many loads of good steers changed hands at $7.25 to $7.50, and a few extra choice, heavy bulls sold as high as $7.25 per hundred pounds.

The most important feature of the trade today was the decidedly strong feeling which developed in the market for hogs, and prices, compared with a week ago, show an advance of 45c to 50c per hundred pounds, which is attributed to the strength displayed in the Toronto market at the latter end of last week, the much smaller supplies coming forward from the interior, and the fact that packers have been doing a fairly large export trade in this line of late. A fairly active trade was done, as the competition for supplies was keener than usual, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.75 to $9; sows at $6.75 to $7, and stags at $4.35 to $4.50 per hundred pounds, weighed off cars. Five cars of northwest hogs were received by a packer, which cost, laid down here, $8.65 per hundred pounds. The prospects are that prices may possibly go a little higher in the near future.

Trade in sheep and lambs was very quiet, on account of the very limited supplies coming forwards, and in consequence the undertone of the market is very firm, but prices show no important change. A few spring lambs were offered, which met with a steady demand, at $7 to $10 each, as to size and quality. A good trade was done in calves, but, as the offerings were not in excess of the requirements, the tone of the market was steady.

ABATE NUISANCE

Anti-Smoke Bill Gives Greater Power to Municipalties

TORONTO, March 23.—Cities will hereafter be provided with the means for the expeditious treatment of smoke nuisances, and parties which have by unscrupulous methods evaded the present law during the past few years will be brought to book without difficulty. The McPherson bill working towards this end passed a second reading in the Legislature yesterday.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, in answer to a query from N. W. Rowell, stated that legislation would be brought down to settle definitely the jurisdiction of municipalities in granting licenses to pool rooms.

Candidates for municipal offices will require the regular property qualifications for another year at least. In spite of an appeal from Liberal and Labor members in the Legislature yesterday afternoon the Government has decided to make no change until the matter has had special study.

ZEPPELINS WINGED?

Eye-Witness Says German Raiders Acted Strangely on Sunday.

PARIS, March 22.—An eye-witness of the flight of the Zeppelin over St. Leu Taveranis, towards Paris Sunday morning, declares that one of the airships suddenly made a dive toward the earth and expresses the belief that it had been hit by a fragment of shell.

This man saw the first Zeppelin at 1.35 o'clock, clearly outlined in the rays of a searchlight, flying at a height estimated at 2,500 yards. The forts at Cormeillis opened a heavy fire, but the shells burst too low and the aircraft rose to a higher altitude and escaped from the light of the searchlight reflectors.

Forty-five minutes later the man saw another Zeppelin, and at the same time the cannonading was resumed.

The shells, according to the eye-witness, began to burst nearer and nearer the huge envelope and finally the aircraft began to descend rapidly. Several times it endeavored to attain a higher altitude but was unable to do so, and made off eventually at reduced speed.

This announcement was made at the White House yesterday, and is accepted as indicating that the administration has determined to await no longer for the supplementary statement which the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs promised in the preliminary note accompanying the transcript of the order-in-council itself.

BUILDING OF PETROGRAD.

Peter the Great's Ruthless Methods in Erecting the Capital.

Most disadvantageously situated of all the capitals of Europe—indeed, of the world—Petrograd is a monument of the pride and energy of Peter the Great. He wanted a European capital in order to signalize and immortalize his conquests. In 1703, when the first foundations of the city were laid on the marshy island on the delta of the Neva, at the eastern end of the gulf of Finland, the surrounding territory had even then not been entirely conquered.

Peter went to work with his usual energy and with his usual ruthlessness to create a capital in what was worse than a desert. He himself superintended the building of the city and gave the directions of the details to half a dozen lieutenants. The work was pushed with almost incredible rapidity, so that by 1712 sufficient advance had been made to permit the transfer of the imperial family from Moscow.

One measure ordered by Peter was that thousands of peasants must settle in or near the new capital. A special tax was put on his empire to meet the expenses of building the city. Such a small difficulty as the scarcity of masons was nothing to a man like Peter the Great. He simply forbade the erection of stone buildings anywhere else in the empire until Petrograd was finished.—New York Times.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

FREE BASEBALL THE DREAM OF LOCAL FANS TO BE TRIED OUT AT DECATUR

Here's a town brave enough to attempt free baseball. And league baseball at that. Decatur, Ill., the club from which Davy Rowan secured Dave Hilliard, Bob Sterling, Knute Belting and Totten, is going to let the fans in free—men, women, boys, everybody—to see its Three-I. League team play ball. The idea would mean the biggest boom baseball ever has had—and which, combined with the Cleveland amateur plan, would make baseball more popular than it ever has been and perhaps re-establish it upon a sound basis.

Decatur has been maintaining a Three-I. League Club, generally at a loss, and with an annual report of discouragement and failure. Now the backers of the club want free baseball—to play out the Three-I. League schedule without charging admission save on holidays. They are trying to raise a subscription fund to carry the club through the coming year. It is planned to play the regular games at home, throwing open the gates to all respectable persons, and to appeal to the fans to attend the holiday games, paying double admission on those days. Decatur probably draws 40,000 paid admissions during a season playing 72 home games. The idea now is to appeal to the patriotism of the fans and ask them to turn out on Decoration Day, July 4, Labor Day and the local holidays. One would think that any fan who had been entertained free of charge at perhaps a dozen games would strain a point to attend on the pay days and repay the club in part.

If the holiday crowds reach an average of 10,000 for the three big holidays of the season at the larger price. The club would be ahead. The big gain would be in attracting to the free games the youngsters who are to be the next generation of baseball fans and to make baseball a sort of municipal enterprise in which all citizens will have pride. The response to the proposal of the franchise owners is said to be hearty. Businessmen and others believe that it will be of immense benefit to the community and it is more than probable that Decatur will have the honor of having the first municipally-owned professional baseball team.

OTTAWAS LOST AT VANCOUVER

Coast Champions Took First Game by 6 to 2

VANCOUVER, March 23. — In the first game for the world's hockey championship here last night, Vancouver was leading Ottawa at half-time by 6 to 1. First period score was: Vancoucer 1, Ottawa 1; second period: Vancouver 5, Ottawa 1.

The lineup:

Vancouver—Goal, Lehman; point, Cook; cover, Patrick; rover, Taylor; centre, Mackay; right, Nighbor; left, Graham.

Ottawa — Goal, Benedict; point, Merrill; cover, Ross; rover, Gerard; centre, Duford; right, Broadbent; left, Graham.

Subs: Vancouver, Mallen and Seaborn. Ottawa, Darragh, Shore and Hebert.

Referee—Tommy Phillips, Vancouver. Judge of play—Fred Ion, Vancouver.

Baseball correspondents are this year neglecting to view the recruits as Ty Cobbs and Walter Johnsons. War correspondents probably stole all their thunder.

Ban Johnson is going to hire Hank O'Day to umpire in the American League. Probably a grouch, like misery loves company.

The Oyster Shell.

Every one who has handled an oyster shell must have noticed the successive layers overlapping each other. These are technically named shots, and each one marks a year's growth, so that by counting them the age of the oyster can be determined. Up to the time of its maturity—that is, when four years of age—the shots are regular and successive, but after that time they become irregular and are piled one upon another so that the shell becomes bulky and thickened. Fossil oysters have been seen of which each shell was nine inches thick, whence they may be guessed to be more than 900 years old.

SENATORS AND FORT WAYNE SCRAP FOR HERB SHOCKER

Central League President Will Take Case to National Commission

Preliminary to the pastime that is to come, the Ottawa and Fort Wayne clubs are scrapping to decide which club shall possess Herb Shocker, who was the property of the Fort Wayne club last season and was sent to Ottawa with Pitcher Peterson under optional agreement by Claude Varnell, owner of the Central League club. Early in the present winter Mr. Varnell notified Manager Shaughnessy that he would turn both men over to the Canadian League champions, and as a result did not reserve them for Fort Wayne. Ottawa in the meantime placed both players on their reserve list. Two weeks ago Varnell sold the Fort Wayne club to a new company. The owners, through their manager, Bade Myers, have asked the Ottawa club to turn both Shocker and Peterson over to Fort Wayne. And there appears little chance of the Senators relinquishing a grip on either man, as they comprise full-fledged chattels of the Ottawa club under every law of organized aseball. President Heilbronner of the Central League intimates that he will carry the case to the National Commission, as he alleges both players were included as part of the Fort Wayne club when it was purchased.

Shocker led the Canadian League pitchers last season, and from a six-inning twirler earlier in the season developed into the finest spitballer ever seen in the league. He was not only a good pitcher who knew how to pitch, but earned the title of "iron man" through his desire to go in out of his turn to beat an opposing team and pitch double-headers. He pitched four games in eight days on Ottawa's last stay at home before the closing of the season in Ottawa on Labor Day.

"What a beautiful new hat and coat!" she cried as soon as he came home that afternoon.

"Isn't it—I mean, aren't they?" he said proudly. "Bargains too. The overcoat was $16, reduced from something, and the hat was $4, but they're going to raise the price next week."

His young wife crowed with delight.

"Herman, you look stunning!" she exclaimed. "Let me put them on, to give you some slight idea of the general effect. You can never tell on yourself, you know."

And she put them on. The coat was a nobby plaid Balmacaan, and the hat was a nile green felt, very swagger.

"By Jove, Cecile," he cried, "if I look half that good in 'em I'm satisfied!"

She walked to the pier glass.

"You look very fine in them, dear," she said hesitatingly, "but—truth compels me to say they're more than twice as becoming on me. You know, the women are wearing men's hats and coats this winter. Don't you think you could get yourself another outfit tomorrow—something in colors a little more becoming to you, perhaps? We have fried chicken and waffles for dinner, just the way you like them."

BAKER NOT RETIRING

Hughey Jennings Says He is a Common Hold-out

GULFPORT, Miss., March 23. — Manager Hughey Jennings is of the opinion that Frank Baker has about as much intention of quitting baseball as he himself has. Which is not much of a boost for Baker's retirement, for Hughey is going to beat out Jim McGuire's thirty-year record if the fates are kind to him.

"Frank Baker has no more intention of retiring from baseball than I have," said Hughey. "He signed himself to a long contract last year, consenting to give Connie Mack his services for a salary which he now regrets very much. It is my opinion that Baker's retirement is nothing more or less than a common hold-out, staged in this fashion because his contract will not permit him to hold up Mack in any other way.

"I have no idea what Mack will do. He needs Baker. There is no queston about that. But to tear up Baker's contract and give him a new one after what has happened would be setting a dangerous precedent in baseball. That Bill James incident in Boston has done the game no good, and if Mack yielded there might be an epidemic of hold-outs on the part of disgruntled players."

THE PROSPECT.

WILL men in future ages
 Forget the way to walk
And how on foot to travel
 Since flying is the talk?
With airships, locomotives
 And steamships everywhere,
Will he begin to wonder
 Why feet were fastened there?

On foot he will be lonely,
 And it will seem a crime
If he is going somewhere
 To use up so much time.
With everybody soaring,
 Propelled by gasoline,
He'll surely save his money
 And buy him a machine.

He'll seek some able surgeon
 And to the doctor say,
"Cut off these feet, old Sawbones,
 For they are in the way."
When they are amputated
 Then he can travel light
And never more be tempted
 By anything but flight.

No corns will ever trouble
 When he is in that class,
And then without a shudder
 A shoe store he can pass.
He'll say as some old codger
 Goes trudging down the street,
"Just see that ancient fogy
 Who still is wearing feet!"

Getting Down Fine.

"That carpet you sold me was warranted not to shrink."

"That is how it came to us, madam."

"Well, your guarantee didn't work."

"Did it shrink much, madam?"

"Much? Why, the man sucked it up in the vacuum cleaner this morning."

He Didn't Go to Lovers' Lane.

"In the gloaming, oh, my darling,
 Meet me, sure, 'twixt eight and nine!"
Was the message that she sent me,
 And I shouted, "This is fine!"
But at midnight I was frantic.
 Vainly I looked for her face.
I went hunting for the gloaming—
 Blessed if I could find the place!

HOW HE SHOT HIMSELF

By EVERETT P. CLARKE.

A lawyer, having been sent for to call at the city jail at 10 o'clock in the morning to see a prisoner, found a young man in evening dress very much cast down.

"Here's a pretty how-de-do," exclaimed the prisoner—"locked up on a charge of burglary, insanity or both. For heaven's sake, get me out of this before my fiancee hears of it. I would not have it get into the papers for a million!"

"What's the trouble?" asked the lawyer.

"Well, you see, I'm to be married tomorrow, and last night I gave my bachelor friends a supper. We broke up at 2 o'clock this morning, and I went home. Nobody got full, and I was sober as a judge. I live in a row of ten store front houses, all alike as peas in a pod. My house is the sixth from one end of the row and the fifth from the other end.

"The light was turned low in the hall. I heard something moving in the parlor. Remembering that the front door hadn't been locked, it occurred to me that a burglar might have come in. What I heard sounded exactly like some one trying to tread softly. My fiancee lives on one side of the city, and I live on the other side. Being used to walking home nights after visiting her, I have become used to carrying a revolver in my hip pocket as a protection against footpads. On hearing the sounds in the parlor I drew the weapon and cocked it. Then I went into the room.

"I couldn't see anything, but I distinctly heard somebody in the adjoining room in the rear. I listened and heard him go into the kitchen. Stepping out into the hall, I went back to the kitchen myself and listened at the door. All was still for awhile; then I heard the fellow scurry across the floor.

"Next I heard him in the dining room again. He evidently stumbled against something, for I heard it drop on the floor. By this time I had made up my mind that either I must get the burglar or he would get me.

"I didn't know exactly what to do. My mother is in poor health, and I feared to give an alarm on her account. Besides, the telephone booth was upstairs, and if I went to it the burglar would probably get away with the plunder. While I was deliberating I heard a tin pan tumble down in the kitchen. It made a big racket, and I dreaded lest my mother should be awakened, for if she learned that there was a burglar in the house she would go into hysterics.

"I opened the kitchen door softly and looked in, but it was so dark that I couldn't see anything. I heard a scratching, however, that made me suspect the noises might have been made by some animal. But as we didn't have any dog or cat I didn't take much stock in this theory.

"Not hearing any further noise, I went cautiously into the kitchen. After standing in the middle of the floor awhile listening for a new sound I made up my mind to light a gas jet and take the consequences, whatever they might be.

"Every house in the block is built alike, and there is a square opening in all between the kitchen and the dining room through which to pass dishes. I approached this opening with dread, because if the burglar was in the dining room he could see me through it and make short work of me.

"Gathering courage, I stood at the aperture and looked into the dining room. There he was, sure enough. Both of us raised our weapons. It was a matter of life and death which fired first. I pulled the trigger, and there was a loud report.

"I supposed I had killed the burglar, for the range was very short, and I aimed straight at him. There was nothing for me to do but await the inevitable rousing of the household. I heard footsteps above and voices; then down came a man in his nightshirt.

"Great Scott! I had never seen him before!

"I had got into the wrong house.

"The man, seeing me standing with a smoking revolver in my hand, ran back upstairs, and I heard him call for the police.

"What should I do?

"I wanted to get out, but knew that would be worse for me in the end than standing my ground. I heard nothing from the burglar—not even a moan. While waiting for the police I determined to go into the dining room, light the gas and learn the worst.

"What I learned was that there was no living thing in the room except a cat crouching in a corner. Directly opposite the opening between the dining room and kitchen stood a sideboard topped by a mirror. The mirror was shattered. I had put a bullet through it trying to kill my own image.

"When the police came the man upstairs called down to them to run in any one they might find there. I tried to explain to the police what had happened, showing them the opening through which I had fired at the mirror. Some of them thought me a housebreaker, who had been caught red-handed; others took me for a lunatic. Anyway they arrested me, and here I am."

Happily the attorney secured bail and succeeded in hushing the matter up. The next evening his client was married without his bride knowing of the episode following his bachelor dinner.

U. S. To Ask Reparation.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—State Department officials have now gathered practically all the data sought by them preparatory to requesting Germany to make reparation for the sinking of the American ship Wm. P. Frye and cargo, by the Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

The American complaint will be that there was no proof that the foodstuffs were destined to the belligerent forces of Great Britain. The general belief is that the German Government will make reparation for the loss of ship and cargo, and that the incident will be closed shortly.

600,000,000 Bullets for Allies.

OMAHA, March 23. — Ten train loads of lead, enough to make 600,000,000 standard bullets, were shipped to England from the Omaha plant of the American Smelting & Refining Co. While destined to private consignees in London, the lead is said to be intended for military use by the allied Governments. Each train was composed of twenty cars, and each car carried thirty tons.

For Two Years.

"For two years after I was married I was ashamed to meet the preacher who united my wife and me in the holy bonds. You see, in my excited condition I made a blunder and gave him a five dollar bill instead of $20, which I intended to hand him. I suppose he thought I was a cheap skate, but I couldn't very well explain it without making myself ridiculous or causing him to suspect that I was lying about it."

"Your say you felt that way for two years?"

"Yes. After that I began to be sorry I had given him anything!"

MANAGERS OF THE WOOLWORTH STORES MEET HERE

The air for blocks around the Oriental hotel was heavy with mystery this afternoon. A secret meeting of managers of Woolworth stores in Ontario is going on behind locked doors on the second floor of the hotel.

A reporter vainly sought information but there was nothing doing. All the information obtainable was that the conference had something to do with drawing up a list, presumably a price list. Whether this is intended to mean an increase in prices for the Woolworth stores could not be determined. Some of the managers present are L. J. Harrington, Toronto, former manager of Woolworth's here; E. H. Zick, Toronto; W. F. Musselman, Oshawa; D. Martin, Belleville; H. Greenburg, Kingston; J. H. Butler, Orillia, and the local manager.

These men were closeted this morning and upon meeting this afternoon gathered behind locked doors.

57th BAND ASK USUAL GRANT

Object to Equal Division of Grants as Recommended to Council

Evidently the bandsmen of Peterborough have oratory qualities as well as musical notes. The recent meeting of the finance committee decided that the grants to the 57th Regimental Band and the Salvation Army Band, which were $500 and $225, be totalled and divided equally, giving $362.50 to each. The 57th Band had a deputation present at the meeting of the committee of the whole council last night and made known their arguments as to why the grant to their band should not be lowered. Major Eastwood pointed out how the band is self-sustaining, and this year will be a difficult one to finance. Other years the men went to camp for sixteen days, and a certain part of their wages went to the upkeep of the band. This year it is doubtful if the men will be in the camp for a period of eleven days. Thus there will be a decrease in the band revenue.

Lt. R. Gliddon, bandmaster, claimed the 57th Regimental Band to be in a better position today than ever. The men give up a great deal of their time because months must be spent in practising before the programs given at the park in the summer months can be rendered. Lt. Gliddon remarked that in Berlin the band receives $1000, and in fact many other city bands receive much larger grants from the council than Peterborough. He thought as the city oofficials go out of town for information of other nature, they might also get out-of-town information on this matter.

Mr. Fred Miller, president of the band, emphasized the need of financial assistance so as to keep the band providing the same class of music it has in the past.

His Worship Mayor Buller assured the deputation that the matter will be re-opened for discussion when it comes up at the Council meeting. The committee then proceeded to the committee room, and in the course of a few moments representatives of the Salvation Army band put in their appearance. Adjutant McElhiney acted as spokesman and urged that the grants be equal. He thought the Army band had as much right to be considered the citizens' band as a military band. The Adjutant was in favor of dividing the money among all the bands, for the city cannot have too much music. If all the grants were to be cut out, the Army band would not oppose the measure nor would they cease playing.

The deputation received the same assurance as the members of the regimental organization.

REV. W. WHITE INDUCTED AS RECTOR OF ST. LUKE'S

Sermon is Preached by Rev. Archdeacon Warren

Though but a sojourner in the city a very short time, there is every reason to believe that St. Luke's parish has secured a worthy sucessor in the person of Rev. Walter White to carry on the work of their former rector. Rev. Mr. White was formally inducted into the rectorship of St. Luke's Church last night at a ceremony full of impressiveness, the induction sermon being preached by Archdeacon Warren of Toronto who referred to Rev. Mr. White in warm terms and appealed to the congregation to rally to his support with the same enthusiasm they had extended to their late rector.

The vows were laid upon the new rector by Rev. Canon Davidson, assisted by Rev. R. B. Grobb, rector of All Saints', and Rev. F. J. Sawers, now of Cobourg. Immediately afterwards Archdeacon Warren mounted to the pulpit and preached the induction sermon.

His text was most appropriate, being taken from Psalm 54, 10th verse, "Create in me a clean heart and renew a right spirit within me."

"The thought of the recreation of the heart must be present with the congregation," said Archdeacon Warren. "The message of God was 'Become changed in your minds for the Kingdom of God is at hand.'" He ventured to express the hope and prayer that the ministry of the new pastor would have this effect abundantly, the recreation of the heart and spirit.

Archdeacon Warren, referring to the war said there were some people who were entirely unaffected by what was going on in the world at the present time. The terrible war between Germany and England; between two great peoples; that war of ideals, was something that was significant and had to be heeded.

He touched upon the world wide problem between the worker and employer. People could ignore present events and shut their eyes to the significance of them. People might ask how can we prevent this which has come upon us? We don't think God causes war. We think it is the stupidity, the folly and cupidity of men. How shall we overcome it; how shall we unite men? Then we think of an international treaty, but that brings up a train of questions, such as indemnity, government, etc. "We can't shut our eyes to the fact that we are badly governed," he said. "We want prudent administration. Legislation alone won't remove the evils that exist in the world. There must be something else to bring peace to pass. That something else is a right public temper, or a right public spirit."

Archdeacon Warren declared that the great question today, was not whether the Christian religion was right, but whether the religion that we really have is right. Taking the western civilized world, he affirmed that our actual religion has been largely false and we had been worshippers of idols, and it was that form of idolatry that had made conditions as they are. The prayer of every nation should be "create in me a clean heart."

One thought he emphasized in connection with conducting church services, was that the congregation should come in the spirit of the Lord. The congregation should be filled with the spirit of the Lord. God must dwell within people and dominate them throughout.

This spirit was the spirit of love. The spirit that makes us warm to one another, the spirit that will relieve one of evil temper and coveteousness; the spirit that would unite the nations.

Referring to the creed, he defined it as framework, a sort of epitome. It had to be investigated and studied deeply. There was a body of convictions that must be laid hold of today. It was not sufficient to listen to a preacher lay down these ideals. People must lay hold of them themselves. In that way people could arrive at the clean heart and the new spirit.

Archdeacon Warren felt sure there would be a mutual operation of the spirit between the new pastor and his congregation.

Fixed Salary for City Treasurer

The committee of the whole council decided last evening that the City Treasurer be paid a fixed salary, that the council decide what assistants are necessary and that they be paid by the council. The meeting further decided that the salary of the City Treasurer be $1,400 per annum; that of the deputy treasurer be $700 and that of the stenographer $300. The change was necessitated by the Utilities Commission office collecting the water rates and leaving the city treasurer's office to handle only the city's money. When a change was due Ald. Stratton brought in the idea of not paying the head of the department and permitting him to employ his assistants but rather having the council pay all the office hands, yet leave the head of the department to hire or dismiss his assistants.

The motion of Ald. Stratton and Ald. Dobbin that the salaries be arranged as above, making a total of $2,400 did not meet the approval of all. Ald. Edgar and Ald. Weir moved an amendment that the City Treasurer be paid $2,100 and be allowed to employ his assistants as before. The amendment failed to carry.

Tea Market Still Advancing.

Nothing definite can be ascertained with regard to a probable advance in package teas in Canada. But it seems to be common sense to suppose that tea men can't go on importing at high and yet higher prices every week without making some changes in their selling schedule to cover. There is nothing to do but follow Mr. Asquith's advice and "Wait and see." Meanwhile taking note of the handwriting on the wall. — Canadian Grower, March 19th.

PERCY HARRISON

Ladies and gentlemen of Peterborough and district who may have or get any of the pony votes to be given at the stores in Peterborough, as I am in the running for the handsome prize, I will be extremely thankful to them if they would give them to me any night I am outside the Empire picture show, or drop a card to 733 George street, or phone 142. I am deeply thankful to those who have given me votes so generously during the contest.

"THE QUAKER GIRL"

"The musical comedy hit of three continents" is the way the advertisements read for "The Quaker Girl," which comes to the Grand Opera House Saturday next, March 27th, matinee and night, exactly as presented for two years at the Royal Adelphi Theatre, London, and one whole year at the Park Theatre, New York. But as a matter of fact, this statement, instead of being an exaggeration, is short of the real truth, for this tuneful musical comedy has really appeared on four continents. Its run of two years in London and a year in Paris constituted one. The piece is still running in Australia, and a company opened recently in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, while this company is touring the United States. This makes four continents that have endorsed "The Quaker Girl," which is a record never before equalled by a musical entertainment of any sort.

PAID $2 FOR THEIR MEAL

Lumberjacks Didn't Pay in the Usual Way

Nothing much worse than drunk and disorderly conduct informations had to be disposed of today in police court. A couple of lumbermen named Archibald Weddell and Thomas Newell refused to pay for a meal in a local restaurant, so the police were informed, and both men were locked up yesterday. It was a costly refusal as a two-dollar fine was imposed on each today.

William Beaver, an Indian, was drunk yesterday. He was fined $1.75.

By leaving his horse untied on Water street, Wm. McIntyre committed a breach of the traffic by-law. The fine was $2 and costs of $6.05, or $8.05.

SAFETY RAZOR FOR PTE. HALL

Postmen Honor One of Their Number Who Has Enlisted

Private W. W. Hall, one of the "posties" who leaves with the 39th in the morning was surprised today when his former fellow carriers handed him a fine little safety razor and wished him good luck and a safe return. The gift was accompanied by an address read by S. T. Darrah, president of the Letter Carriers' Association, while W. Stewart made the presentation.

The affair took place at noon in the post office, in the presence of all the postmen who shook hands and hoped that Private Hall would take one at the Germans for them.

Private Hall replied suitably.

His departure is the third from the post office department, the others being Trevor Cuffe and W. Gibson.

Special Meeting to Pass Tax Rate

A special meeting of the City Council will be held tomorrow evening at eight o'clock to finally approve of the tax rate as decided upon at the meeting of the committee of the whole council last evening. General business will also be taken up which includes the recommendation of the Finance Committee that the band grants be equal. Considerable discussion is likely to be occasioned when the report is presented.

ORDER FOR RAZORS.

PARIS. — An order for 50,000 razors has just been placed by the British Government with the French cutlery factories at Thiers. They are for part of the personal equipment of the new troops now being organized in England. When the war broke, England discovered that in spite of her own immense cutlery factories there was hardly a razor to be had in all England that did not bear the mark "Made in Germany." The soldiers themselves refused to carry these and the government called on the French factories to help it out of the predicament.

DISPUTE OVER PAYMENT FOR DRILLING WELL

Original Agreement to be Carried Out

The details of a well drilling transaction on a farm in Otonabee was aired today at a special sitting of the County Court and then His Honor Judge Huycke succeeded in having the two parties come to an agreement that the original contract would be carried out. Last September James Edwards, tenant of a farm, in the above township, which is owned by Mrs. H. Dickson of Peterborough employed William Edwards to drill a well. The bargain made was "no water, no pay," and if water was found William was to be paid $2.00 per foot. When a depth of some 54 feet was reached he was ordered to cease drilling and he sent in his bill for $123.50. In view of the fact that a poor stream of water was secured he made the account $100. This, Mrs. Dickson nor James Edwards did not pay so a writ was issued by G. N. Gordon on behalf of William Edwards against Mrs. Dickson and James Edwards for the $123.50. The case came up today, Mr. Gordon acting for the plaintiff and E. L. Goodwill for the defendants. After all the evidence was heard, the court adjourned for lunch and Judge Huycke advised the defendants to consider whether or not they would be willing to have William Edwards proceed with the drilling until water was reached and he be paid $2 per foot. Similar to the original agreemnt if Edwards did not reach water he would receive no payment. Mr. Gordon had stated that his client was perfectly willing to carry out the original agreement.

General Attack to be Undertaken on Arrival of Further British and French Warships

SUBS. OUTSIDE OF ANTWERP RAIDED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 24. — The bombardment of the Turkish fortifications in the Dardanelles was resumed at ten o'clock Tuesday morning by the allies' fleet, according to an Athens despatch to the Havas agency. Warships were accompanied into the straits by a number of mine sweepers.

LONDON, March 24. — A force of the allied troops was landed on the peninsula of Gallipoli yesterday from transports in the Gulf of Saros, according to a despatch from Athens to the Daily Express.

A general attack upon the fortifications of the Dardanelles is to be undertaken immediately upon the arrival of further British and French warships now on the way to join the attacking squadron.

LONDON, March 24. — The British Admiralty this afternoon issued a statement saying that a British air raid was successfully carried out today on German submarines at Hobokon, three miles outside of Antwerp.

Squadron Commander Ivor T. Courtney and Flight Lieut. H. Rosher reached their objective, and after planing down to one thousand feet, dropped four bombs, each on submarines.

It is believed considerable damage was done to both works and two submarines. The works were observed to be on fire. In all, five submarines were observed on the slip.

VIENNA CONSIDERS WAR WITH ITALY AS PROBABLE

Italian Government Seizes Supplies Supposed to be Destined for the Krupps

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

GENEVA, March 24. — Despatches received here from Vienna say the Government considers war with Italy most probable. A large number of troops have arrived at Tryli and Trent, and defence works are being constructed.

The Geneva Tribune says its despatches from Vienna were to the effect that the Austrians would consider peace with Russia without consulting Germany.

The Italian Government ordered the seizure yesterday at Lunoie, near the Swiss frontier, of twenty-nine cars containing graphite and other supplies supposed to be destined for the Krupps.

LINDSAY BANK LOSES $3000 EXPRESS DRIVER MISSING

Suspect is Son of Volunteer For Military Service

LINDSAY, March 24.—The sum of $3000, the property of the Home Bank of Canada, was stolen after its arrival yesterday by express from Toronto, and Connie Beare, a local driver for the Canadian Express Co., is being sought as a suspect. Beare has not been seen around town since before five o'clock, about the time of the discovery of the theft, and it is believed that he left on the five o'clock train for the south. Messages have been sent by the chief of police to Toronto, Peterborough, Port Hope and Whitby in the hope of intercepting him.

The money came from the Home Bank in Toronto in two express parcels, one of $2500 and the other of $500.

Beare has been in the habit of making his call at the station when the train arrives at twelve and then going home for dinenr before delivering his parcels and making collections. As a rule he does not reach the office until three or four o'clock, consequently his absence caused no suspicion. About four o'clock the manager of the Home Bank, Mr. Peter Kennedy, 'phoned up the express office to enquire about the money. Enquiries were made at the station and it was learned that the train express man had delivered the parcels to Beare. Search for the young man then began. When enquiries were made at his home, his mother said the boy was probably around town some place but his sister said he had changed his clothing after dinner and said he was going to Haliburton. According to information gathered by Chief of Police Short, Beare was last seen shortly before five o'clock going toward the C. P. R. station

Connie Beare, who is 21 years of age, has always lived in Lindsay, and his father is a volunteer for military service. Yesterday was pay day for the local troops, and it is understood that the money was intended for that purpose.

CLAIM OF $882 PAID FOR LOTS IN LETHBRIDGE

Plaintiffs Are Lakefield Men Who Purchased Land in the West

A real estate transaction in which defendants are alleged to have sold lots not in ther possession and had been unable to produce titles when called upon, forms the basis for writs that were issued yesterday by O. A. Langley on behalf of S. J. Wallace and S. Hunter, who live in Lakefield.

The writs were issued against Cecil C. Cragg and W. Bertram Mitford of Lethbridge, Alta., for the sum of $882, which was paid for four lots in Lethbridge. Judge Huycke, on Mr. Langley's applicaton, made an order allowing service of the writs.

It appears that the defendants did not own the lots they sold, and, being unable to get title to them, the plaintiffs claim their money back upon failure of consideration.

The defendant Cecil C. Cragg is a physician in Lethbridge, and W. Bertram Mitford is a real estate dealer. The lots were sold to plaintiff at Lakefield by a Mr. H. H. Cragg, a brother of Dr. Cecil C. Cragg. It is reported that a number of other gentlemen in Lakefield also paid their money and couldn't get their lots, but afterwards accepted some other land. Messrs. Wallace and Hunter refused to agree to this and consequently have brought suit.

It might be noted that Mr. G. E. McCraney, M. P., has an amendment to the Criminal Code now before the House of Commons which would cover this case.

The defendant Cecil C. Cragg is a brother of Rev. C. E. Cragg, who was formerly pastor of Mark street Methodist church.

IN TRENCHES SEVEN DAYS

Ptes. Gordon and Howard Wyatt Have Had Taste of Fighting

Pte. Gordon Wyatt, who, with his brother, Howard, enlisted with the first contingent, writes to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wyatt, 490 Driscoll Terrace, as follows:

March 8, 1915.

Dear Mother and Father:

I am writing you just a few lines to let you know Howard and I are well and happy and have had a taste of the trenches. We were in the trenches three times, seven days in all. They are not so bad, and if they get no worse than they are now we won't worry a little bit. We have tobacco issued to us regularly.

We have seen a good many French towns, and some of them are rather badly damaged, but the Germans are driven back as far as we want them for now, and we are going to run their heads off in the general advance. We think the Germans are about fed up on the war, and a few more rushes will put them right where we want them and the war will cease.

We are very comfortable, and I have stood the severe test better than you could imagine.

I hope business is good and that mother and the rest are all well.

With love to all, from

Death of Dr. Wm. R. Bell of Ottawa

Was Father of Mrs. R. H. Parsons of This City

Dr. William R. Bell, of Ottawa, father of Mrs. R. H. Parsons, of this city, passed away Monday evening, in his eighty-second year. Dr. Bell had been ailing for nearly two years and had given up his practice about six months ago. He was particularly famous as a surgeon and for many years was recognized as one of the Capital's best consulting physicians. He was born at Thirsk, Yorkshire, England, in 1833, came to Canada in 1866 and settled in Ottawa.

Dr. Bell was, for many years, a director of the Protestant General Hospital at Ottawa. He was prominently connected with the Masons and at one time was a sergeant-colonel in the Ottawa Field Battery, he being one of the first to get the long service medal. When the Governor General's Foot Guards was first organized he was one of the surgeons.

Besides a widow, Dr. Bell is survived by seven sons: Dr. W. David Bell, Ottawa; Ralph, of Victoria, B.C.; Ernest, of Cochrane, Alberta; George, of Revelstoke, B.C.; T. Grayson and J. Morrison Bell, both of Ottawa, and Major Archibald De Mowbray Bell who is commander of the ammunition park in connection with the Canadian Contingent in France; also three daughters: Mrs. J. B. Donaldson, 157 Stanley avenue; Mrs. D. C. Cadenhead, of Three Hills, Alberta; and Mrs. Roy H. Parsons, of Peterborough, Ont.

The funeral will take place Thursday afternoon.

In a four hours' canvass, members of the Galt Red Cross Society and other women's organizations raised $1,900 for the purchase of a Galt motor ambulance for use at the front.

Relatives and Friends Crowded Station to Say Good-bye to Johnny Canuck

The Peterborough unit for the 39th Battalion of the infantry forces of the Third Overseas Contingent, consisting of 110 men and two officers, left for Belleville, the mobilization centre, this morning, with the exception of Lieut. Cameron and Corporal H. Ward, who remained over till this evening to complete business relative to the transferring of the troops. The men entrained from the G. T. R. depot this morning at 8.20 and were given an enthusiastic send-off. The 57th Regimental Band and the Bugle Band and some members of the Temple Band were present, thus the send-off was complete in every way. The men occupied the three last coaches of the regular Belleville train, and as the train moved out the 57th Band rendered the very appropriate "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

Last evening the men of the 39th Battalion marched out with the 57th Regiment. All along the route the citizens gathered, and gave way to their pent-up feelings by hasty cheers. The men were in command of Lieut. Cameron on the march, while the 57th Regiment, swelled by a large number of recruits, was commanded by Lt.-Col. Walker. On their return to the Armouries the men were dismissed till nine o'clock.

At nine o'clock the 39th Battalion fell in and marched to the band room where a banquet was tendered them by the Women's War Fund Committee. The repast was ably catered by T. Hooper and Sons. Immediately after the luncheon was served the ladies of the committee presented each volunteer with handkerchiefs and other comforts. In vew of it being the last night the men would have at home, all the addresses were quite short and right to the point. The speakers were Col. Walker, Mayor Buller, Col. Miller, Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. C. G. Smith, Belleville, Mr. T. F. Matthews, Rev. Canon Davidson and Captain Spencer. The last named received a great ovation from his men, showing the high esteem in which they hold their commander. Captain Spencer took occasion to refer to the efficiency of his two commissioned officers, Lieut. Cameron and Lieut. Eastwod, also Major Cameron, M. D., and the non-commissioned officers and men. To the non-commissioned officers he gave the credit of the good conduct of the battalion. Captain Spencer thanked the Women's War Fund Committee and the citizens of Peterborough in general for the excellent manner in which he and his men have been treated. He thanked the clergymen of Peterborough for the numerous invitations the men received to attend divine service. He remarked that the hardest part of their work is yet to come, and to be successful they required every assistance possible. The assistance he asked from the citizens of Peterborough was their prayers.

The gathering broke up with three hearty cheers for the Women's War Fund Committee.

Quartermaster Sergeant Edwards, who has volunteered with the fourth contingent, accompanied the men to Belleville, to bring back the 57th uniforms which the men of the 39th Battalion have been wearing. He will be in charge of recruiting for the infantry forces at the Armouries until further orders are received.

Recruiting is still being continued for the 26th Overseas Battery.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 24, 1915

MARCHING TO THE WAR.

THIS MORNING another body of 110 men marched gaily to the station, where they entrained for the concentration camp at Belleville. They made a fine spectacle, with the 57th Band supplying the stirring music that has always been associated with the fascination of war. Like the other detachments that have gone from the city of Peterborough, these men will give a good account of themselves, both in camp and on the battlefield. They know they are upholding the honour of Canada and the Empire, and that is sufficient to make them highly efficient men—true soldiers of His Majesty the King.

ITALY AND THE WAR.

ITALY is the uncertain quantity as far as the war is concerned at the present time. There is undoubtedly a strong war party in Italy, and it appears also true that public opinion in Italy is strongly in favour of Britain and her allies. Some think that the entrance of Italy in the war is certain, in fact that she is practically engaged in it now.

One American newspaper says that little events, like the cessation of mails, the deportation of German newspaper correspondents, confirm the point of view that the delayed declaration of war is at hand. With Italy in the fighting, Germany and her allies will suffer not only from the greater force of arms, but from the more tightly-drawn lines of blockade. Italy undoubtedly has been an entry-way for German supplies, and for that reason, more than for her fighting strength, which is not inconsiderable, her alliance has been sought. Her entry now adds new complications to the map-making of Europe, which is to follow the war.

If Italy does declare war, she will form an important factor hastening Germany's defeat.

UNTHINKABLE.

COMMENTING on Billy Sunday's meetings in Philadelphia, the Montreal News says:

> "'Bill' Sunday's vocabulary is neither reverential nor refined. His sermons equally expose the poverty of mind and the paucity of proper precept. This noisy fellow makes a travesty of religion and a mock of spiritual thought and things. That the Supreme Being, the Ruler of the Universe, needs an advocate of the Sunday type is unthinkable."

This is the way such a performance appears to us. In the United States it has received popular approval, but we think it would not succeed in Canada. These tolerated periods of religious hysteria, commonly called revivals, are meeting with less and less support in this country, and the better class in the United States do not approve of them. Ministers may rant about commercialism in sports, art, politics, and other fields of activity, but has it not also invaded religion to a considerable degree? Billy Sunday received about $60,000 for his services in Philadelphia. Would he continue as a revival leader if he "Just broke even," so to speak? It is a fact that nearly all revivalists receive larger salaries than regular preachers, and that fact, together with their independence in paying for everything they get, such as advertising, makes such a question more and more insistent. To say that they follow this work for the money they get out of it is just another way of saying they would not follow it were the money not forthcoming. It is true that many do not stipulate any precise reward, but the insistent appeal to the pockets of an assembly wrought up by religious fear or enthusiasm very seldom fails to bring out the shekels.

On the other hand, it is said that no man could preach as Billy Sunday preaches. That is undoubtedly true. His preaching may appeal to a certain class by bringing it down to a bowery level, but it has always been contended that religion should not be brought down, but the person or people brought up to a realization of religious teaching.

Another point is that it is probable that there is little permanency in such revivals. They do not sink into the life of the people nor carry conviction.

The most serious objection is, however, the feeling of commercialism which gives rise to insincerity and inconsistency. When the public sees these men invariably making a large profit out of religious revivals they cannot conclude otherwise than that they are run as a business. Billy Sunday took Philadelphia by storm, and, to cater to the thousands that went to hear him, one newspaper there devoted pages upon pages to his meetings, and it was possibly rewarded by increased sales and advertising. The more one considers the problem, the more does it appear that commercialism does play a deciding part. And then, why should these revivals be necessary in countries where ministers are so plentiful that they tumble over themselves, and where churches are so many that the devil stubs his toe every block or so?

PRZEMYSL.

A READER of the Review had the boldness to advance into the sanctum the other day and demand of us the pronunciation of Przemysl. (He had already fortified himself.) A Toronto newspaper gave the pronunciation as zemisal, the vowels being short, and added that the preliminary pr could only be pronounced by a rattlesnake with buttons on its tail. Another authority gave it as per-zemisal, and this was the one we adopted. Our bold friend declared it wrong, that it was shemishl, the vowels being short and the p silent. In support of his statement, he trotted out the Literary Digest. Webster gives another variation, saying it is pronounced pzhemisl, the p being silent. The name of this central Galician town has doubtless been given different pronunciations by other authorities, and looking these up would tend to confuse most people. Now that it has fallen, it will undoubtedly have its name changed. If from now on people speak of it as it, there will be no doubt of the pronunciation of it.

Since the above was written, the Globe has attempted to pronounce the name of this Galician town. While we don't often agree with the Globe, we do not object to giving our readers what it says on this subject. It says it thus:

> "Jay-meezle, with the accent on the 'meez' and giving the 'j' the soft sound, as in French. Or as though it were spelled szhay-meezle."

SEED GRAIN FOR THE FARMERS.

THE OTTAWA GOVERNMENT has amended the Bank Act so as to allow banks to lend or advance money accommodation to farmers on prospective grain crops. Grain crops are, in reality, like any other business venture, and ought to have been in the past capable of being made security for bank advances. Banks could not loan money in this way, however. It was contrary to the Bank Act. The amendment just made by the Borden Government will remove this disability and will enable farmers to get advances that will enable them to do much that otherwise they could not do. A large class of farmers will be embraced in this amendment. It is a great advance for the benefit of the farming community, and will place it in the same business position as other branches of business.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

OWING to the fact that there is no likelihood of organized baseball this year and that amusements will have to be curtailed, the City Council would be well advised to take measures insuring public band concerts for the citizens. The 57th Band has furnished good music and gathered a valuable library. It needs all the assistance that can be given it, and, as the Council does not seem to be short of money, a grant equal to that of last year would be justified. It would assure the giving of concerts during a time when amusements are not too plentiful. At the same time some effort should be made to improve the service the band renders the citizens. When a rainy night occurs, the concert is definitely cancelled, and some think the band should play over the season or render a certain number of concerts. If the Council treats the 57th Band with proper consideration, there is no doubt that it will endeavour to render as good service as possible.

THE BITTERNESS arising in Canada over the language question is largely due to the Liberal politicians, who are trying to hive Quebec against Borden and may succeed in doing it. It will be a grave misfortune for both, and belies the no race-and-creed cry of a few years ago.

ONE of the most interesting things possible in this city would be to hear City Solicitor Gordon recount, after the arbitration appeal is made, the advantages and benefits Peterborough has received for the $300 spent on it.

THE GEM WE HAVE FOUND.
(Westminster Gazette.)

What shall we make of this thing, you and I,
Which has grown in our garden?
Shall we watch it, and prune it, tenderly nurse it
Till it reaches to heaven . . .
Or shall we destroy it?

What shall we say of this song we have heard
When the guns were least silent?
Shall we strain our ears for it, learn it and sing it,
Devise strange new chords for it . . .
Or shall we forget it?

What shall we do with this gem we have found
On the road to the trenches?
Set it deep in wise gold and make it our heart's pride,
Or let it lie in the mud
With the splinters of shells?

European Names.
(Detroit Tribune.)

Foreign geographical names often prove confusing to American readers, because each European country has a name of its own for each of its cities, rivers and other geographical features. Every other nation has a different name for the same thing. American geographies follow the English in their nomenclature, but often employ a different pronunciation.

For example, we call one Belgian city Antwerp, while the Belgians and French call it Anvers. We term another Belgian city Mechlin, while at home it is termed Malines. The river Meuse is pronounced in Belgium and France very nearly as we would pronounce it, while the Germans pronounce it as if it were spelled Moysay, and the people of the Netherlands call it the Maas. Brussels is spelled Bruxelles at home, and the final s is not pronounced. Dendermonde, on the river Dender, is pronounced Dandermond by its inhabitants, but it is known as Termonde in most of the geographies. Aalst is also spelled Alost. Louvain is Leuven at home. Vienna is Wien, and Ghent is Gand.

So one might go down the line. It is to be hoped that some day the geographical societies will get together and agree upon a nomenclature that will be universally adopted.

FAIR PLAY.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I read in your paper the other night where a "Rate Payer" gave the Army Band a very mean slur, which I don't think they deserve. In regards to the 57th band playing on all occasions. Why our brave boys went away to Kingston and Belleville without even the drum of the 57th band to play them off, I guess they must have been sick or had cold feet, for none showed up that I could see. Yet they play on all occasions.

I must say I am glad we have a band that we can listen to in the park this year. At one time we had a very nice 57th band. Where has it gone? We hardly ever hear it play now adays, yet when there is any money to be given away to bands, the 57th band is right there Johnny on the spot for cash.

It's all very well, let the Army band play if they like for nothing (for as we all know they never charge). They're a credit to our city, and well worth any money any one does fit to give them.

I love to hear the Army band play for they know how.

CAMELS IN WAR.

Tamerlane Made a Curious Use of Them at Delhi.

The camel has for centuries figured in the warfare of the east. History contains no more interesting example of the use of camels than that devised by the conqueror Tamerlane. This warrior, born in the summer of 1336, son of a humble Asiatic chieftain, rose by the sharpness of wit and strength of arm to be master of twenty-seven kingdoms extending from what is now the region of Moscow clear through India. Tamerlane was a terrible figure and a mighty warrior. In those days men fought with brute force rather than with engines of war. The sword was the chief weapon of offense.

After a mighty struggle Tamerlane made himself potentate over the immediate nations of Asia and gave to the city of Samarkand a brilliant place in history. One by one the Asiatic sultans came under his sway. India was the rich prize, and against it Tamerlane determined to move. This was in 1398. With his host he crossed the Indus, marched to Delhi and stood in arms before the gates. The Indian sultan, at the head of 50,000 soldiers and a herd of elephants, whose tusks bore poisoned swords, rushed upon the invaders. Tamerlane was sore pressed, and the battle might have gone against him had he not fallen back on his camels. Hastily gathering a troop of the beasts, he had them loaded with hay. Then, setting the hay on fire, Tamerlane's soldiers stampeded the camels toward the ranks of the Indians. The elephants, at the sight of the blazing hay, wheeled round and fled in terror, scattering the Indian sultan's army and insuring the success of Tamerlane.—Strand Magazine.

A Singular Marriage Feast.

Polynesia is probably the only place in the world where the marriage feast takes place without the presence of the bridegroom. For some unexplained reason the young man is "sent into the bush" when the bride becomes a member of his family, and he invariably remains there during the subsequent festivities. It is only when the guests have departed and the girl is left alone with her parents that messengers are dispatched for him.

To make beeswax place comb in a coarse muslin bag and put a small stone to weight the contents; put in kettle, cover with water and boil. The wax comes to the top of the water, and the sediment remains in the bottom of the kettle. Remove wax when cold.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THOSE enthusiastic ones who believe that the past is as dead as a busted boom ought to try running for office.

Society must look like a literal garden, there are so many bright young buds and fresh young sprigs in it.

The difficulty with most of us is that we find it so hard to tell the real trouble from the imaginary.

When the briber comes around all interested persons should feel and see if their good reputation is on straight.

Some people eat more than is good for them. That is perhaps why others eat less than is good for them.

Getting even is a heap easier than staying that way, though.

Being satisfied with yourself is certainly standing by your colors.

Don't lose an opportunity nor hunt for an owner when you find one.

Politeness is a virtue that ought to be highly cultivated at home.

Realism.

The man who sees things as they are,
Not as they ought to be,
Whose vision is not tangled up,
Whose mind from myths is free,
When starting on some special tack
Before he has commenced
He very clearly understands
What he is up against.

It is not fair and airy dreams
That make the world go round.
The master builders are the ones
Whose feet are on the ground.
Though splendid castles in the air
Your idle efforts crown,
You cannot move the family in
And calmly settle down.

Imagining that black is white
Will not remove the speck
Upon the collar that surrounds
Your small and shapely neck.
Nor does it buy you bread and cheese
Or get you anywhere
To think for three hours at a stretch
You are a millionaire.

The man who sees things as they are
May have beneath his hat
Less rosy prospects, but he knows
Exactly where he's at.
He passes all illusions up
Without regrets or sighs,
Nor does he stop to take a shot
At folly as it flies.

The Wretch.

"How can you say such things to me?"
"Easily."
"But I know that you are a kind hearted girl."
"True, but I am taking treatment for the difficulty."

Unquestionable.

"Are you sure that this is real butter?"
"Certainly."
"There can be no mistake about it?"
"None whatever. Don't you see that it has the butterfly stamp on it?"

A Real Necessity.

"Why do you worry so over your son?"
"Why?"
"Yes."
"Well, I have to worry over something, don't I?"

Answered the Description.

"What is this seat of trouble I hear so much about?"
"What does it look like?"
"I don't know."
"Must be the judge's chair."

China.

"She is always making a break."
"Who?"
"Our new maid."

Hard to Believe.

"You know the star in real life?"
"Oh, very well."
"How does he act when he is off the stage?"
"Worse, if possible."

Temptation.

"And you never told a lie, madam?"
"Never."
"How old are you?"
"Do you want me to break the record now?"

Waiting For the Tumble.

"Bought your flying machine yet?"
"No; they are too high."
"That is their nature."
"I think if I watch around they will be down."

Would Seem Natural.

"He never writes to us."
"What is his business?"
"He is a fisherman."
"It ought to be easy for him to drop a line."

Impossible.

"She looks happy."
"But I happen to know she is wearing her last year's hat."

Defined.

"What is a chorus girl, anyway?"
"One of the 'me too' variety."

Look For Money

There's more good money, madam, just going to waste right out there in that old storeroom of yours and down in the basement locker where they put "those old things you had no room for" than you have any idea of. How would you like a brand new, crinkly $10 bill for just part of it?

Here's what to do: If you have a good mirror—advertise it in the Want Ads of THE DAILY REVIEW. If you have curtains, carpets, even odds and ends—say so. Lamps, chairs, tables, porch furniture, stoves, heaters, irons, linens, bedding, beds, trunks, anything that can be used—for goodness sake list it. Make up a list, get it together, in as good shape as you can, and get it out where they see it all together, then put a Want Ad in THE DAILY REVIEW and get your money out of it. Use initials, numbers, or your address, as you please. Why waste useful articles or let them fall to pieces and be thrown out, when hundreds of people could use them to advantage in some way?

"I should have told you the other day, when I was speaking of 'Eddy's' Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an Indurated Fibreware Tub to hold your clothes, if you want to make a success of wash-day."

MRS. NEWLYWED says:
"I've heard of 'Eddy's' Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between fibre and wooden ware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece. It cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters, wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

Through His Nerves

A Duelist is Conquered by an Unskilled Antagonist

By MILLARD MALTBIE.

The old story of one girl and two lovers—there are infinite varieties of it. Usually one of the lovers is the villain of the plot, the other the hero. At first the villain has the advantage, but in the end virtue triumphs over vice. This is a tale of one girl with two lovers, both of whom are noble young men, one of them possessing an extraordinary nerve.

It is now more than half a century since a family of Americans named Wentworth made a tour abroad. Vivien Wentworth was then a girl of nineteen and considered by all who knew her a lovely girl. She had been brought up in seclusion and had therefore not received much attention from young men. The visiting of new and to her strange countries at a time when few Americans went to Europe naturally produced upon her a marked impression. Being of an artistic temperament, she enjoyed especially the works of art to be found in Europe and while in Rome had a special advantage in being shown through the marvelous collection of art treasures in the Vatican by a young French artist named Armand Trudeau.

This young man was especially fitted by nature to captivate a young girl of an ideal makeup. He was very handsome, with large, dreamy eyes, a high forehead and an olive complexion. He gave great promise as an artist and wrote very clever verses. He soon won his way into Vivien's affections, though he was opposed by her parents, who did not wish her to marry a foreigner.

So the matter stood when Egbert Kenworthy, an American of an entirely different type from Trudeau, appeared in Rome and made the acquaintance of the Wentworths. While Trudeau's face might have served for a model of St. Sebastian, Kenworthy's would have made an admirable David. He was the son of a New York banker and was taking an outing previous to entering his father's counting room.

These two men became rivals for the hand of Miss Wentworth. Kenworthy upon entering the list did not know that an attachment had already sprung up between her and Trudeau. The latter, being opposed by Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth, after devoting himself to Vivien for a few weeks dawdling through the galleries, ceased his attentions.

It was at this time that Kenworthy appeared on the scene. He was given every encouragement by the parents of the girl he wished to win and not long after his meeting with Vivien proposed to her. She accepted him, but with a frank avowal that she preferred Trudeau.

Kenworthy, though he had met the disappointment of his life, declined to ask her father for her, contrary to her wishes. He at once withdrew his attentions and left Rome. Then Vivien's parents, being convinced that her heart was fixed upon the artist, consented to the match, and the couple became engaged.

The warm season in Italy was now approaching, and it was decided by the Wentworths to go to Paris and accept an invitation to visit Trudeau's family at their chateau not far distant from the capital. Trudeau was to accompany them. They found his relatives to be eminently refined and were greatly pleased with the intended connection.

But the marriage was destined not to take place.

At that time there was in Paris Jules Chartier, one of those duelists of the earlier part of the nineteenth century each of whom tried to make a longer list of victims according to the code duello than any of his predecessors. These persons have disappeared, and dueling is now only practiced in France by those who consider that they have a cause, and even these expect only a little bloodletting.

A painting of Trudeau's was hung in the salon. One day when the artist was present chatting with friends who were admiring his work Chartier stopped before it and began to ridicule it. Trudeau flushed and made a remark ironical to the critic's knowledge of art. Chartier lightly slapped the artist on the cheek.

It seems strange that a system which justified murder should ever have prevailed. The insult, which was given publicly, forced Trudeau to challenge the man who had slapped him or be forever tabooed by his associates. He had no skill whatever with any weapon, and the affair must result in his being vanquished and probably killed. He knew that he must suffer death and wished to bid a last farewell to his fiancee. But this was not permitted. She might take measures to prevent his fighting and thus disgrace him.

The morning after the insult Trudeau and Chartier met in the Bois de Boulogne, and the latter added one more name to the list of men he had killed. Trudeau's death was a great shock to Vivien Wentworth. Her parents took her away from Paris at once to Switzerland, for the hot season was on, and the mountain air was considered best for the stricken girl.

In September Kenworthy reached Paris on his way to America. There he happened to hear that a young artist named Trudeau had been killed in a duel and, on inquiry, that Bertha Townsend had lost her betrothed. He gathered all the information possible concerning the affair, and it was plain to him that his rival, or, rather, the man who had prevented him from winning Vivien Wentworth's love, had been murdered. Furthermore, he was told that Chartier was invulnerable. He was an expert with every weapon, from the dirk to the claymore, from the derringer to the rifle.

"No one," said Kenworthy's informant, "can hope to conquer Chartier except through his nerve. Naturally he is a coward. It is the certainty that his skill will protect him and enable him to kill his opponent that keeps him cutting notches on the cane which bears the number of his victims. Nevertheless he has splendid nerve, and, this being the only possible avenue through which to attack him, he is liable to die a natural death in his bed."

Kenworthy dwelt on this statement a long while—a man with splendid nerve, whom an enemy could hope to attack only through that nerve. How might the nerve be attacked? He learned that Chartier, like most Frenchmen, had been born a Roman Catholic, though he had never been to mass or confession since his boyhood. Kenworthy went to a priest and submitted a plan for bringing Chartier back into the fold, but, if this were not practicable, to prevent his committing any more murders.

The priest sought the duelist and tried to convince him of the heinousness of his crimes. Chartier was unmoved. After expending upon him all the persuasive eloquence he possessed without avail the priest said to him:

"Be it so. I leave you to your fate, for no man who practices deliberate murder as you do can come to any good end. Beware and repent before it is too late. If you do not, God's wrath will surely smite you."

For the first time during the interview Chartier winced. The father left him without another word, and the duelist sat for some time lost in thought. Then he took up the cane on which he kept the record of his victims. There were twenty notches. He cut one more, saying to himself:

"I will make good this last notch; then I will retire on my laurels."

That evening Chartier dined at a cafe where he was used to taking his meals. He had few friends and dined alone. A young man entered the cafe and took a seat at a table where he faced the duelist, fixing a calm, resolute look upon him. Chartier endured it for a time, then said in the usual icy tone he used in beginning an affair:

"Monsieur, I appear to interest you."

"You certainly do, since I represent your victims," said the man in broken French.

Chartier started.

"I am commissioned by your last victim, Armand Trudeau, to avenge him," continued the stranger.

Recovering himself sufficiently to retain his outward coolness, Chartier said: "I do not wish to be disturbed at my dinner. Please let me have your card and a friend of mine will call on you."

"What for, monsieur?"

"To arrange a meeting between us."

"There is no necessity to arrange a meeting. I will meet you on the ground where you killed Armand Trudeau at 6 tomorrow morning. You shall have your friends with you and choose the weapons you prefer. As for me, I need no human assistance."

Chartier looked at the man in wonder. He would have no seconds, would leave the choice of weapons to his enemy. What did it mean? He nodded an assent and went on with his dinner. The stranger continued to stare at him. Finally when Chartier raised a glass of wine to his lips his hand trembled. As soon as he had finished his dinner, making an effort to appear unconcerned, he arose from the table.

"Adieu till tomorrow, monsieur."

In the morning Chartier arrived with his seconds bearing rapiers. While he was waiting for his antagonist a carriage drove up, and his enemy alighted. There was on his face a look of cool resolution, indicating that he had no fear whatever for the result. Being given a rapier and his enemy another the two faced each other, and the encounter began.

The stranger showed himself only a fair fencer. He kept his eye on that of his antagonist, as is customary with fencers, and it produced an effect. Chartier astonished his seconds by his weak thrusts, his almost unsuccessful defense. Under the influence of his antagonist's eye he grew weaker, more defenseless, till at last the stranger, taking advantage of his mental condition, ran him through the heart.

"Gentlemen," said the man who had killed him, "it no longer serves my purpose to remain incognito. Here is my card."

The name on it was Egbert Kenworthy.

A year passed before Vivien Wentworth met the man who had avenged her. Shortly before their meeting she heard who killed Chartier and sent for him.

It was a singular meeting between the bereaved girl and the man who avenged her. Kenworthy stood waiting for her to speak. Several times she essayed to do so, but either she could not frame in words what she felt in her heart or her tongue refused to utter them. At last she held out her hand to him, and at the same time all she felt was expressed in her features with far more intensity than words could have given it. Kenworthy sprang forward, seized it and covered it with kisses.

Miss McCalmont, Efficiency Expert in Regard to Hospitals.

MISS MABEL M'CALMONT.

Miss Mabel E. McCalmont is a hospital consultant. She has a home in Brooklyn, a registration address in California, and she works wherever her commissions take her. She received her diploma as a trained nurse from the National Homeopathic hospital in Washington. Later she became superintendent of St. Luke's hospital in Baltimore. It was while she was in Baltimore that she met a director in Philippine health affairs, who persuaded her to go to Manila.

In 1908 she took the civil service examination and became superintendent of the Civil hospital in Manila, as well as supervising nurse of the board of health. This work led to the position of chief of the division of hospital construction and equipment. She returned to New York in 1911. She had seen—what numbers of the public are constantly hearing referred to—the waste of money and materials and the inefficient management in hospitals. Having been "on the inside," she knew just how difficult a perfect organization is to effect. Thus her plan: Why not create the position of one, with practical experience, whose time may be devoted entirely to solving the problems of hospitals effectively?

Thus it was she originated the profession of which she is the sole feminine member, that of consulting expert in regard to hospitals. She has frequently given advice of the highest value in the case of hospitals seeking to secure more economical and efficient service.

CHIC DANCE GOWN.

Coquettish Flounced Creation Shown Among Spring Models.

The frilled or flounced frock is conspicuous among the models which fashionable modistes are pushing for spring.

NET DANCE DRESS.

Frills are of various sizes, but those of moderate width seem most popular.

A dance frock of black satin is illustrated here. The skirt is draped with a series of black net flounces edged with velvet. The long waisted bodice of black velvet is softly wrinkled, with low placed velvet flowers and shoulder straps of large jet beads.

Substitute For Butter.

Olive oil as a substitute for butter is responsible for the delicious flavor of many French and Italian dishes. The American housewife who experiments with oil as a butter substitute in cooking finds that it has many advantages. It does not burn as quickly as butter and therefore does not require so careful watching. It also lends a rich flavor which cannot be secured in any other way.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, March 23.—Reports of widespread danger from Hessian fly made wheat run up in price today, notwithstanding a tumble at the start. The market closed strong, 2½c to 3¼c above last night. Other leading staples, too, all scored net gains—corn ⅝c to ¾c, oats ⅛c to ⅜c and provisions 5c to 12½c.

Export demand, which of late has seemed on the wane, revived today when the wheat market began to bulge. The foreign buying, mostly at the seaboard, was said to aggregate 1,250,000 bushels. There were also reports that Minnesota millers had refused big orders for flour, and that Argentine wheat shipments turned to be of unlooked for poor quality. On the other hand, lower cable quotations had much to do with an early downturn in prices here, and so, moreover, did the fine weather, auspicious for the progress of the American winter crop.

Corn swayed with wheat. Trade was almost wholly of a local character.

Oats manifested firmness thruout the day. There were signs of an active cash demand from the seaboard.

Provisions rallied on account of covering by shorts. At first, however, the market was depressed owing to a sag in the price of hogs.

There was a good trade in stockers and feeders at firm values, of which our sales given below will show.

Veal calves sold at firm prices as there was a scarcity of them.

Sheep and lambs, of which there was a very light delivery, sold at firm values.

The hog market was reported from 10 to 15 cents per cwt. lower.

There was a good demand for choice cows, and prices ranged from $75 to $95 for good to choice, while common and medium sold at $45 to $65 each.

Means Newer Palestine.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Through missionary channels there reached this country from England reports that a definite understanding among the allies exists concerning Palestine in the event of the fall of the Turkish power, and concerning the mosque of St. Sophie in case Constantinople be taken. It is reported that British capitalists are looking to the modernization of the Holy Land with a view to making it a convenient place to visit.

BELGIANS ADVANCE ON RIGHT BANK OF THE YSER

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 24. — (Afternoon Official Statement) — "One division of the Belgian army has made progress on the right bank of the Yser; another has captured a German trench on the left bank.

"At Hartmanns Weilerkopf we captured a first line of trenches referred to last night, and a second line. We also catured some prisoners."

Suspect is Arrested

The party whom the local police and Canadian Express Company were warned to watch out for has been arrested in Hespeler as a suspicious character. It is alleged that he was attempting to raise money orders around the country.

He travels under various aliases such as Freeman, Henry Allan, A. Wagner, and A. Grey.

The modus operandi was simple. In three known cases the man purchased three money orders, one in Dundas and two at Brantford. The one bought in Dundas he cashed in Brantford and the two bought in Brantford were cashed in Welland and Thorold respectively.

His method was to buy a money order for 5 cents or thereabouts, make it payable to some newspaper as if for a subscription. He would then erase the names with acid, fill in the full $5 allowed by the slip in the margin and cash it, thus reaping the difference.

"A NIGHT OUT" AT THE ROYAL THEATRE

Few "movie" fans are unfamiliar with that screamingly funny comedian, Charles Chaplin. To see him at the zenith of his career one should drop into the Royal Theatre and watch him in a two-reel comedy film, "A Night Out," a recent release that has all his previous successes eclipsed. It is one continuous laugh, tracing the adventures of Chaplin and his pal during a rollicking celebration in such a ridiculously ludicrous manner that the most refined could not fail but be convulsed. It will be on today and tomorrow.

Mr. Hiram Williams of Hamilton has received word that his brother, who enlisted at Oakville, has been wounded at the front.

Port Arthur.—Attack began July 30, 1904; Stoessel surrendered Jan. 2, 1905; length of siege, 156 days. The Russian garrison numbered 47,000, the Japanese besiegers 120,000. Losses: Russians, 23,000 prisoners; the Japanese, 92,000.

Paris.—Attack began Sept. 19th, 1870; city surrendered Jan. 28, 1871. Time, 131 days. The French defenders numbered 88,000 regular troops with about 122,000 volunteers. The German besiegers numbered more than 250,000.

Sebastopol.—Attack began Oct. 17, 1854; siege ended Sept. 9, 1855. time 327 days. The Russian defenders numbered 170,000; the allied attacking force of British, French, Sardinians and Turks, 174,000. Losses, 102,620; allies, 70,000.

FEEDING THE BABIES.

Paris—The war has not interfered to the slightest extent with the nourishment of babies at Paris. Professor Pinard has just reported to the Academy of Medicine that with the opening of hostilities and that with the taking precautions for insuring the food supply of Paris, especial measures were taken to make certain that the food elements for babies should not be lacking either in quality or quantity. So successful have these measures been that the infant mortality during the seven months of the war has been less than it was in either of the two preceding years.

John Freeman, a member of the third contingent, and Violet Parcels, of Havelock, were arrested at Port Hope shortly after being married. It is alleged the girl is under age and did not have her parents' consent to marry.

Colonial Office Announces Order Has Been Restored

FIVE RIOTERS SHOT

LONDON, March 24.—The British Colonial Office last evening gave out a statement dealing with the situation at Singapore, where recently there was a mutiny among the Indian troops. The statement read:

"All messages from Singapore since the last notification show a restoration of normal conditions. Of those who took part in the recent riot all except eleven have now surrendered, have been captured or have lost their lives.

"Five rioters have been shot after trial by a summary general court-martial. One has been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment and seven to one year's imprisonment each.

"During the rioting seventeen German prisoners escaped. Of these six have been recaptured. The conduct of the remainder of the German prisoners was exemplary."

New Torpedo Invented.

CALGARY, March 24.—A. E. Knowles, of Coleman, Alta., is seeking a patent through a Montreal firm of patent attorneys for something new in torpedoes, and also a device for protecting ships against torpedo attacks. The new torpedo, he believes, will eclipse in destructibility anything of that nature yet invented.

Bismarck Centenary Cancelled.

LONDON, March 24.—Emperor William has decided to cancel the celebrations planned for April 1 to commemorate the centenary of Bismarck's birth, on the ground that present conditions make such a celebration unsuitable, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph and Amsterdam.

A Berlin despatch, the correspondent adds, asserts that Emperor William and the members of the German Government will place wreaths on Bismarck's monument in the Tiergarten in Berlin, but that there will be no banquets, speeches or singing.

Delay In Horn Case.

BOSTON, Me., March 24.—It is not expected that the extradition proceedings against Werner Horn, German dynamiter, be pressed until the case against Horn for illegal interstate transportation of explosives is disposed of in the Federal Court here.

An agent of the Canadian Government visited Wm. A. Hayes, jr., U. S. Commissioner, yesterday in connection with the case.

Big Guns for Russia.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 24.—Eighteen log-range guns of American make, consigned to the Russian army by way of Vladivostok, are at Vancouver awaiting shipment, according to advices received here yesterday. At Seattle, Tacoma and Vancouver 384 traction automobiles, also for the Russian army, are awaiting ships.

Bulgaria Takes Precautions.

LONDON, March 24.—King Ferdinand of Bulgaria yesterday held a two hours' interview with M. Malinoff, the Democratic leader, says The Daily Mail's Bucharest correspondent. The subject discussed was the forming of a coalition cabinet in the event of Bulgaria departing from her policy of neutrality. Later M. Malinoff had a conference with Premier Radoslavoff.

Italians Fortify Islands.

OVER 120,000 MEN AND OFFICERS WERE TAKEN

Extent of Russian Victory Comes as a Surprise—Defenders of City Did Not Know That They Faced Starvation Until the End of January—Allies Win in Artillery Exploit at Nieuport.

LONDON, March 24.—The official report of the number of prisoners captured after the fall of Przemysl came as a great surprise. The enormous haul of nearly 120,000 officers and men is a great blow to the enemy, and Berlin does not attempt to hide its chagrin at this climax to a series of reverses in the eastern arena.

It is reported that nearly a quarter of the garrison had suffered with typhoid and scurvy. Although the rations were growing more and more limited, none but a few of the higher officers, up to the end of January, knew that actual starvation was impending. The real condition of affairs was learned by the troops when an aviator, who was starting with messages for Vienna, was shot down by the Russians and fell within the defender's lines. After that there was much grumbling in the garrison, and almost a mutiny. Some of the Austrians slipped through the lines at night and surrendered to the Russians.

The investing Russian forces increased the intensity of their bombardment and the strain on the defenders began to tell more rapidly during February. Many were rendered insane by privations and disease. They filled every available place, but were without medical attention. The death list was very high.

Civilian inhabitants who were unable to escape when the siege began, swarmed about the forts begging for food and refuge, but the commandant was unable to care for them. The death of two prominent generals in February from typhoid tended to weaken the determination of Gen. von Kusmanck, commander of the fortress.

By the end of February actual famine prevailed; scarcely a living animal was left. For weeks virtually the only sustenance was obtained from small supplies of concentrated foodstuffs brought by aeroplanes.

A council of officers daily considered the situation, but not until they were convinced that there was no hope or help from an Austrian relief column did they reach the decision to surrender.

Artillery Routs Observers.

Nieuport, Belgium, was the scene of an allied artillery triumph yesterday. Several German observation points and points of support were bombarded by heavy guns and their occupants put to flight.

A German trench was captured and destroyed near Carency, northeast of Arras, and the survivors made prisoners.

The French generals have strengthened their artillery force at Soissons with long range guns, and when the Germans made a fresh attempt to bombard the town the French gunners opened on the enemy batteries with so heavy and accurate a fire that the enemy was forced to desist almost immediately.

The Germans confined their operations in the Champagne region to a bombardment of the positions that they recently lost to the French. They sprayed a French trench with an inflammable liquid at Vauquevois, near the church, and the French troops had to retreat a few yards.

Two attacks of the enemy on Les Eparges were defeated.

The French captured a line of trenches and a blockhouse at Hartmanns-Wellerkopf, in Alsace.

FAIRS TO GET FULL GRANTS

Main Estimates in Legislature Provide Usual Sums

TORONTO, March 24.—The Ontario Legislature is nearly through with the consideration of estimates. When the main set for the next fiscal year was brought down yesterday, involving an expenditure of $9,738,236, the financial statements of the year closed. There is here also a slight decrease on the vote of last year. One significant feature is that fall fairs will receive their full grant as usual, $75,000 being put aside for this purpose.

The current expenditure for 1915-16 is provided for to the extent of $8,695,836; capital account, $958,000; sundries, $84,000.

Government House gains a revote of $100,000 and $150,000 each goes to the Guelph farm and the Whitby institution. The Industrial farm at Sudbury gets a vote of $40,000, Fort William $30,000, and the same amount is given to the preliminary work of the good roads commission.

The sum of $10,000 is provided for a monument to Sir James Whitney; $100,000 for fish fry for restocking Ontario waters, $2,400 for a fire marshal, and $100,000 for the Hydro Commission.

LEGISLATION ADVANCED.

Seed Grain Bill and Bank Act Changes Pass Resolution Stage.

OTTAWA, March 24.—The House yesterday passed through the resolution stage the legislation of the Government providing for the distribution of seed grain to farmers in the prairie provinces, passed Finance Minister White's bill amending the Bank Act so as to permit chartered banks to loan money to farmers for the purchase of seed grain secured by a lien upon the crops to be grown therefrom and devoted several hours in committee to supply to the estimates of the Postoffice Department.

When Mr. White's bill was under consideration W. F. Maclean (South York), R. B. Bennett (Calgary), and W. M. Martin (Regina) discussed the financial situation and suggested reform in banking and currency legislation. Mr. Maclean favored the establishment of a national bank of issue and rediscount, the substitution of national currency for bank notes and the establishment of smaller local banks throughout the country. Mr. Bennett argued that the banks did not receive sufficient money from their depositors to meet the demands made upon them.

Postmaster-General Casgrain, when his estimates were under review, dwelt upon the increase in the rural free mail delivery service, and made a brief statement respecting the parcel post system, which he said so far had been most successful in and about Toronto.

The special committee appointed to revise and amend the Election Act will probably report to the House today about enfranchising the soldiers and sailors of Canada. The bill will be introduced to permit volunteers in Canada to vote by proxy. The soldiers at the front will mark their ballots for either party's nominee or for an independent candidate and have them mailed to the proper returning officers without waiting for the official nominations.

OWEN SOUND BOY IS SLAIN

Young Englishman is Arrested on Charge of Murder

OWEN SOUND, Ont., March 24.—A brutal murder took place about two miles out of town, in the adjoining Township of Derby, last night about nine o'clock. The victim was John Edward Nicholson, aged 12, son of Edward Nicholson, teamster for the North American Bent Chair Co. Herbert Thackeray King is arrested on suspicion of slaying the boy.

King, it is said, asked the lad to go with him on a drive, with the promise of a shilling if he would hold the horse. An hour later the barns and piggeries of William King, a brother of the prisoner, were found to be ablaze, and people in the vicinity who went out to see what was the cause of the illumination found the body of young Nicholson on the roadside stabbed through the back.

Coroner Dr. Dow was notified, went out, and ordered the removal of the remains to town. King drove back to the livery stable where he got the vehicle, and asked for a faster horse to make another trip, but was not given a change of animals. At 11 o'clock Police Constable Thomas Carson, who had been notified, arrested King on the street.

The prisoner was turned away from his brother's home some time ago. Coming into town he was arrested as a vagrant and was let go on promising to enlist. He enlisted, but was discharged as an undesirable. He is said to have threatened when turned out by his brother to do something that would cause a sensation, including the shooting of his brother and the latter's son, against whom he displayed animosity. Several shots were heard by neighbors when the fire was discovered.

VILLAGES ARE BURNED.

All But Three In Northeast Persian District Destroyed.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The Persian war relief committee with headquarters in this city yesterday received the following cablegram from Tiflis, Russia:

"All villages burned except three. Two Christian quarters of Urumiah plundered and a great many people killed. Women taken captives. Fifteen thousand refugees in the American mission. Great danger.

"The French mission has been destroyed. There are 10,000 refugees in Russia."

The message was signed by Astanoff, a Russian contractor in Tiflis.

Urumiah is in northwest Persia not far distant from the Russian border.

Dr. Clark's Son a Hero.

OTTAWA, March 24.—Dr. Michael Clark, M.P., of Red Deer received through the Militia Department yesterday a letter from the officer commanding the squad of fifty Princess Patricias in their charge upon and capture of German trenches in Belgium, congratulating him upon the "gallant and soldierly conduct" of his son, James A. Clark, who took part in the brilliant action.

Accompanying the message were congratulations also from Maj.-Gen. Hughes. Young Clark came through unscathed.

MAJOR GAULT TO COMMAND

Organizer of Patricias Succeeds Late Col. Farquhar

MORE DETAILS FROM NEUVE CHAPELLE

LONDON, March 24.—Major Hamilton Gault is returning to the front next week to take command of the regiment in place of Col. Farquhar, who was killed on Sunday night. The Princess Patricia Regiment, which for three months has been in heavy fighting in France, including several bayonet charges, again won distinction on the day following the fight and famous British victory at Neuve Chapelle. On that day the regiment was forced to relinquish a trench owing to a fierce German counter-attack, when the enemy tried desperately to recover lost ground in a great general advance. But the Canadian regiment a few hours later recaptured their lost position by plucky fighting, and succeeded in driving the Prussians from two of their own trenches which they had been holding for months.

OTTAWA, March 24.—The following casualties were given out last night from the Militia Department:

ROUTED AT SUEZ

Turkish Forces Are Badly Beaten

LONDON, March 24.—A statement was given out by the press bureau last evening telling of a defeat inflicted on a Turkish force operating against the Egyptian town of Suez. The statement says:

"On the 22nd inst., at dawn, one of our patrols discovered a party of the enemy near Elkubri Post, opposite Suez. Shots were exchanged.

"Aeroplanes estimated the number at about 1,000, composed of infantry, artillery and a few cavalry.

"The guns at Elkubri opened fire and inflicted casualties, whereupon the enemy retired and formed a camp eight miles east of the Suez Canal.

"Early this morning, the 23rd inst., a force under Gen. Sir G. Younghusband attacked and routed the enemy, who is now in full retreat.

"A prisoner says this force came direct from Bir El Saba, having taken twelve days en route, and that Gen. von Traumer and three other German officers were with it."

Liquor Posters Banned.

CHICAGO, March 24.—The Poster Advertising Co. of the United States and Canada has placed a ban on the advertisement of whisky and other spirituous liquors, it was learned here yesterday. Beer and wines are not included.

No new contracts will be entered into with whisky concerns after May 31, and no whisky advertisements will be posted after this year, according to the resolution.

Kaiser Fears For Koenigsberg.

GENEVA, March 24.—(Via Paris.)—The German Emperor has ordered the removal to Berlin of valuable paintings and tapestries from his mountain castle at Koenigsberg, on the Alsatian side of the Vosges Mountains. Recently French aviators flew over the imperial summer residence, which formerly belonged to a king of France.

Seventeen Belgians Executed.

LONDON, March 24.—"Seventeen Belgians, most of whom were young peasants, were shot at daybreak yesterday in the Ghent barracks, after having been found guilty by a German court-martial of espionage in the interest of the allies," says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Amsterdam.

Summer cottages, situated on the St. Lawrence river, two miles west of Brockville, were rifled last week by thieves from Ogdensburg. Two of the thieves are under arrest. The cottages belong to Brockville people.

LICENSING TAKEN OUT OF POLITICS

PROMISES ARE FULFILLED

Important Legislation Introduced by Hon. W. J. Hanna Provides For a Non-Partizan Commission With Wide Powers to Administer Liquor Laws---No Alcohol Will be Served to Soldiers in Uniform.

TORONTO, March 24.—"What Sir James Whitney, when in Opposition, said he would do, and when in power attempted to do, that he would remove as far as possible the liquor traffic from the field of politics, has been carried out by the Hearst Government," said Hon. W. J. Hanna, in introducing the promised amendments to the liquor license law in the Legislature last night. What the Provincial Secretary described as a most important advance in temperance legislation in a quarter of a century was the proposal to appoint "a non-political provincial commission to administer the liquor license law in Ontario."

"The commission to be appointed will consist of probably five men of as high a class as the Government can select, who will be called upon to give all their time to the work and be paid a sum commensurate with the responsibility and duty they are asked to discharge. This commission," said Mr. Hanna, in explaining the provisions of the bill on introducing it for a first reading, "will have assigned to it responsibilities that are to-day assigned to and discharged by the Boards of Justice in England."

The commission will proceed to divide the province up into license districts, and place in charge of each an inspector who will receive a salary that will warrant him giving his whole time to the duties of that office. Under this new arrangement they would expect to have men comparatively competent, or competent in comparison with what they were today.

Considerable latitude is to be given the commission in regulating the hours of sale and number of licenses. The Provincial Secretary explained that the Government had decided not to interfere with the hours of sale in taverns until the commission had been in operation and would be in a position to make recommendations to the Government. The commission would have absolute power to shorten the hours of sale, to order the closing of bars in certain localities to meet local or special conditions and could move or transfer licenses as might be considered expedient. In the meantime, however, it was proposed to change the law in regard to shops, and after the first of May all shops in Ontario will be obliged to close at seven o'clock at night. Labor Day was also to be added to the days on which the sale of liquor is prohibited.

Continuing, Mr. Hanna said, that it would be futile to create such a commission and not give it authority to carry out its orders. Along with other provisions for law enforcement it is provided that the commission will have power to suspend or cancel a license, with the approval of the Government. Disobedience of the law or regulations will place any licensee at the entire mercy of the commission.

Along the line of enforcement, the law is to be strengthened. For infractions of the law by hotelkeepers the present penalty is a fine of $100 to $500. This will be changed and the minimum penalty will be $300. For a second offence the present law imposed a short term in jail with the option of a fine. This is to be changed to four months in jail without any option whatever.

Respect for the King's uniform is to be demanded. "We have a condition here that exists wherever the British flag flies," said Mr. Hanna. "We are at war. We have men in training for the front, and as a result of that we have decided in our bill to put in a clause that will mean that the men who wear the King's uniform shall not be served with liquor in any place licensed under the law of this province." This will continue for the duration of the war.

The remarks of the Provincial Secretary were received with much interest by a crowded House. He supported his reference to the restriction regarding soldiers by saying that the observations conducted by the Department all over the province had shown that in some sections where soldiers were gathered the hotelkeepers had voluntarily agreed to stop the sale of liquor to them, and he was assured that, although there might be arguments advanced against the provision, the large mass of the men would welcome the amendment.

Mr. Rowell said he would withhold his criticism until the second reading. He expressed disappointment because the bill, while making a radical change in administration did not touch the hours of sale or the number of licensed places beyond what was involved in shortening the hours of sale in shops and adding Labor Day to the prohibited list.

Mr. Hanna said that the commission would have in the exercise of its powers just such authority as he had referred to with regard to the Boards of Justice in England, who regulated not only hours of sale but the number of licensed places, and his hon. friend would find when he knew more of the working out of the proposal that there was in addition to the radical change in administration a great change in the law as well.

GOT BARGAIN IN GLASSES

OTTAWA, March 24.—M. C. Ellis, vice-president of the P. W. Ellis Co. of Toronto, told the public accounts committee of the Commons yesterday afternoon that Maj.-Gen. Hughes had acted in the country's interests in asking that firm to do the best it could to get binoculars for the Canadian contingents at as low a price as possible. Mr. Ellis said his firm had scoured the country and the United States for binoculars without saying what they were for, and as a result the binoculars cost between $39 and $40, while the British authorities had to pay a great deal higher price. The class of binoculars which he had purchased for the Government were selling at $55 each.

Mr. Ellis said his company made purchase in this manner to save money for the Canadian authorities. The total commission of his firm was $9,111, and out of that came the expenses.

Rheims—With the continual bombardment of Rheims by the Germans it has become utterly impossible to continue the school sessions in the regular school houses. The danger of these being at any moment struck by shells renders it impossible for the children to take the regular school courses. M. Interesting Story of a Visit to French Battleline — Much Value Placed on the Entanglements Before Trench — Loopholes Have Curtains

Below are extracts from a series of articles in the London Westminster Gazette by Philip Bussy, who made a 60-mile tour of the French trenches under Paris war office auspices.

Through the courtesy of the French etat-major, and under the guidance of Frenchh officers whose sole ambition seems to be to make it easy for the critic to observe and to study the methods and the performances of their forces in the field, I have been enabled to spend several days here in the French fighting line, moving from trench to trench, from battery to battery, and from position to position, seeing soldiers of all kinds and of all classes at work. The particular army that I visited is one that has covered itself with glory since the war began. It is the army of General Castelnau, that bore the brunt of the early fighting in Lorraine, and contributed more than its share to the general movement that ended the German advance from Mons and led up to the battle of the Marne.

In the centre of the district that it now occupies, twenty miles from the nearest trench, is a room from which, in the most businesslike and unromantic way possible, this particular portion of the great campaign is conducted. Enormous maps, with apparently meaningless marks, made upon them in red and blue pencil, cover a range of tables, and even overflow into a second room. A labyrinth of wires form a network beneath the ceiling—the terminals of wires that can be seen everywhere, lying in the furrows of ploughed fields, affixed to trees, or half hidden among growing crops—and the telephones to which they are attached are almost as numerous as the maps. A small table, serving as a writing desk, is littered with letters, memoranda, compasses, and reading glasses. On the blotting pad, when I was admitted, lay a pair of spectacles with extraordinarily large round lenses, and great rims of tortoiseshell. This is Castelnau's quartier-general.

Portrait of the General.

Castelnau was Joffre's chief of staff until the war broke out; and then the instant need of a general of outsanding ability to take command of the eastern frontier led him to relinquish his position to General Belin and to place himself at the head of the five army corps that were stationed about Nancy and Luneville. These frontier corps, being intended for work in "the lost provinces," were among the finest in the French army; and had it not been for the work that they and the reserve division did under his brilliant leadership it might have been impossible to hold the Germans in check at the Marne and then to commence the steady pressure that compelled them to give ground and saved Paris and France from further danger.

If the Bavarians had forced their way through Lorraine, as they threatened to do towards the end of August, the task of the French armies would have been made almost an impossible one; but Castelnau, it is fres of his army, told Joffre that he and his men had sworn that not a single German soldier should set foot in the Grand Couronne of Nancy—the commanding position that was to be held at all costs. And not a single German soldier did.

General Castelnau, as may be imagined, is regarded as something of a hero in France; but he is an intensely practical, businesslike little man, for all that. He had not more than half a dozen sentences for me when I was presented to him, but they were to the point. He assured me that I should be permitted to see everything that I wanted to see, and to say everything that I might wish to say that would not tend to handicap his army in its operations.

He was anxious, in fact, that the world should know the conditions under which his men were working, the fine spirit of confidence and of absolute cheerfulness that existed among them, and the great things that they had done and were still doing day after day, even when progress has become so limited and even valuable gains are of such small extent that the most familiar phrase in the official communique continues to be "rien de nouveau." And before I had passed out of the room he was back poring over his maps again.

Landscape Altered.

One of the strange and almost permanent memories that this war will leave behind it will be a long and practically continuous line of devastated town and villages and of broken ground marking the front along which for several months attack and defence have been allowed, to all intents and purposes, to counterbalance one another. Positions have changed hands, some of them several times, and are still in the heart of the fighting, as they were last Sep- up then as a temporary defence have up then as t temporary defence have been extended and developed until they have themselves become military villages, in which men are combining the life of the cave-dweller with that of the soldier. Land has been so altered that local identities are almost lost; and this scar running across the face of France from Dunkirk to the peak and valleys of the Vosges will take many years to heal.

A section of it that is typical lies eight or nine miles south of the Somme. A picturesque little village was shelled by the Germans last September. They were shelling it still the other day. Not a building was intact, except one small shop that the colonel, still wearing the uniform of the Alpine Chasseurs, although he was now in command of a fine Territorial regiment here, had made his headquarters. Mattresses that had been stuffed into the spaces where windows had been were torn to shreds. Shrapnel bullets and huge fragments of shell were lying thick among the ruins.

Network of Trenches.

Here, outside the village, are some of the remarkable networks of trenches that this long period of practically stationery warfare has produced. "The trenches" are not, as the civilian often imagines them to be, deep and elaborate cuts made in a linestretching from place to place, if not from frontier to frontier. They twist and twine, and break out unexpectedly in one direction or another, showing now one face to the enemy and now another. They have saps running forward—in one saphead recently, at a place that shall be nameless, I was within eighteen yards of the Germans in their own trench — and "boyaux" running backwards and from one to another. These trenches and their "bowels" (for the saps are different, and are easily distinguishable) form a maze in which anybody but a soldier who lives in them might easily and thoroughly lose himself. They are dug into the earth, and are strengthened with "gabions," or bottomless baskets, filled with clay, and with sacks of mould or of sand. Shelters and dwelling-places are built into them, as well as offices, and telephone exchanges, and such ordinary essentials of civilized life, and the humor that alone can relieve the monotony — or, rather, the tedium; the Germans prevent life from growing monotonous — gives names to the huts as well as to the winding passages in the trenches themselves.

The loop-holes in the trenches are no longer the simple, rough holes that were left in the early days of the war. It is true, no doubt, that the French learnt the art of trench-making from the enemy, and that we have learnt it from the French; but it begins to look as though the pupils were rapidly growing more proficient than their instructors. With enormous labour these French trenches are paved. Near any ruined building where the necessary materials are at hand, the pavement may be of loose bricks. More usually it is of logs of wood, laid close together, like small railway "sleepers," secured to long stakes laid flat at each end, or, failing the wood for this, rushes tied into bundles serve the purpose.

From this pavement there is a step up to the loopholes, and for these hundreds of thousands of heavy wooden boxes, shaped like wedges with the tops cut off, are being used. They are curtained too, for a few months of practise have made the snipers on each side dead shots and anything coming between the light and a loophole would make an easy mark when the trenches art not far apart. Here the two armies have dug their way to within forty yards of each other, and the range is short enough to be easy. An officer was calling my attention to an object before the German trenches were they came so close, and put up a periscope to bring it to bear on the object for me; but before he had succeeded the top corner of the periscope was shot off. Any incautious movement, in fact, suffices to bring a bullet, and the thud that it makes on the mud wall of the back of the trench, in the happy events of its having failed to hit anything more sensitive on the way, is like the noise of a much larger projectile. It is always followed, too, by a shower of minute particles of clay or sand, as the case may be, that it splashes out of the wall by the force of its impact.

Firing at Short Range.

This rifle-fire at very short range has one peculiarity that it is not easy to understand. The small size of the modern bullet and its very high velocity usually cause it to make so clean a wound that, unless it touches a bone or a vital organ, it acts as its own cautery and does no serious harm, but men in the trenches assure me that the wound made, even at 300 or 400 yards, by the little German bullet is a big tearing wound. Whether or not this is due to the nature of the bullet itself no doubt commissions of inquiry will decide, but there appears to be no doubt as to the fact. In trench fighting, of course, the successes of the sniper are not very many, but hardly a day passes at any point without a few.

The men know enough to be careful, but at the same time there is a horrible fascination about rifle-fire that must lead to accidents now and again. The fire of heavy guns provokes curiosity, and sometimes makes a man duck his head sharply when there is a mile of distance between him and harm. There is little danger, but almost invariably a feeling of danger, when shrapnel is bursting beneath an aeroplane that insists on hovering directly overhead. But rifle-fire is different.

The noise that a bullet makes as it goes away is loud and sharp, but the sound of a bullet coming towards you is a strange wail, in a wonderful minor key. A man, whether he has grown accustomed to it or not, listens for more; and then at any moment an accident may happen. It is easy to realize that a soldier, hearing firing in the distance, might be frightened to advance; but that a soldier actually under fire should have any feeling of fear seems almost incredible.

The Entanglements.

In front of the trenches come the entanglements; for a trench is no use as a protection against a bayonet attack in the dark unless there is some obstacle to stop the desperate rush of the enemy before he comes too close. This is another matter in which almost an incredible amount of labor — and all of it the labor of soldiers—is being employed. Fatigue parties are felling trees everywhere—the Algerians, especially, seem to take a delight in the exercise—and are fashioning them into battens for paving the trenches, logs for the trench-fires, and stakes for the entanglements. Where it is reasonably safe to venture outside the trenches stakes are driven into the ground at night, and wire—barbed wire, for preference, and often with empty tins fastened to it to give warning of any disturbance — is stretched from one to the other. When the rival armies are so close together, portable entanglements are made in lengths of five or six feet, and these are thrown out as the opportunity presents itself. This is being done, it must be remembered, over a front of some three hundred and fifty miles; and, bearing this in mind, I was not much astonished when the Colonel of a particular regiment mentioned to me quite casually that he himself had just sent in a requisition for another four hundred and fifty miles—of barbed wire!

At even a moderate distance these trenches are difficult to distinguish except in a country where a chalky soil discloses any recent disturbance. The mounds of earth thrown up soon lose their freshness and begin to harmonize with the land about them; and the entanglements are inconspicuous. The officers to whom a knowledge of the enemy's positions is of vital importance, however have made so careful a study of them that their knowledge of the geography of a German trench is almost as exact as their knowledge of the trench in which they are working. The enemy trenches appear on their maps, named or numbered, and the slightest alteration in them is noted with unfailing accuracy.

Distance Worked Out.

I was standing one morning behind a rugged breastwork that had once been the orchard wall of the farm of Attiches, on a height commanding the valley of the Oise, and showing many miles of the German positions. The commandant, who has for his headquarters a clear ten feet underground, vaulted with stone ("it is very cold in the mornings," he said, "but—one lives!"), and, installed at one end with his field telephone, was at great pains to point out to me the exact position of the nearest German trenches, not quite half a mile away; and my glasses failed to enable me to distinguish them. At last an expedient suggested itself to him. He sent a message to be telephoned to the nearest battery: "Tell them to drop four melinite shells in trenches A and C," the message ran. A couple of minutes later the first shell fell and raised a cloud of dense black smoke that showed its position exactly. He knew so precisely the spots that he had in his mind that he could indicate them at once; and his indication was one that the men behind the guns understood to perfection. How many German lives my desire for information had cost I did not attempt to guess.

Aboard a Submarine

The London Times recently described the difficulties that confront the officers and crew of a submarine during actual warfare. The captain of the submarine must lie in wait for his quarry with the nose of his boat pointing in the direction in which he expects the enemy's vessel to pass. Then he has to estimate the speed of the approaching ship and her distance and to fire his torpedo at the point at which he calculates she will have arrived when the torpedo has finished its run. Probably he will discharge another torpedo a few seconds later to make doubly sure.

In the discussion roused by the letter sent to the Times last June by Admiral Sir Percy Scott, Admiral Bacon, himself an expert and experienced handler of submarines, said: "If any of your readers wishes to appreciate some of the difficulties of submarine work let him sit down under a chart of the channel suspended from the ceiling, let him punch a hole through it and above the hole place a piece of looking glass inclined at forty-five degrees. Let him further imagine his chair and glass moving sideways as the effect of tide. Let him occasionally fill the room with steam to represent mist. Let him finally crumple the chart into ridges to represent the waves and then try to carry out some of the maneuvers that look so simple when the chart is spread out on the table and looked down upon in the quiet solitude of a well lit study."

CURLERS DID IT UP RIGHT

Wound up Curling Season With Smoker at Club Rooms

A fitting wind-up to the curling season was celebrated at the rink last night, when knights of the stane and besom gathered for a social evening. Herb Martin was chairman, and quite ably did he handle himself. Ray Best and Alex. Kay were other members of the social committee. Before the gathering broke up, R. M. Waddell and H. R. H. Kenner moved a vote of thanks to the committee and those who assisted in the program. No hesitancy was shown by the curlers in endorsing the sentiments of the motion.

Champ Clark never made a better speech than did Chairman Martin, as he welcomed the curlers and asked them to dig in and enjoy themselves. He was followed by Mayor Buller, who spoke in warm praise of the curling game and its followers. He wanted to see Peterborough made a curling centre. His Worship also hoped to see the day when his baby—hydro radials—would be extended through this part of the province, with Peterborough as the hub.

Cards were played to the accompaniment of music and song. Frank Clarke was on the job with his banjo and his ever famous Watermelon Song. His playing of "Tipperary" and other popular selections was enthusiastically received. Chris. Graham told some stories over which the curlers are still laughing, and Walter Fitzgerald, one of the young members of the curling club, contributed a clog dance. Charlie Seymour and Frank Clarke gave a violin and banjo duet, and Scottish songs were sung by Jim Wilson (not "Sunny Jim"). The experiences of Darius Green, a would-be airman, were recited by W. A. Logan. R. G. Sturgeon and son staged a few rounds of fencing. R. M. Waddell gave a recitation, and J. H. Smith of Hamilton, who is in the city on business, concluded the program with a short speech. The boxing bout between Archie Moore and George Stevenson did not materialize, both giving the excuse that their ring attire was still adorning the clothes-line.

All the piano accompaniments were played by Lawrence Maguire. R. G. Sturgeon loaned his piano and Victrola.

Frank ('Moose') Heffernan, the well-known hockey player, has shaken Toronto dust from his feet and gone to New York to live, says the Mail and Empire. His going away was unheralded, and only a few of his friends knew that he had left for the Great White Way to go into business with his brother, who has been a resident of New York for several years.

Heffernan was one of the best-known athletes around here, having played on the champion senior O. H. A. team for the last three years, captaining the T. R. and A. A team two years ago, when they won their second successive championship, and was also a member of the Victorias this season.

He was counted one of the best defence players in the O. H. A., and, while he is a little late this year in going to New York, should round out one of their teams next season. In the meantime he no doubt will be figuring on one of the amateur ball clubs, as he was a cracking good ball player, or he may take up lacrosse with the Brooklyn Crescents, as he was so proficient at this game four years ago that Sam Bilsky of Ottawa tried to sign him up for the Ottawa N. L. U. team.

DISPUTE OVER PAYMENT FOR

resumed Mr. Goodwill endeavored to have the depth limited to 100 feet but this did not meet the approval of the bench. He then held another consultation with his clients. The result was, as stated above, that the original agreement of "no water, no pay" will be carried out.

William Edwards, the plaintiff, when called to the box, testified that he was a well digger by trade, and in September last he commenced work for James Edwards, who resides on a farm in Otonabee owned by Mrs. H. Dickson of Peterborough. Work was commenced on an old well, but when a depth of thirty feet had been reached the casing broke and it was impossible to go any deeper. For his work on the old well he did not charge. James Edwards spoke of a new well, and asked him how deep he thought he would have to go to reach water. Witness told him maybe 30 or 35 feet, but he couldn't be sure. It might be 40 or 45 feet. The machine was moved and the new well commenced. When a depth of 38 feet was reached, James Edwards stated that he thought Mrs. Dickson should be consulted before any more drilling was done. Witness went to Mrs. Dickson and was told to drill a few feet deeper. He drilled nine feet more, and then James Edwards told him to stop as Mrs. Dickson might not pay for it, and he would not. The casing stood three feet above the surface of the earth, and witness told James Edwards it would be best to drill the three feet further instead of cutting it off. The three feet more were drilled and then the pump was put on. He pumped out two pails of water.

Cost of Drilling.

In answer to question from Mr. Gordon, witness said the cost of drilling a well is $2.00 per foot, and the pump was $23. In all, the bill was $123.50. When he went in to see Mrs. Dickson she said the cost was a trifle high, and he said he would call it settled if she paid him $100. She told him to return after James Edwards paid her the rent. He returned four times, but no one answered the door.

No Water, No Pay.

Examined by Mr. Goodwill, Edwards said he made the bargain of "No water, no pay," but they were to let him proceed till he was satisfied there was no water. In this case they stopped him. Some time after he drilled the well he came back to the farm and raised the casing up three feet to see if it would improve the flow of water. He pumped out a quantity of water on this occasion also.

Worked on Both Wells.

Henry Stokes gave testimony to the effect that he worked on the old well and the new well for the plaintiff. He was present when William Edwards and James Edwards spoke of starting a new well. After James came back from speaking to Mrs. Dickson, he told or rather pointed out to William Edwards just where about the well would be. Witness knew nothing as to price agreed upon. He and plaintiff boarded at James Edwards' home during the time they worked on the well. Stokes' evidence as to work on the new well corroborated William Edwards' evidence. He stated that he has been drilling wells for eleven or twelve years and never heard of the cost being less than two dollars per foot.

The Other Side.

James Edwards, one of the defendants, stated he was a tenant on a farm in Otonabee owned by Mrs. H. Dickson of Peterborough. He admitted employing William Edwards to work on the old well. When the work was a failure arrangements were made by which William Edwards would go on with work on the new well. Mrs. Dickson was to pay for it. William Edwards had told witness that his terms were "No water, no pay," that is if no water was secured, no pay for the work would be expected.

While the work on the new well was being executed witness went to the scene of activities on various occasions to find out how it was progressing. He denied making any bargain about the pump.

Examined by Mr. Gordon, witness said he was a tenant for the farm for seven years and knew a well was required. He spoke to Mrs. Dickson and she told him to go ahead and get the well dug. When the depth of 40 feet was reached a halt was caused and William Edwards went to see Mrs. Dickson. He (witness) said he wouldn't take a farm and go and see Mrs. Dickson as he expected a row. When all was ready for the pump, the pump arrived and witness helped to place it in position. The flow from the pump was by no means strong.

Mrs. Dickson, the defendant and owner of the farm on which James Edwards resides, testified that she was informed William Edwards was certain he could reach water at a depth of thirty or thirty-five feet. After forty feet was reached she was conferred with and it was agreed that William Edwards should drill a few more feet. She did not state how much deeper he was to drill. Later William Edwards came to her and said he had reached a depth of 54 feet. Edwards said it would make a good house pump but not a stock pump and as he was not satisfied, he would accept $100 for his labor.

In answer to Mr. Gordon, Mrs. Dickson said she was out on all the occasions when William Edwards called to see her and was not admitted. She did not know whether or not she would be willing to have Edwards continue the drilling at $2 per foot until he reached water or decided that he couldn't reach any.

When William Edwards called for his pay she told him she would see him when James Edwards paid her the rent in December. She received the rent but never paid Edwards.

Mr. O. Jones testified that the well is a poor one.

Jack Draper, son of Contractor William H. Draper, was seriously injured at Chatham at the Central School by the discharge of a rifle used at rifle practice in the basement.

Mrs. Burrington Ham to Address Y.W.C.A. Meetings

Mrs. Burrington Ham, Secretary of the Y.W.C.A. Immigration Department, at the port of Quebec, will be in Peterborough, Thursday, the 25th and Friday the 26th.

The striking growth of protective work done by Travellers' Aid workers of the Association is shown by the fact that the number of cases helped rose in over fifteen cities in the last four years, as follows: 7,000, 14,000, 27,000, 31,000.

In one year 2,796 girls and women received help from the one Y.W.C.A. port worker at Quebec. Her work may be roughly summarized as meeting ships, giving out pamphlets containing the addresses of Association homes throughout the country, also papers of warnings, writing special cards of introduction for newcomers, and sending lists to each city, of those girls who should be visited shortly after arrival.

Mrs. Ham will give an illustrated talk on Immigration Work at the local Y.W.C.A. Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

This meeting is open to both men and women. Mrs. Ham will also speak at the Association on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

BRIDE GOES HOME WITH PARENTS

Elopement and Wedding Bells Have Unexpected Finale

PORT HOPE, March 24. — Just as the sounds of the wedding bells had falded away, the bridal pair, John Freeman, a member of the third contingent here and Violet Parcels, of Campbellford, were placed under arrest. The bride eloped with Freeman last Saturday, arriving here in the afternoon. They took up their quarters at a local hotel. Her parents objected to the marriage and claim that the girl is not fourteen years of age. An officer from Campbellford took the pair back yesterday morning. After the ceremony it was discovered that the license had not been signed.

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

The matter published in this column will be supplied by the local Council of Women and in the interest of their work.

The executive of the National Council of Women held a meeting in Ottawa on March 11th and 12th. About twenty delegates were present including Mrs. Neal, president of the Local Council of Women. The hearing of the reports from many departments of work engaged in by the Local Council of Women, and animated discussions of the same were features of the two sessions. Public health immigration, impure literature in which patent medicine advertisemnts largely figured, and education were some of the reports dealt with.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Donnaught graced the morning session with her presence.

A deputation from the Council of Women introduced by Lady Laurier waited upon the Premier to urge the appointment of a Federal Commissioner to investigate and report upon the best means of caring for the feeble minded. Statistics were quoted by the various speakers for the commission showing a disturbing growth of feeble-minded people in the different provinces, and facts were cited to show that Canada is doing less to care for such unfortunate than most countries. The premier's reply was sympathetic.

The all-important subject of the care of the feeble-minded was the cause of an interesting discussion in which the following speakers took part: Prof. Carrie Derrick, Prof. of botany in McGill University; Dr. Helen McMurchy, and ex-Controller McCarthy of Toronto.

Prof. Derrick.

Prof. Carrie Derrick was the first speaker. She was careful to remind her hearers that it was not the object of those interested in the care of the feeble minded to endeavor to improve the mentally deficient, because science had shown that it is impossible to alter the inborn characteristics of any animal, plant or person. But it was the object of those interested to have the people placed where they will not interfere with those who are fit citizens. In quoting figures, Prof. Derrick said there were at least 30,000 feeble minded men, women and children in Canada whose degeneracy is easily detectable, and there are many others who are nearly normal but who are dangerous and should be dealt with according to their cases.

Lack of Interest.

Dr. Helen McMurchy deplored the lack of interest in this important problem. She called attention to the thousands of feeble minded who were "polluting the current of national life," and declared that those who could, do not offer any assistance in the matter of looking after them. Dr. McMurchy declared that steps should be taken to deal with the problem, in such a way that those in every part of the country who are feeble minded might be weeded out and placed where they will be well under control and well cared for. There had been many evidences of activity, she said, but there should be more and more, until the feeble minded of the land have been absolutely controlled.

Marriage License Farce.

Ex-Controller McCarthy, of Toronto, who has been interested in the problem of caring for the feeble-minded, for many years, said that it would seem that the citizens of Canada were not very mindful of the quality of the population, when they will allow to roam at large people who are dangerous and who are a menace to the development and progress of the nation. He thought each city and town should have its local committee, and commended the local council of women for the admirable stand they had taken in the matter. He scored the system of selling marriage licenses in Ontario, calling it a perfect farce, and said it was time the government or somebody woke up to the real dangers of such a system that will even sanction the marriage of people who are not fit to take up the reins of citizenship.

Campaign at Belleville Gets Away to Good Start

BELLEVILLE, March 24. — A campaign to raise $30,000 for the Canadian Patriotic Fund was inaugurated in this city last night by a mass meeting of citizens held in the opera house. Ex-Mayor Wills was chairman, and the speakers were Hon. R. Rogers, minister of public works; E. M. Macdonald, M. P., of Pictou, N. S.; E. G. Porter, K. C., M.P. for West Hastings; B. R. Hepburn, M.P. for Prince Edward County; J. W. Johnson, M.P.P. for West Hastings; Sir M. Bowell, Hon. H. Corby, and F. E. O'Flynn. The addresses were most patriotic in sentiment, and all the speakers were cordially received. Previous to the meeting the distinguished visitors, with several citizens, were entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Quinte by Hon. H. Corby. The city council has given $5000 to the fund, and the officials and staff of the Ontario School for the Deaf have contributed $1000. There is every prospect that the amount aimed at will be fully subscribed.

LABOR CONDITIONS IN PETERBOROUGH

Improvement in Labor Market Made by War Orders

The local correspondent of the Labor Gazette reports the following labor conditions in Peterborough for the past month: —

There has been a slight improvement in the labour market caused by war orders, some of the factories working overtime. Spring orders have helped others who have not been working more than half time.

The civic authorities were doing all they could to help those who were out of work by giving them two weeks' work at a time and were making efforts to start every civic work as soon as the weather will permit.

In the building trades the outlook was anything but bright, so far as the city is concerned, but the farmers are taking considerable advantage of conditions and considerable building will be done in the surrounding country. They were drawing material for the work while the roads were good.

In the woollen trade and leather trade work was very brisk. The iron foundries were doing very little. Machine shops were busy.

There was very little change in the cost of living since last month; prices remained about the same except in flour which has gone up over one dollar a hundred since the first of the year.

Farmers were getting ready for their spring work. They have been busy with care of stock and marketing produce. A good number have been employed cutting pulp wood. There was a scarcity of feed and many farmers were selling stock owing to the high cost of carrying the animals over until spring.

Lumbering operations were rather quiet, the mills being well stocked with lumber owing to falling off in building operations.

Textile factories were enjoying busy conditions mostly owing to war orders. The B. F. Ackerman & Sons Company have big orders for harness for the French Government and were working full time. The Canadian General Electric Company were busy in some departments; their tool room was working full time. Some other departments were working four days a week.

POLICE CHIEF LOOKS FOR GOOD RESULTS FROM THE CHANGES IN LICENSE ACT

Eight Out of Ten Men Who Are Brought to Police Station Have a Bottle With Them --- This Evil Will Be Curtailed and Reduced

Chief of Police Thompson, whose work is closely associated with the task of keeping down and dealing with infractions of law caused by indulgence of liquor has some favorable arguments to advance regarding the proposed changes in the Liquor License Act.

"As the liquor law will stand," he said, "it will be impossible for a man to procure a bottle of whiskey after seven o'clock. Eight out of every ten men who are brought in the police station drunk, have a bottle upon them so that the bottle drinking habit is a great evil. With the shops closing their doors at seven o'clock, and with the bars already prohibited to sell liquor in bottles, this evil must necessarily be curtailed and reduced as a natural and logical result.

The Chief then remarked that it would stop the all too common habit of liquor being carried along in bottles by men taking girls out in rigs and automobiles. While they could procure liquor before seven o'clock if they intended to take it along, still he felt that the danger would be more or less minimized.

In regard to the appointment of a central commission he said that it would take the liquor legislation out of the hands of commissions and place it in the hands of a body of men who should be relied upon to discharge their duties regardless of political influence.

The prohibition of the sale of liquor on holidays was also commendable. A soldier would not be able to procure liquor while in uniform, a fact that was of inestimable value.

Chief Thompson emphasized the importance of the license inspector being particular now to see that the hotels complied strictly with the law in regard to selling liquor in bottles. The hotels were strictly forbidden from selling to a man under the influence of liquor or selling him a bottle. The commonest experience he found in dealing with cases of intoxication was that a man after getting drunk would buy a bottle, go home with it and become hopelessly drunk. By having the shops closed at seven, and the bars prohibited from selling in bottles the majority of men who wanted to buy a bottle would be unable to get up street in time after their day's work. It would also assist in registering convictions against parties who sold liquor to blacklisters.

Good Work for Hotel Keepers.

License Inspector Jos. Stewart, when asked what he thought of the new changes was reluctant to express any opinion because the bill had not yet become effective and furthermore no one could tell how it would be worked out. The fact of liquor law administration being taken out of the hands of local commissions was all right as long as no political influences were brought to bear upon them in the administration of their duty. However, Mr. Stewart recalled the words of Hon. Mr. Hanna who once stated that if all the liquor laws in Canada were all as well enforced as in this riding there would be no cause for complaint and no need for radical changes. Inspector Stewart emphatically stated that the liquor men in this city were complying with the laws and that he had never been required to prosecute for the past six or seven years. They were educated up to a point where there was no necessity for them being kept under constant surveillance, the hotel men he felt being just as anxious as the

CITY GIVES $100 TOWARD COST OF FIELD KITCHEN

Will Provide Hot Meals for Soldiers When on Battlefield

The City Council last evening decided to grant $100 towards the purchase of a field kitchen for the men of the Second Contingent encamped at Kingston. The matter came up at a previous meeting, but was laid over till last night, with the above result. It took the City Dads longer to make the grant of $100 than it did to give the $10,000 to the Patriotic Fund. Mayor Buller reported that Canon Davidson is taking the matter up locally, endeavoring to raise money for the field kitchen. Mr. T. F. Matthews had already given $50.

The members of the Council discussed the life in the trenches, heard Ald. Dobbin tell about the Belleville camp, learned from Ald. Stratton that $650 was set aside this year for special grants, expressed their appreciation of the work the soldiers of Kitchener were doing, tried to find out how many centres were being asked to assist, heard City Clerk Armstrong read the letter from Captain Grey of the Second Contingent over again, and then spent several minutes deciding whether the grant should be $100 or $150. It was finally decided to grant $100.

FALL FROM A WINDOW WAS FATAL

Inmate of House of Providence Succumbed to Injuries

When no one was watching her, Mrs. J. Lynch, a woman of seventy, stole to a window on the third floor of the House of Providence, East City, last night between ten and eleven o'clock, and either fell or jumped out, falling a distance of about thirty feet. She was living when found a few minutes later but died during the night.

Mrs. Lynch was visited about nine o'clock by a friend. After a short stay this lady went out but upon returning about one hour later, failed to find her. This led to a search being instituted with the result that the open window was discovered and a few minutes later Mrs. Lynch was found unconscious on the ground below.

As no one witnessed the sad affair it is impossible to say exactly what occurred The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

HIGH TRIBUTE TO THE CANADIANS

Mna for Man French Army is Better Than the Germans, Says British Commander-in-Chief

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

British Headquarters, France, March 25. — Sir John French told the Associated Press correspondent today there was no doubt of the outcome of the war. "I was never so confident of victory as I am today. I am as confident as General Grant was when he took command of the army of the Potomac. He kept at it, and so shall we."

The most critical time of the whole campaign, he said, was on the retreat from Mons to Le Cateau, when in an open country in a dangerous position. "German ambition for the annihilation of our little army might have been realized if our cavalry had not been equal to its task of covering the flanks of our steady, disciplined regulars."

He thinks there is an inclination to exaggerate the importance of artillery. Weapons which decide the day are rifles and machine guns, and the infantry is still queen of battles.

"The conduct of the Germans," said Sir John, "has been bad, very bad. I know that it has been, but it has varied, depending upon the commanders. If a commander approves of outrages, they occur."

Speaking of the French army the British commander-in-chief said they have the elan of Na poleon's days.

"Man for man, they are better than the Germans, and their army has continually improved while the German army has deteriorated, of which we have abundant evidence.

"Neuve Chapelle was an important victory. It proved that with strong push we could put the enemy out of well fortified positions and hold what we gained."

Sir John concluded by saying the conduct of the British territorials has surpassed expectations, and, "as for the Canadians, I cannot pay too high a tribute to them."

PROFITS ARE RETURNED BY DRUG CLERK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, March 25. — The case of Ernest Powell, the Ottawa drug clerk who made a profit of $6300 on medical supplies to the militia department, came to a sudden end today when the committee received a letter from Powell stating he did not consider it honorable to keep the money and enclosing a cheque for the amount. The unexpected development in the case followed the carrying of a motion by Hon. Dr. Reid, asking parliament to submit evidence to the justice department for any action deemed necessary, including the recovery of the money.

County Council Waited on Minister of Public Works

The County Council, headed by Warden Kindred, waited on the minister of public works at Toronto yesterday, asking for aid towards the cost of erecting another bridge across the Otonabee River. The deputation was promised consideration. At the same time the minister pointed out that retrenchment as much as possible was necessary, on acount of the situation brought about by the war.

The members of the Council are attending the good roads convention today.

TWO GERMAN BATTALIONS WERE COMPLETELY CUT UP

Austrians Admit Loss of Six Generals, Twenty-five Hundred Officers and Seventy Thousand Men

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 25. — A Reuter despatch from Petrograd says that according to semi-official statements two German batman battalions were completely cut up and another put to flight when the Germans attempted to recapture trenches taken by the Russians on Tuesday near Karaska, North Poland.

Booty taken at Przemysl includes 500 wagons and 5,000 tons of coal.

A despatch from Geneva says the Austrians admit the loss of only six generals, twenty-five hundred officers and seventy thousand men in the surrender of Przemysl.

A Berlin despatch says Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the famous socialist member of parliament, who has displeased the government by voting against the budget, has been mustered into the Landsturm and assigned to service in Alsace.

A prominent American business man at Copenhagen, returned from a visit in Germany, says that commercial classes there are very despondent. German business men admitted to him that Germany certainly will be defeated, and they believed the war would end in August.

General Larue, commanding a division in the French army, was killed by a bullet while inspecting trenches.

GREATEST NAVAL SURPRISE OF WAR BEING PREPARED

According to Story Brought Back From Germany by Officer of American Steamer

KARLSHRUE STRANDED ON REEF, WAS DESTROYED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 25. — Jesse Boyd, an officer of the American steamer Carib which was sunk by a mine in the North Sea, reached here today after some time spent at Bremerhaven, Germany. German officers told him that the Karlsruhe, after having stranded on a reef last December, was destroyed by the crew to prevent her falling into the enemy's hands.

Lieut. Weddigen, commanding submarine U-9, told him that Germany is preparing "the greatest naval surprise of the war," but refused to give particulars.

SWEDISH STEAMER HELD BY BRITISH.

SUNDERLAND, England, March 25. — The Swedish steamer Goose Bridge, with a cargo of iron ore, was brought into Sunderland today by a British prize crew. Her cargo, it was presumed, was destined for Germany.

REQUEST OF UNITED STATES IS REFUSED.

LONDON, March 25. — The British Government has refused the request of the United States that an American consular officer be permitted to take a station at the port of Kirkwall, Scotland, to report on American cargo ships detained there.

CHANGE THE NAME OF SOME STREETS

Aldermen Have Two Months to Submit Their Lists

The matter of changing the names of several city streets has been hanging fire for a long time. The city solicitor was asked to outline the legal steps necesasry, and at last evening's meeting of the Council his report was read. It was stated that it would cost as much to have one changed as it would a number of streets. In view of this it was resolved that the matter be laid over for sixty days, and in the meantime the aldermen will secure a list of streets in their respective wards the names of which the residents wish to have changed.

BICYCLIST IS KNOCKED DOWN

Harry French Was Painfully Bruised

Last night about 9.30, Harry French, while bicycling south on George street, failed to observe in time a horse and rig crossing George street at Simcoe street. He attempted to stop quickly but the chain came off his wheel. He coasted into the horse and was knocked down, the outfit passing over him. He sustained some painful cuts and bruises and was severely shaken up.

The driver of the rig was Mr. J. Cuthbertson, who is registered at the Empress Hotel. He came back to see what he could do. French, however, attached no blame to the driver.

His face was cut pretty badly, but he was not seriously hurt. He was taken by P. C. Lawrence to the police station, where he was washed and his cuts bandaged. He lives on Albertus street.

PUBLIC BUILDING IN PETERBORO'

Opposition Bitterly Opposed to Expenditures

The president of the board of trade, wrote Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P. in regard to the new public building for Peterborough, asking for some definite statement as to when operations would be commenced. Mr. Burnham's reply was as follows:—

The President of the Board of Trade:

Sir,—In reply I am very glad to give your body any information I can. The opposition has fought us so bitterly on expenditures in public works that we may have to go to the country to find out what the people want. It is of course in the estimates but Mr. Rogers told me that the opposition was a serious matter. If I hear anything further I will let you know at once.

[illegible] J. H. BURNHAM.

RESIGNATION IS ACCEPTED

Ald. Johnston Permitted to Enjoy Life

At the Council meeting last evening the resignation of Ald. W. J. Johnston as aldermanic representative was accepted. The vacancy on the finance committee caused by Ald. Johnston's resignation will be filled by Ald. Weir, chairman of the manufacturers' committee.

RESTOCK STURGEON LAKE.

The Lindsay Post has been informed that it is the intention of the Provincial Government to restock the waters of Sturgeon Lake with maskinonge and bass fry this season.

SALARIES IN CITY TREASURER'S OFFICE FIXED BY BY-LAW

A bylaw was passed last night by which the city treasurer will be paid a salary of $1400 per year, the deputy city treasurer a salary of $700, and the stenographer a salary of $300 per year. The salaries will be dated from Jan. 1st.

Some of the aldermen thought the work in the office could be performed by two persons, but Ald. Dobbin reminded the Council that Mr. Adams is the treasurer of the Patriotic and Relief Fund. All the orders from the local relief association, orders for advances to the soldiers' wives and families, the cheques to soldeirs wives from the patriotic fund at Ottawa, pass through the treasurer's office, and the staff have all this work to do in addition to the regular civic work.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1915

THE NEW LIQUOR ACT.

THE NEW LIQUOR ACT of the Ontario Government has been announced, and, as foreshadowed, inaugurates a striking change in the administration of the liquor law. A central provincial commission of five members is to have complete control and jurisdiction of the liquor traffic and law. The issuing and revoking of licenses will be in the hands of the new commission, which is to have large powers. The local boards will, of course, disappear. The Province will be divided into inspectoral districts, and men fit to be trusted with the office will be appointed by the board as inspectors. It will be in the commission's discretion to say whether the licenses in any municipality shall or shall not be fewer than they are, but it cannot increase their number. It can prescribe in any case less than the maximum number of hours the law allows for the keeping open of shops and bars. Besides its provisions for the constituting and empowering of the commission, the bill places new restrictions on the selling of liquor. It puts an end to the night trade of liquor shops. These must close at 7 o'clock every evening. Neither bars nor shops will be allowed to do business on Labour Day. The selling of liquor to soldiers in uniform is forbidden. Further, the penalties are greatly stiffened. Of themselves these reforms are of great importance and wide scope. They will make home life happier and they will conduce to the greater strength of our defensive forces, both by enlarging the number of the recruits and by adding to the efficiency of the soldiers. License fees may or may not be raised. The board will have power to consider this as it deems advisable.

It is interesting to note that the Globe does not attack the new law very vigorously. It approves of the prohibition to soldiers, of the prohibition on Labour Day, and the closing of shops at 7 o'clock, but fears that the commission will be hampered. For this criticism, time alone will tell whether it is well founded or not, but, judging by the other commissions established by the Conservatives of Ontario, such as the Hydro-Electric Commission and the N. T. R. Commission, it should fulfil its duties well. Never before in the history of Ontario has a government placed such a strong hand on the liquor interest. It has enforced laws made more and more stringent, so that infractions are much reduced. It has supported and enforced the Local Option Law. Now it takes the whole business out of politics. Mr. Rowel says the measure is disappointing. If that is the substance of his criticism, it is a very good measure. In view of its provisions and of the criticism it has received, it appears to be a very statesmanlike handling of the problem. The Hon. W. J. Hanna has won a name for himself as a sound administrator, and this new liquor legislation will but add to his fame. It points to efficiency and to further progressive changes as time and circumstances demand.

LOCAL STREET CAR LINES SHOULD BE EXTENDED.

ONE OF THE THINGS very necessary in the development of Peterborough is an extension to the street car system, and the City Council would be doing a service to the city if it took some steps to secure improvement. Peterborough has outgrown its present system by some years. So far as it goes, this city has a very good service. A single track system is always worked under more or less difficulty, but, compared with other places, the system in this city is well operated. The chief objection is that it does not serve enough people and that means that lines ought to be lengthened or supplemented. The growth of the city westward certainly necessitates the extension of the street cars to the Monaghan Road. Then there is East City, with no accommodation at all, save the pleasure of paying city taxes. It is a disgrace that the City Council has neglected that part of the city in the manner it has. If any part of Peterborough needed a street car service, it is East City, but we know that street cars cannot be run in East City very satisfactorily without the building of one, or perhaps two, expensive bridges. Nevertheless, that is what will have to come sooner or later, and the sooner it is started the quicker will this city grow.

As a temporary expedient, the Jitney might be used. It has already made its appearance in Toronto and Hamilton, and has suddenly come into popular favour in a great many western Canadian and American cities. In Vancouver it has definitely demonstrated its usefulness. We agree with the Hamilton Herald that at best these are but a suplement to the permanent street car lines. The Herald says:

"At last the jitney-bus movement has struck Hamilton. Motor cars are running regularly on King and Main streets between James street and Kenilworth avenue and between the corner of King and James and the H. J. C. race track. For a few cents one can take a quick automobile ride from the centre of the city to the eastern limits and back. We shouldn't wonder if the service were to prove popular, especially in the summer months. If it does, probably it will be extended in other directions.

"It is not to be expected, however, that the jitney-bus service will prove to be a serious rival of the street car service. When the novelty wears off it will be found that the 'buses' are deficient in the qualities of regularity, certainty and shelter in bad weather. Besides, the street car service will always be cheaper. But the competition offered by the 'buses' may stimulate the street car company to improve its service in order to retain its traffic — perhaps even to be more ready to give favourable consideration to proposals of the civic authorities that new tracks be laid on streets where street car service is needed. Possibly this will prove to be the most valuable result of the jitney-car service in Hamilton so far as the public is concerned."

In Peterborough the jitney-car might be of use in serving East City until such a time as a proper bridge can be built. It also could be used in serving other parts of the city until the new lines are built. In any event, some action should be taken at once to insure a better car service to the residents of Peterborough.

OBJECTS TO BRITISH BLOCKADE.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD that the government of the United States will make a strong protest against Great Britain's naval blockade. It was hardly expected to be otherwise. European war has always affected the United States to a considerable degree. In the Napoleonic wars they were so aroused over paper blockades that that was one of the causes of the War of 1812. The South African war also interfered with their shipping a great deal, and the present war has also had a bad effect on American trade. In the present state of affairs, President Wilson realizes that the United States is in a position that cannot be helped very much. Great Britain has made it plain that she cannot be bound by international laws that Germany refuses to respect. She must protect herself and take every measure for the success of her cause. If the United States has any real grievance—and it has—it is against Germany, who was the first to violate recognized international rules.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THERE IS a new weekly newspaper being published in Edmonton that claims to give the people "The Real Dope." It devotes some space to rumors. If the Peterborough newspapers published a selected assortmnet of the various rumors around here, they might succeed in causing an earthquake. The Western Weekly will no doubt find plenty of ammunition in Edmonton.

"IN TIMES of depression prepare for business." That is good philosophy, and is the way this country is trying to meet the economic difficulties that are facing it.

IT IS INCORRECT to blame governments of any kind too much for improprieties revealed by investigations. The people are to blame. It is freely stated at Ottawa that the people are losing their grip on a proper sense of right and wrong.

Varsity to the Front.
(Toronto World.)

Over six hundred graduates and undergraduates of the University of Toronto have taken their places in the army for the front, and the number is constantly growing. If they have a chance to line up "Unter den Linden" and give the Varsity yell, it will make the Berliners stare. They have done honour to their alma mater by their decision to fight for the great cause, and they will doubtless do more honour still before the war is over. When the bright and brainy men and youths of the country undertake the championship of our civilization and our freedom it must be realized that the appeal has been deep and strong, and the reasons solemn and urgent, which have led them to take this step.

A Miracle.
(Exchange.)

Pensively Patrick gazed into the pigsty and fixed his eye on the fat little object that snugly snorted to itself. "M'm!" he muttered, as shifting into a different position he viewed the piglet from another angle. Along came Betty O'Hoyle, but not even her pretty face could lure Patrick from his contemplations. "An' how's the pig, Pat?" she asked, slightly piqued by his indifference. "He's a livin' wonder!" came the emphatic answer. "Shure, an' how's that, Patrick?" inquired Betty, drawing nearer the sty. "He's just guzzled two pailfuls of milk, and then I put him in the pail and he didn't half fill it."

A Cry for Help.
(Youth's Companion.)

Good advertising benefits any form of business. The right sort of advertising gives you a friendly feeling towards a firm. It makes you believe that it will be both pleasant and profitable to deal with the advertiser. A certain grocer once inserted in the newspapers an advertisement that had this merit. It ran:

"Twins are come to me for the third time. This time a boy and a girl. I beseech my friends to support me stoutly."

Now Is the Time.
(Montreal Star.)

We will never again get so good a chance to paralyze for a generation the imperial ambitions of military Germany. If we permit Germany to elude us on this occasion and to escape with her hopes and spirits intact, we may be very sure that she will prepare for a "return match" in the near future when her diplomats will much more carefully prepare the way for her soldiers.

Worth Remembering.
(W. F. Nickle, M. P., Kingston.)

Canada must remember that for a time industry and thrift must prevail, and that a country does not grow rich by spending borrowed capital and "swapping lots" at inflated prices.

A Billy Sunday Criticism.
(Hamilton Spectator.)

Evangelist Billy Sunday told a Philadelphia audience that Voltaire, Paine, John Stuart Mill, Darwin, Huxley, Tyndall, and many more like them, are now inhabitants of hell. From which it appears that hell must be quite a centre of intellectual culture.

Very True.
(Major-General Hughes.)

I have yet to see a position that either a civilian or a soldier addicted to liquor can fill.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Light showers followed this evening and tonight by strong northwest to north winds. Local snow flurries and a change to much colder Friday. Much colder and mostly fair but some snow flurries.

BREAD OR PEACE

Mysterious Red Cards Appear in Berlin

LONDON, March 25.—A despatch from Copenhagen to Reuter's Telegram Co. says:

"Red posters inscribed 'Bread or Peace' are continually appearing in towns in the Province of Schleswig-Holstein and in Hamburg and Luebeck, according to a telegram from Woyens, on the German frontier, published in the newspapers of the Danish capital.

"The police remove the placards, but they have not succeeded in arresting any of the persons responsible for them."

A Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says it is reported from Berlin that the German Government has prohibited pastry making from Saturday next under heavy penalty.

Germany Ignores Dutch Note.

LONDON, March 25.—The Times' correspondent at The Hague, in a despatch concerning the recent seizure by a German submarine of the Dutch steamers Batavier V. and Zaanstroom, which were conveyed to Zeebrugge, where their cargoes were confiscated, says:

"The Government has received no reply from Germany regarding its request for an explanation concerning the Batavier V. and the Zaanstroom, and the situation arising therefrom is considered grave."

Hint For Greece.

ATHENS, March 25. — (Via London.)—The Hestia publishes a statement to the effect that President Poincare has assured the Greek Minister at Paris that "coming events will convince Greece of the necessity of abandoning her neutrality."

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

IF you want to see the bad points of your boon companions just contemplate them an hour or so the morning after.

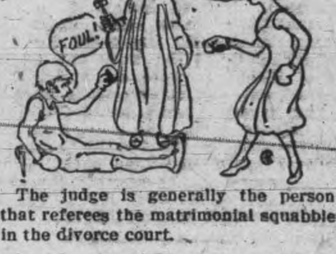
Seeing it is so hard to please oneself, there is no wonder that it is hard to please other people.

There are some people who take light exercise regularly three times a day—at the dining room table.

The amount of feathers and furbelows that the modern maid finds necessary to her happiness is enough to give Cupid nervous prostration.

The top must be a hoodoo or else why is there always room advertised there?

Kind words can never die, but a swift jolt does its work in fine fashion and takes its departure.



The judge is generally the person that referees the matrimonial squabble in the divorce court.

It may not be altogether the fault of the pancakes—maybe your temper and digestion are needing adjustment.

Judging from the sensational cases in court, the sooner letter writing becomes a lost art the better it will be for the general moral tone of society.

The Mystery.

O schoolma'am, in our early days
We very seldom like your ways!
The schoolroom in our minds we hate,
For we cannot appreciate
The things for us you try to do
When life is young and years are few.
But we confess before all men,
Although we did not show it then,
We thought you were the sweetest miss
That ever mortal tried to kiss,
And we were quite determined, too,
When we grew up to marry you.

But there are always things on ice
To mar the plans of men and mice,
And so it happened we were not Allowed to carry out the plot.
But always in our secret heart
There was the half forgotten smart
Because we missed that joy supreme
To match with you and make a team,
And how we envied some bright lad
Who'd won your hand and made you glad!

Now from afar we come to chase
A week or two about the place,
To bring our kids and show our wife
Where daddy got his start in life,
And really our surprise is great
To find you yet in single state.
It's more than we can understand
How such a treasure failed to land
And why you did not take your pick
Of Tom or Archie, Bill or Nick.

O vain regret! 'Twas ever thus!
Perhaps you waited round for us—
Turned every other man away
In hopes we would come back some day.

Suitable.

"He will make a good husband."
"Do you think so?"
"I know it."
"What are his qualifications?"
"He can bake bread, sweep, dust, sew on buttons and is a master hand at darning silk hosiery."

Hard Lines.

"Domestic relations are somewhat strained in that family."
"Are they?"
"Seem to be."
"Wonder what strained them?"
"The pull on the purse strings, I fancy."

Color Combination.

What happens when a green chap gets the blues?"
"What happens?"
"Yes."
"I don't know. What does?"
"Turns him yellow, of course."

Lots of Them.

"How does it happen that Cecile makes such a success on the stage?"
"Keeps the audience busy."
"Keeps them busy?"
"Yes; regular commotional actress, you know."

The Microbe Carryall.

"Johnny, have you done anything useful today?"
"Yes, papa; I killed a fly."
"Brave lad," said the advanced father; "there is a million dollar bill as a reward."

What Saved Him.

"He was going to mortgage his house to buy an auto."
"But he thought better of it, did he?"
"Yes; he had nothing else to mortgage to keep it in repair."

Caustic.

"I am my own boss."
"You are?"
"I certainly am."
"I thought I noticed something lax about your training."

Playing Safe.

A man should always be on guard
To watch his sin besetting.
And when he hasn't got a cinch
He should cut out his betting.

Look For Money
IN YOUR STORE-ROOM

There's more good money, madam, just going to waste right out there in that old storeroom of yours and down in the basement locker where they put "those old things you had no room for" than you have any idea of. How would you like a brand new, crinkly $10 bill for just part of it?

Here's what to do: If you have a good mirror—advertise it in the Want Ads of THE DAILY REVIEW. If you have curtains, carpets, even odds and ends—say so. Lamps, chairs, tables, porch furniture, stoves, heaters, irons, linens, bedding, beds, trunks, anything that can be used—for goodness sake list it. Make up a list, get it together, in as good shape as you can, and get it out where they see it all together, then put a Want Ad in THE DAILY REVIEW and get your money out of it. The initials, numbers, or your address, as you please. Why waste useful articles or let them fall to pieces and be thrown out, when hundreds of people could use them to advantage in some way?

His Heart's Desire

An Informal Call That Had a Happy Ending

By GARFIELD MACNEAL.

The chimes were still ringing as Tom Hastings sat down in the half darkness of the little church. He had strolled in hoping for temporary release from his bitter thoughts, but the quiet of the place only seemed to rouse his brain to greater activity. Yet he could not think of his story, the story already due at the publisher's. Instead he saw only a girl's face, now sweet and gracious as it had been before the quarrel, now cold and repellent as the past two weeks had shown it.

A strain of music broke the silence. The choir was filing in. Hastings glanced carelessly at the white robed procession. The face of the first boy caught his attention for a moment, serious, spiritual, framed in an aureole of golden hair, an ideal face for a choir boy.

But again his thoughts ran back in the old channels to the quarrel and its consequences. Her work had seemed to go on as usual. She was a successful miniature painter—at least fine carriages often stopped at the doorway of the big studio building, and her room rang with feminine voices. That was the maddening part of it. She lived just across the hall, so he must see her many times a day. He had made up his mind to move. But, then, he had such a beastly lot of traps, or perhaps it was some lingering hope that kept him there.

Some familiar chords on the organ startled him. Was it the offertory already? Yes, and the ideal choir boy was singing alone. His handsome face was flushed, and in his earnestness he waved his sheet of music gently to and fro.

"Oh, rest in the Lord," he sang.

Hastings leaned forward. The words were apparently for him. The absolute certainty of the boy's tones carried conviction.

"And he shall give thee thy heart's desire."

The tender voice went straight to the man's heart and comforted him. Yes, he, too, would wait patiently, and perhaps some day he, too, would have his heart's desire. Till then he would wait and work.

The next two weeks went by very differently. Under the press of a new enthusiasm the book seemed to write itself. The last sheet had gone in to the publisher and he had always worn a smile when he met the girl on the stairs. Her bow was still as freezing, but he only smiled again and hummed the few bars from "Elijah," "And he shall give thee thy heart's desire."

Again Hastings sat in the little church. Perhaps his choir boy would sing for him. But the figure of the small leader drooped. In the glare of the choir lights his face showed white and haggard, while his eyes were swollen from weeping. A wave of pity went over the watching man. It might now be his turn to comfort. The sweet soprano voice was low and broken.

Hastings determined to find the meaning of the change, so he lingered after the service, and a kind faced curate told him the sad little story.

"You mean Jack Haines? He has just lost his mother—consumption—and the poor little fellow is left all alone. He is being cared for by neighbors but we must find him a place in some charity school."

That delicate child in a charity school! Hastings could not bear the thought of it. The face of the child and his own loneliness helped him to come to a sudden resolution. His voice was very eager as he said, "Let me have him."

And so Jack came to live in the big studio building. Slowly the roses came back to his cheeks. He did not forget the pretty mother, who had gone to sleep so quietly, but he haunted this new big brother like a shadow and crept into his arms to cry away the grief that time was trying to heal.

But it worried Hastings that the lad should be so solemn. When he came in and found the boy poring over some big book he would half laughingly scold him for turning into such a little bookworm. "You need some one to play with, Jack," he would say. "It is bad for you to be always cooped up with an old fellow like me." Tom was only thirty, but somehow he had felt very old and settled since that night.

But Jack always declared that he didn't want to be with any one else, and he was such a shy child that Hastings forbore to press the point.

He was therefore much surprised one afternoon on coming in to find the rooms empty. Where could Jack be? As the minutes went by, bringing no boy, he became really anxious. The janitor had not seen him. He was returning from fruitless inquiries when he stopped short at a burst of childish laughter. Could it be Jack? He never laughed like that. But, yes. It was his voice, and it came from the girl's rooms.

Hastings hesitated. And now the girl laughed. It was the same saucy little laugh he had loved so much in the days gone by. It decided him. She had stolen his property and should answer for the theft. He knocked boldly on the door.

Silence. He knocked again. Evidently they did not hear him. So he turned the knob and entered the forbidden chamber.

Surprising sight! On the floor in true Turkish style sat the stately Miss Trevor. On her lap were a big sheet of cardboard and sundry brushes and paints. Her hair was disheveled, and several daubs of color ornamented her cheeks and nose. Over her shoulder in a state of great excitement leaned the truant. Hastings hardly knew him. His cheeks were flushed and his eyes were dancing as he cried, "Now, that is the way the little monkey swung off by his tail!" His cheek was pressed close to the girl's, and his arm rested lovingly on her shoulder. Evidently she had won his heart too.

Hastings felt a swift pang of jealousy and started forward.

Then they heard him, and Jack sprang up, with a cry of delight.

The girl was too loaded down to rise, and so she sat there. Perhaps it was the sudden flood of color to her cheeks; perhaps it was the upward glance of her eyes. At any rate, a sudden light came to Hastings. For a moment he stood there blinded, dazed. Then his customary coolness came to his aid. It was his turn to carry things with a high hand, and he must make the most of it.

His eyes challenged hers as he said: "How long have you been a receiver of stolen goods, Miss Trevor? I am glad to see that you have the grace to blush for your sins, even under your paint."

Jack was quite shocked. "She did not steal me," he protested. "I was lonely, and I was waiting for you in the hall, and she asked me to come in, and I came, and we've had a beautiful time," he added in a joyous outburst.

"That's just as bad," Hastings answered severely. "You mean to say that she enticed you in here."

Jack was speechless. The girl had said nothing.

"You might at least invite me to sit down since you are so comfortable," Hastings went on, "and let me join in the beautiful time, though I don't know, on second thought, that it isn't pleasanter standing. It is so unusual to see you at my feet."

Miss Trevor started to scramble up, but two strong hands lifted her gently into a big chair. It was a new experience to her to be either commanded or helped. But she did not seem to mind it nor to notice that he was still holding her hands. Both had forgotten Jack as Hastings bent over her and asked, "Are you glad that I have come?"

Jack is delighted with it all, but he never can understand why Tom always calls the girl "Heart's Desire" when her name is Alice.

Points for Mothers

Children's Friendships.

The friendships that children form have a far deeper influence over their lives than many parents realize.

It is not an easy matter to influence children in the formation of friendships, for even at the beginning that seems to be a matter of personal selection. There never yet was a child who did not hate the children whom his parents talked about as particularly desirable for companions. If let alone he might have chosen them of his own accord for playmates, but not after hearing too much about their virtues.

Friendship, like love, can never be created by talking too much about it. There are other ways, however, of influencing both boys and girls, and a little tact on the mother's part will accomplish wonders. It is not always pleasant or convenient to entertain a horde of children when only one playmate would be more desirable, but the old saying that there is safety in numbers is never better exemplified than in the bringing up of children. There are more quarrels, to be sure, but sensitive edges are rubbed off when exposed to the good natured but quite honest criticism of many playmates.

It is the guiding hand on the reins, the light touch that controls the most spirited horses. They respond quickly to firmness, but resent being pulled in with a jerk. A word here, a suggestion there, little plans for children's happiness that may cause many a sacrifice of comfort on the parents' part, have often nipped in the bud undesirable associations and ended, before they were really well started, friendships that would bring no lasting happiness.

A Blackboard For the Children.

Many mothers want something to entertain the young child so well and so long that they may read or sew or attend to household duties undisturbed for an hour at a time.

One good suggestion is a blackboard and a package of colored chalks.

It has been found that children work longest over blackboards, probably owing to the ease and the fun of erasing, an act of destruction which delights them and yet in some way is passed unchided by the superior powers. Next to this they like crayons and chalk on paper, and least of all paint.

They enjoy the water and the messing for a time, but the spreading of the paint, while they imagine it to be an ocean, seems to detract from the clarity of the image which the child had in view when he started.

Amusing sketches and actual school work may be undertaken on the blackboard. As to the board itself, a small, light, unbreakable easel shaped board worth a dollar or less is the one best liked and best suited to the children.

Electroplating Mirrors.

A new method of silvering mirrors consists of depositing the metal on the glass by means of a high potential electric current. A plate of metal is placed against the glass; this is laid flat on a table, and the air above it is exhausted to a high degree of vacuum. Then a small quantity of hydrogen gas is introduced, and the current is turned on through a negative pole attached to the metal plate. In thirty seconds the glass has been silvered.

NOVEL COMBINATION.

Checked Skirt With Kimono Jacket of Black Satin.

ATTRACTIVE SPRING SUIT.

An afternoon suit of shepherd checked serge and black lacquered satin in oriental design, the skirt consisting of straight gores of serge alternating with circular gores of the satin, is pictured here. The kimono jacket of satin, lined with white pussy willow taffeta, has edges banded with black silk military braid embroidered in gold and green. It is a fine specimen of the modiste's art in adapting Japanese ideas in regard to dress to the taste of the occident.

NEW SPORTS CLOTHES.

What the Smart Set Dons For Outdoor Recreation.

With devotees of riding enjoying themselves in the country, clothes for day wear at the smart estates become of the riding type.

This brings into consideration a most attractive display of smart neckwear, sports hats, trim shirts and blouses, the most swagger article in boot styles and a corresponding array of good looking sports suits.

Both corduroys and tweeds have their admirers. It is about six of one and a half dozen of the other in point of preference, so honors are even.

For walking suits corduroys are in high favor.

The costume shown by a leading shop forces this point home rather decidedly, for it is one of the new models designed for spring wear by a most exclusive patron of conservative but sports loving taste.

It is of green cotton corduroy. The coat is made with a smart yoke with the skirt part showing inverted pleats, which are belted in such fashion at the waist line that but a small portion of the belt need hang when the coat is worn unbuttoned.

The skirt is of circular cut, buttoned in front and with pockets set on just below the hips.

Renewing a Rose.

To renew the charms of a shabby artificial rose, trim all the edges of the petals with sharp scissors, and if there are green leaves, trim those as well.

Then straighten bent wires, press the fresh heart of the rose open so that it has a full blown look and place the flower at the left bust of a low evening bodice in some thin material.

New, the corsage rose costs from $2.50 up to anything, but with careful pruning a twenty-five cent bargain may burst upon the eye like nature's own.

FOR PET DOGS.

Here are a few of the dainty things for the pet dog:

Military brushes, which can be monogrammed in silver.

Collars of leather, studded with brass, or with jewels if one cares for them.

Rubber coats, lined with wool for the sake of warmth, that keep all rain from the dog's back.

Rubber shoes of red flexible leather that pull on like riding boots.

Black rubber shoes that lace up the back.

Straw or leather traveling bags, well ventilated.

Bells of silver or brass to fasten on the small dog's collar.

Enameled sleeping baskets in blue and white.

Umbrellas that are strapped around the dog's body and held erect in this way over its back.

Roses and other artificial flowers to fasten to the dog's collar.

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, JAN. 27th. 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XIII.—First Quarter, For March 28, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Neh. ix, 26-31. Quarterly Review—Golden Text, Prov. xiv, 34—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

LESSON I.—God's Patience With Israel, Judg. ii, 7-19. Golden Text, Hosea xiv, 4, "I will heal their backsliding; I will love them freely." God did everything for Israel that infinite love could do and asks so pathetically in Isa. v, 4, "What could have been done more to my vineyard that I have not done in it?" He asked only that they make no league with the inhabitants of the land, who were all idolaters, but keep themselves wholly for Him.

LESSON II.—Deborah and Barak Deliver Israel, Judg. iv, 4-16. Golden Text, Ps. xxxiv, 17, "The righteous cried, and Jehovah heard and delivered them out of all their troubles." It is the same story over and over again—they sinned, the enemy oppressed, they cried to the Lord, and He delivered them. This time He uses a woman, but a man went along who would not have gone without Deborah.

LESSON III.—The Call of Gideon, Judg. vi, 11-16, 33-40. Golden Text, Ps. lxv, 4, "Blessed is the man whom Thou choosest." Now the oppressors are the Midianites, and the oppression is very severe—so great that if a little grain is to be kept for one's own use it must be thrashed in secret. Gideon while thus occupied is visited by the Lord (verse 14) and called to be the deliverer, strengthened by the assurance that the one who sent him would be surely with him (verses 14-16).

LESSON IV.—Gideon and the Three Hundred, Judg. vii, 1-8, 16-23. Golden Text, Zech. iv, 6, "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts." The sifting of an army of 32,000 down to 300 because all the rest were afraid or loved their own comfort was a very unusual proceeding and suggests the question How many professed followers of Christ today are ready wholly to renounce self and follow Him fully?

LESSON V.—The Birth of Samson, Judg. xiii, 8-16, 24, 25. Golden Text, Judg. xiii, 4, "Beware, I pray thee, and drink no wine nor strong drink." This was the longest and in some respects the worst of all the oppressions, forty years under the Philistines, but again the Lord delivered. Again the Lord came personally to talk with the human agents, this time to visit her who was to be the mother of the deliverer and tell her the manner of the man.

LESSON VI.—Ruth Chooses the True God, Ruth i, 6-18. Golden Text, Ruth i, 16, "Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God." All the deliverers were in a measure typical of the great Deliverer, but this is the story of one who came into the direct line of our Lord's human ancestry. By the overruling of human failure this devoted Gentile plays a wonderful part in the great drama of history, the heart of which is His story.

LESSON VII.—Samuel Called to Be a Prophet, I Sam. iii, 1-13, 19, 20. Golden Text, I Sam. iii, 9, "Speak, Jehovah, for Thy servant heareth." The quarter's lessons seem to be wholly on the line of the Lord "delivering or preparing or calling the deliverer." Now it is a broken hearted, persecuted woman who is called to be the mother of the deliverer, and her song or prayer is very similar to that of Mary in Luke i.

LESSON VIII.—The Death of Eli and His Sons, I Sam. iv, 1-13, 18. Golden Text, Jas. i, 22, "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only, deluding your own selves." Poor old Eli was in a measure out of fellowship, and God had to speak to him through Samuel. The elders also were out of fellowship and relied upon the ark rather than upon the Lord, so that the Lord humiliated them by allowing the ark to be taken, Israel defeated, Eli's sons slain.

LESSON IX.—Samuel, the Victorious Leader, I Sam. vii, 3-17. Golden Text, I Sam. vii, 12, "Hitherto hath Jehovah helped us." After Samuel returned to Ramah, his birthplace, which he seems to have done after Eli's death and the loss of the ark, he led Israel back to the Lord in penitence and devotion and so defeated the Philistines that they came no more into the coast of Israel all the days of Samuel.

LESSON X.—Saul Anointed King, I Sam. ix, 17; x, 1. Golden Text, I Pet. ii, 17, "Fear God; honor the King." That which God had foreseen now comes to pass, and the people demand of Samuel a king (Deut. xvii, 14). Samuel felt greatly hurt, but committed all to the Lord and was told to grant them a king, but under protest. Then the Lord sent him the man and afterward controlled the lot so that the people elected him.

LESSON XI.—Saul Gains His Kingdom, I Sam. xi. Golden Text, Prov. xvi, 32, "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." The Lord gave Saul a victory over the Ammonites and thus the esteem of the people. He also gave Saul victory over his own spirit so that he could forgive his enemies (x, 27; xi, 13).

LESSON XII.—Jonathan and His Armor Bearer, I Sam. xiv, 13. Golden Text, Rom. xiii, 12, "Let us put on the armor of light." Although only two years of Saul's reign had expired, he already began to fail in obedience and was told that his kingdom could not continue.

THE USEFUL LESSON

We make life's journey picking up
 Experience for later use,
Extracting nuggets here and there
 And finding fragments lying loose.
Some things we very early learn,
 And some it takes us long to win,
About the latest we absorb
 The foolishness of butting in.

It seems a little thing to do
 To set a man and brother right,
To point the error of his way
 And lead him gently to the light.
He would be grateful for the aid
 Forever after, you'd suppose,
But you are lucky to escape
 Without a bruised and battered nose.

Suppose you see a man and wife
 Mixed in a fierce, heartrending fight.
A strong temptation you may feel
 To go and try to set them right.
Although for mercy he may cry,
 Though for assistance she may shout,
Congratulate yourself when you
 Can pass and let them scrap it out.

That little business of your own
Is quite enough for you to mind.
To other folks' affairs you can Afford to be both deaf and blind.
'Tis thus you keep your face intact,
 Your head from learning how to spin.
So jog along your narrow track
 And do not be a butter in.

INACTION.

Between the great things we cannot do and the small things we will not do there is great danger that we shall do nothing. There are not a few people waiting for an opportunity to be heroes who in the meanwhile are not ordinary useful citizens.

AUSTRIANS GIVE WAY BEFORE THE RUSSIANS

Muscovite Forces Are Pouring Down From the Mountains and Advance Guards Have Crossed the San River Four Thousand Austrian Soldiers Taken Prisoners—Germans Reinforced Along Narew River.

LONDON, March 25.—Already the Russians have begun to burst the southern barriers, where they have been on the defensive, across the Carpathian passes, since December, when the Germans launched the great scheme to help the Austrians and outflank the Russian left from Hungary. The column, which was defeated in the last Austro-German effort from the sources of the San, advanced to attempt the relief of Przemysl, and was again attacked with tremendous energy. After seventeen charges the Russians drove the enemy westward and themselves waded, neck deep, through the swift current of the San and the flooded mountain snows. This initiative now extends westward beyond the Dukla Pass. The Russians further east broke the enemy's position at the source of the Stryj, near Koziokoba, and held the Germans, killing the last man holding the rocky shelter.

Four thousand Austrian troops alone were taken prisoners by the Russians on the roads to Bartfeld and Uzek, in the Carpathians, while steady progress was made towards that objective. The Austrians made counter attacks elsewhere to relieve the pressure on their lines, but they were not successful in effecting their object. Several dozen machine guns were left in the hands of the victors, as well as one field piece. Several fortified heights between the Bartfeld and Uzek roads were captured by the Russians.

The only other point on the battlefront where the fighting has been serious is on the right bank of the Narew river, where the Germans have been reinforced. The combat here extends to the right bank of the Orzyc river, and the enemy is putting up a desperate resistance. Failure to hold back the Russians in this area might have serious consequences for Gen. von Hindenburg. Strong resistance is being made at isolated strategic positions, and the enemy has been compelled to weaken his other fronts to cope with the Russian forward movement. In spite of all that can be done by the Germans, the Czar's soldiers are slowly, but surely, bending back the hostile lines and capturing trenches and heights, despite a deadly fire and new and vigorous counter attacks. Hand-to-hand engagements in this theatre of action fought near Vab Karask and Jednoroziec in particular were signalized by Russian successes. Here a valorous attack gained for the Russians 300 prisoners, eight machine guns and two trench mortars.

A Berlin despatch says Major Moraht, military correspondent of The Tageblatt, telegraphing from Vienna regarding the fall of Przemysl, makes the following comment:

"The prestige of the Russians has now been increased, especially among the neutrals, but the debris of blown-up guns and works was too dearly bought."

He points out that the attacking forces are now strengthened by the troops from Przemysl, but contends that this is the only military advantage gained by the Russians.

The following official communication was issued last night by the French War Office:

"North of Arras the Germans attempted two attacks on the large spur of Notre Dame de Lorette during the night of March 23-24. Their defeat was complete.

"In Champagne also during the night an attack was attempted against the fortified position of Beausejour, which was repulsed."

CONFESSES THAT HE KILLED BOY

Owen Sound Man Says He Slew Lad While in Unreasoning Rage.

OWEN SOUND, March 25.—Henry Thackeray King, the Englishman arrested here on a charge of murdering 12-year-old Eddie Nicholson, yesterday confessed to the crime. He gives no motive other than an unreasoning rage with his brother, William King, alleging that he turned him adrift a week ago, and from the fact that he was refused employment at a factory.

In the presence of a witness he gave a written and signed confession at noon and in it stated that as he was driving with the boy he had been seized with a vicious mood which he could not put into words, and "something came over me so that I drew the dirk knife from my right hand coat pocket and struck the boy down."

King was arraigned yesterday morning before Magistrate Creasor. He pleaded guilty to burning his brother's barn and not guilty to the murder charge. Later in jail he made the confession.

To Protest Attack on Ship.

WASHINGTON, March 25. — The United States Government yesterday decided to call to the attention of the German Government a bomb attack reported to have been made recently by a German aeroplane on the Belgian relief commission steamship Elfland, in the vicinity of the Dutch coast.

Early in the day American Ambassador Van Dyke, in a message to the State Department, detailed the incident and said representations concerning the attack already had been made to the Government at Berlin by the Netherlands.

AUSTRIANS WERE DRILLING.

Thirty Aliens Were Hard at Work In Toronto Church.

TORONTO, March 25.—Detectives surrounded St. Stanislaus Polish Church, at 16 Denison avenue, last evening, and rounded up about thirty Austrians and Polacks, who were drilling in the hall of the church. They were locked up on a charge of illegally drilling. It is the first arrest for the offence of "illegally drilling" within the memory of the oldest police official, and is probably the only one since the Mackenzie rebellion.

The detectives watched the manoeuvres for some time before breaking in on the drillers. Dummy rifles were used and orders were given in Polish and Austrian. The men were a well-drilled body and carried out every order with military precision. With the men placed under arrest was an American-Austrian, who, according to the police, was brought across from the United States for the express purpose of whipping the squad into shape. The dummy rifles were all seized and carried to the police station for use at the trial of the men. St. Stanislaus Church, where the men were arrested, is a Polish Roman Catholic Church.

Just when everybody was ready to believe that Juarez was the wickedest town in the world they moved the Johnson-Willard fight to Havana.

Socialists Left Reichstag.

LONDON, March 25.—Geneva despatches to London papers yesterday asserted that during the vote on the general budget in the German Reichstag, thirty Socialist members left the sitting and that the Socialist Liebknecht voted against the budget.

The Berlin press bureau announced through Sayville, L.I., wireless last night that two Socialists, Liebknecht and Lebedour, voted against the budget, but asserted their action was disavowed by Socialist leaders.

PROTESTANTS AND ROMAN CATHOLICS PAY SAME RATE

It is interesting to note that this year the tax rate of the Roman Catholic ratepayer and Protestant ratepayer is the same. Prior to 1913 the Roman Catholic ratepayer's rate was always the higher of the two, in 1913 the rate of the Catholic was 24.60 while that of the Protestant was 25.00. In 1914 the Catholic rate was 25.80 and the Protestant 26.00. This year they are both 24.50. For 1915, the Public School trustees have asked for $84,200 while the Separate School trustees have asked for $10,990. The reason why the rates are the same despite the difference in the expenditures is because of the difference in the assessments. The following comparison will show how the two rates are made up:—

TWO SUBMARINES WERE DAMAGED

German Works Were Set on Fire by Aviators

LONDON, March 25. — A British air raid on Hoboken, near Antwerp, where the Germans are constructing submarines, was officially reported yesterday.

Five British airmen, starting from Dunkirk, took part in the raid on the submarine yards, but only two of them reached the mark. Two were obliged to turn back owing to the thick weather, and a third was compelled to land in Holland owing to engine trouble and was interned.

According to a report issued by the British Admiralty, two of the five submarines which were observed on the slips were damaged and the works set afire. Prior to the war, this plant was known as the Cockerill Works, and belonged to a British company. When the Germans took the plant over, a high fence was erected around it, and no Belgian was allowed to enter. Workmen were brought from Germany to build the submarines. It is pointed out that these had to violate the neutrality of Holland to pass down the Scheldt to the sea, but this was easy of accomplishment, as they would pass the Dutch forts submerged.

Despatches from the Dutch frontier say that seven German airmen attacked the British raiders, but were outflown.

The Rotterdam correspondent of The Daily News in describing the air raid made Wednesday by British aviators on German submarines at Hoboken, near Antwerp, says:

"Immediately the raiders were sighted they were subjected to a tremendous fire from all sides. From every part of Antwerp anti-aircraft guns were trained on them and shells burst all about them. Hundreds of rifle shots were fired, but the aircraft went through the hail of lead without a scratch.

"The airmen dropped to within 300 feet of their objective before letting fall the bombs. Nearly every bomb took effect, completely destroying one submarine and badly damaging others."

Mr. B. C. Brooks was elected reeve of London township over Mr. R. W. Jackson. The death recently of Reeve James Hodgins made an election necessary.

There are persons who, not satisfied with running theid own chances, make a point of taking the chance of the other fellow every time.

MANY WOMEN ARE REGISTERED

Willing to do Work of Men Who Could Enlist

LONDON, March 25.—Women are crowding to register for employment at the labor exchanges here and throughout England at the rate of about 150,000 per day. It is estimated that already one million women have shown themselves ready to fill positions now occupied by men if the men will go in the army. The Government has expressed its approval of this movement, but no definite action has been taken. However, women are now being employed as clerks in the censor's office and elsewhere in Government work that formerly occupied men. All the railroads and tramways throughout England have received letters from the Government asking them to do all they can to employ women and release able-bodied men for fighting. Registration at the labor exchanges is increasing daily and at the same time efforts are being made to find employment, but as yet the million of registered women have not all found positions.

To Cairo, By Allah's Aid.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 25.—Syrian newspapers publish a proclamation issued by Djemal Pasha, commander of the Turkish troops operating against Egypt, denying certain rumors concerning the first Turkish reconnaissance against the Suez Canal.

He denies any serious defeat.

"The people must put their trust in the army and remain calm. With the help of Allah, we shall enter Cairo as conquerors."

According to Djemal Pasha, the Turkish losses in Egypt were fourteen officers killed, 18 wounded and 18 missing; 109 privates killed, 296 wounded and 446 missing.

No Death Sentences For Rebels.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, March 25.—The Assembly yesterday unanimously passed an amendment to the war indemnity bill removing the death penalty from all participants in the recent rebellion.

Crown Prince Not Disgraced.

COPENHAGEN, March 25. — The newspaper Politiken, by no means pro-German, yesterday made the positive announcement that rumors that the German Crown Prince had been removed from command and disgraced by the Kaiser, were untrue. "All kinds of rumors have been circulated about the German Crown Prince," said The Politiken. "We are in a position to state that he is in good health and with his regiment."

HYDRO ACT IS AMENDED

Provision Made for Payment of Ontario Power Commissioners

TORONTO, March 25. — A number of very important amendments to the Power Commission Act were incorporated in a bill brought down in the Legislature yesterday by Hon. W. H. Hearst. It provides for the payment of salaries to all the commissioners other than the chairman, who now receives certain remuneration. These funds will come out of the moneys now advanced by the municipalities. Further powers of expropriation were also granted, and this will be made retroactive to March 1st.

The large purchase of land at Eugenia, in connection with that development resulted in acquiring some of no immediate value, and power is taken to dispose of such lands.

By a radical amendment to the present regulations a uniform open season for small game was yesterday established by the fish and game committee of the Legislature. All manner of game, except waterfowl, will in future be shot only between the dates, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. This season applies to hare and squirrels but a special privilege is granted of shooting cottontail rabbits for two weeks at Christmas time. The committee sets the later dates at Dec. 20 to Jan. 10.

After some discussion when a close season of years was advocated, it was decided to limit the season's bag of quail to 25 and the number to six per day.

Hon. T. W. McGarry now proposes to levy a flat tax of $25,000 yearly on all companies.

In changing the method of taxation the Treasurer will not reckon the charge on gross premiums, as in the past, and the tax apparently rests more heavily than before. A loophole of relief is afforded in a clause stating that when the annual return is made, application can be put in for a reduction of the tax to a point not lower than an equivalent of 1 1-3 per cent. of gross premiums. The situation means that companies will pay the same amount as before if amenable, but if rebellious will pay the full $25,000.

Moving pictures of Packey McFarland and Freddie Welsh in training were showing in Chicago. This is about as close to the real thing as the spectators get when either of them perform in the ring.

HASTINGS HAPPENINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, March 24.—Once again we are called to record the death of an aged and respected citizen in the person of Mr. J. Deceased was in his 78th year and had resided in Hastings for a number of years, moving here with his wife and daughter from near Roseneath. The funeral took place from his late residence on Thursday afternoon, to the Roseneath Cemetery where interment was made. The late Mr. Brown was a member of the Presbyterian Church and the pastor, Rev. D. A. Thomson, accompanied the remains to their last resting place. The operetta, "The Dust of the Earth," which was repeated for a second time on Wednesday, the 17th was, if possible, better rendered than ever. A very large crowd was in attendance, and every one was, to say the least, well pleased with the entertainment. The setting of the stage, and the costumes of each of the performers, were in such perfect harmony with the play, that each scene was made to appear very real. The committee, who had the undertaking in charge, have every reason to be pleased with its success. The proceeds are in the interst of the band.

The Willing Workers organized Bible Class in connection with the Methodist Church, were entertained on Tuesday night, at the home of the teacher, Mr. C. E. Jones, when a very social and enjoyable evening was spent.

Band Grants to be Further Considered

The question of grants for the bands has not as yet been settled. Last evening at the council meeting the recommendation from the finance committee contained two clauses as follows:—

We recommend that a grant of $362.50 be made to the 57th Regimental Band on the usual conditions regarding playing in the park.

We recommend that a grant of $362.50 be made to the Salvation Army Band on the usual conditions.

The fact that a fairly large deputation of the 57th Band was present "in the gallery" caused the matter to be discussed again. Ald. Stratton, chairman of the finance committee, explained that when the question was dealt with at the committee meeting one motion made was to divide the total amount of $725 equally between the two bands, another motion was to increase the appropriation for bands by $75. In view of the effort to keep down expenditure the motion calling for an increase was defeated and the one for dividing it equally carried.

Ald. Dobbin referred to the prestige the 57th Band has gained and in view of this it should receive a larger grant than the other bands of the city. He moved that the 57th Regimental Band be granted $450 and the Army Band $275.

Ald. Green remarked that he was in favor of dividing the grants equally at the committee meeting but since then he has received a little more light on the subject. In view of this he requested that the matter of the two grants be referred back to the committee. A motion to this effect carried and the deputation withdrew all smiles.

POLICE CHIEF LOOKS FOR

authorities to observe the law in every detail.

Disappointment was plainly written upon the face of Mr. A. B. Cunningham, president of the City Temperance Association who was interviewed last evening upon the changes in the Ontario license law.

Mr. Cunningham could not help but express his disappointment with the changes as he had been buoyed up by the hope that th Hearst administration would do something more in the interests of restricting the sale of liquor than what is in embodied in the new order.

To begin with he couldn't see the benefit that would accrue from placing the power to administer the license law in the hands of a commission. He felt that commissions could be depended upon to work hand in glove with the government that appointed them and therefore nothing beneficial to the cause could result.

In the second place the restrictions placed upon selling liquor should have been broader, than merely the curtailment of hours of sale in liquor shops. It should have gone further and he was sorry that Premier Hearst had not seen fit to restrict its sale over the bars at the hours mentioned for shops. Then the temperance forces would have been reasonably satisfied and hopeful. In a province like Ontario which ought to be showing other provinces the way in the curtailment of liquor, Mr. Cunningham was sorry to see it lagging behind in legislation that was favorable to the temperance cause. Manitoba and Saskatchewan were ahead of this province in that respect.

Three-Fifths Clause.

Another flaw he found was that no mention was made of the hated three-fifths clause which had ever been the thorn in the side of the anti-liquor interests. Mr. Cunningham considered that in fighting the liquor party the temperance party had to contend with a fifty per cent. majority in order to succeed in abolishing the bar. That is for every one hundred votes the liquor people got, the temperance party had to get fifty votes more. He would have liked to see that abolished.

Sale on Holidays.

About the only features he was able to speak with a little degree of satisfaction upon was the prohibition of the sale on holidays and to soldiers in uniform. Those were steps in the right direction. However he felt that the Hearst administration could hardly help but recognize the feeling that prevailed in military circles against the selling of liquor during the war and especially the words of Kitchener who thoroughly disapproves of the use of liquor among soldiers.

Mr. Cunningham was somewhat resigned to the new changes before the reporter took his leave. "We will have to go on fighting and hoping," he remarked.

Only a Mild Return.

Rev. R. G. Peever, while free to state that the changes were a step in the right direction, regarded them as a very mild return for the expectation and the anticipation of the temperance party in the Province.

"My judgment is that the temperance sentiment of the Province would have warranted Mr. Hearst in proceeding much farther by way of restrictive legislation. I take it that the pronouncement of the Province last June meant loyalty to Sir James Whitney rather than a pronouncement on the liquor traffic. His past career of faithfulness and fidelity was a great factor in the election. The moral issue was secondary, and in view of the strong desire of other provinces, Mr. Hearst would have been justified in going further than he has."

Speaking in regard to the administration of the license laws by a central commission, Rev. Mr. Peever said no one knew yet whether that commission would be sufficiently strong to stand aloof from partizanship politics. They would have to be very strong men to be independent of politics. Rev. Mr. Peever added that pressure had been brought to bear upon the government by the churches independent of the Temperance Alliance to separate hotel accommodation from the licensed saloon and let the hotel stand alone, but this apparently had not been taken into consideration. With the tremendous advance of public sentiment in other places, Ontario should be making faster progress.

Mr. Peever was positive that a referendum, if put to the people favoring the abolition of the liquor traffic, would sweep the province.

Is Disappointed.

H. B. Cowan, president City and County Temperance Associations, said:

"While temperance people on all sides will be grateful for the progress in temperance reform that we may expect from the recent announcement of the Government, and while the proposed commission may make additional reforms which cannot be foreseen at present, still I am sure there will be a feeling of general disappointment among temperance people that the Government has not seen its way clear to take a stand that would be more in harmony with the pronounced temperance sentiment now so prevalent throughout the province. Last June thousands of strong temperance sympathizers who were Conservatives stood by their party under the firm conviction that the party would introduce some radical temperance measures. Conservative speakers and the Conservative press gave reason for this belief. Since then the action of Russia in abolishing vodka; of France in prohibiting the consumption of absinthe, and recently of the province of Saskatchewan in introducing provincial prohibition had strengthened the hope that the Ontario Government in these war times would take a more forward step. All who held this belief are disappointed that the Government does not propose to go farther. While the proposed commission has some features to recommend it strongly, it also has some features which may prove objectionable. For instance, the temperance people in each community will not have as much opportunity to bring pressure to bear upon this commission as they could upon a board of local commissioners. This feature of the legislation is so new it is difficult at this time to discuss it intelligently. On the whole, temperance people are decidedely disappointed that the Government has not been able to take a more advanced step.

FOOD QUESTION.

Settled With Perfect Satisfaction.

It's not an easy matter to satisfy all the members of the family at meal time, as every housewife knows.

And when the husband can't eat ordinary food without causing trouble, the food question becomes doubly annoying.

A lady writes:

"My husband's health was poor, he had no appetite for anything I could get for him, it seemed.

"He suffered severely with stomach trouble, was hardly able to work, was taking medicine continually, and as soon as he would feel better would go to work again only to give up in a few weeks.

"One day, seeing an advertisement about Grape-Nuts, I got some and he tried it for breakfast the next morning.

"We all thought it was pretty good although we had no idea of using it regularly. But when my husband came home at night he asked for Grape-Nuts.

"It was the same next day and I had to get it right along, because when we would get to the table the question, 'Have you any Grape-Nuts' was a regular thing. So I began to buy it by the dozen pkgs.

"My husband's health began to improve right along. I sometimes felt offended when I'd make something I thought he would like for a change, and still hear the same old question, 'Have you any Grape-Nuts?'

"He got so well that for the last two years he has hardly lost a day from his work, and we are still using Grape-Nuts."

Contributions to the City Treasury

"Sunny Jim" Wilson took a bit too much yesterday. There is no need to tell what he took. Suffice to say he was taken to the police station where Chief Thompson took $2 from his depleted stock of greenbacks, upon the order of Magistrate Dumble.

Jim said he was working hard, making $2 or $3 a day.

"What do you do with all your money?" asked the chief.

"Oh, living and board is pretty high these days," was the response.

Hugh Bradford, a Toronto youth, was run in last night while drunk. The chief did not know much about him. He has been in the city only a few days idling around the streets. The fine was $5.75 or fifteen days on the hill. He paid.

MATTERS MUNICIPAL

The Court of Revision's recommendations to the Council that a refund of 92 cents be made Mrs. Maria Chandley on account of taxes erroneously paid by her, and that a refund of $10.97 be made to the Times Printing Co., being the amount of percentage of their taxes which were not paid at the time when due, on account of the death of Mr. W. H. Robertson, a cheque could not at the time be cashed, were adopted.

The chairman of the property committee will interview the city trust commissioners immediately on the question of getting a better ventilation system for the City Hall and renovating the council chamber. Last evening Ald. Green remarked that the ventilation system at present was enough to kill ordinary mortals.

Mayor Buller and Ald. Green have not been able to get the poles removed from Charlotte street as yet. It is very probable, however, that something will be done in the course of another week. Last night Ald. Duffus reminded them of the pole in front of Charles Banks' garage.

Bylaws were passed last evening authorizing the granting of $600 to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition and also authorizing the entering into an agreement with the Independent Telephone Company for underground cable work on the fire alarm system.

The Council has decided that the use of the hall formerly used by the 57th Regimental Band be given to the R. Wilson Distributing Company free of rent for six months in which to manufacture household specialties, providing the city trust commissioners agree.

The city solicitor is authorized to offer Mrs. Gagnon and John Murphy, without prejudice, $300 to settle any claim they may have on acount of the raising of Smith street to the grade the city engineer shall fix as the proper grade of the street.

The recommendation of the board of works that oil be used on the streets this summer was not accepted by the Council last night, but was referred back to the board in accordance with the resolution of Monday night's meeting.

The Utilities Commission has been notified by the City Council that Hunter street, from Aylmer to Walton streets, may be paved, and any repairs as to mains, etc., should be done immediately.

His Worship Mayor Buller accompanied by several aldermen and a quota of citizens, will accompany the deputation to Premier Hearst tomorrow in the interest of the hydro radial scheme.

According to the bylaw passed at last night's meeting fixing the garbage tax at seven-tenths of a mill, the area from which garbage will be collected this year will be the same as last year.

The finance committee has sold the public school debentures amounting to $18,000, bearing 5½ per cent. interest, to the Canada Bond Corporation at one hundred and five cents on the dollar.

W. M. Savigny, the successful tenderer for the collecting of the market tolls, will be granted a discount of $15 for paying cash. The amount will therefore be $735.

The tax collector has been instructed that the collector's roll for 1914 must be returned not later than 1st April.

The Council has decided to pay the first quarterly bill to the Utilities Commission for light. The amount is $3,036.75.

The finance committee has been given authority to sell the debentures that may be issued this year.

A resolution endorsing the rural radial line scheme was passed by the Council last evening.

WOULD NOT INCREASE TAX RATE TO PROVIDE MONEY FOR DRAINAGE

Mayor's Idea is to Issue Debentures to Pay for Work Which Would be Carried out on Large Scale

At last night's City Council meeting, the report of the committee of the Whole Council which recommended the tax rate of 24½ mills for school and municipal purposes, 1 mill for the Ontario war tax, and 7-10 mill for the garbage collection, was received and adopted and a bylaw enforcing the same was passed. When the report was adopted unanimously it appeared as though no discussion would be occasioned, but such was not the case. During the second reading of the bylaw, Ald. Dobbin opened a debate on whether or not a half a mill should be added to secure money for surface drainage. The result was a draw — no change was made. Ald. Dobbin remarked that the amount realized from half a mill would enable a mile of street to be provided with surface drainage, having tile pipe on both sides. He thought it wise to do a section of the city this year, and thus relieve the amount of water which would otherwise go through the sewage disposal plant.

Mayor Buller thought it a rather late hour for the discussion on the matter to be re-opened. He voiced the idea Ald. Stratton brought out at the meeting on Monday evening, to keep the rate as low as possible for the benefit of the larger ratepayers who have been subject to such a large increase in assessment. If a small part of the work were gone on with, it would be but a "bone of contention," as every corner of the city would claim the first work.

Ald. Saunders voiced similar ideas as did Ald. Stratton. The latter pointed out how the ratepayers were called upon this year for one mill for the grant to the Patriotic Fund, one mill for the war tax, one-fifth of a mill because of the Workmen's Compensation Act, and one-quarter of a mill for the increase in charity demands. He thought it would be showing very poor judgment on the part of the Council to add even one-tenth of a mill to the rate, as recommended by the committee of the Whole Council. Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Edgar thought along the same lines as the Mayor and Ald. Stratton.

Ald. Green stated that he was strongly in favor of doing a certain amount each year instead of doing it all at once and increasing the debenture debt. He did not feel like moving that the half mill be added at such a late hour, but believed that the Council made a mistake in not doing it earlier. He felt it should have been done for the good of the workingman during 1915, a year which is featured by conditions he hoped never to meet again. Ald. Green remarked that it may be that the city will be called upon to spend a great deal more for charity, and he was in favor of giving the men work, not charity.

Ald. Weir fell in line with Ald. Green and Ald. Dobbin remarked that $5000 would provide work for fifty men for eight weeks.

Mayor Buller came back by claiming that everyone knew the feeling of the Council was "work, not charity" for the men. No one in Peterborough wants to be pauperized. His idea, as he said before, was to go into the surface drainage question right, not providing work for fifty men for a few weeks, but to go into it on a larger scale and issue debentures to cover the expenditure. The engineering department is at present working on the plans for a large system, and these plans are as yet unfinished. To His Worship's mind $5000 wouldn't buy pipe enough to make a start on the work. The Mayor also brought out the idea of gettting men to work this summer making pipe, and it is probable that some scheme will be entered into with the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund Association and Peterborough Relief Association whereby the funds of the association can be utilized in financing the scheme and the men given "work, not charity." Before closing his remarks, Mayor Buller said he was not opposed to spending $5000 for the workingmen, but he felt that the poor men of the city were paying about as much taxes now as they could afford. For that reason he wanted the rate to be left as recommended.

No further discussion followed and the bylaw passed.

ALLIES WILL BE THROUGH DARDANELLES IN MONTH

Victory Which Will Have a Tremendous Effect on the Outcome of the War is Expected to be Secured in Three or Four Weeks.

LONDON, March 25.—From three to four weeks is the time estimated by British authorities for forcing the Dardanelles. Much depends on the weather, and the operations may take longer, but with a reasonable amount of good luck, it is believed the allies will be through the straits into the Bosphorus in that time. The impression grows that successful completion of this plan will have a treemndous effect on the ultimate decision of the great war, probably bringing the end within measureable distance.

The success of the Dardanelles venture admittedly depends upon the presence of a sufficient landing force to take possession of the forts. It is pointed out the ships may batter at fortifications all day, but at night the garrisons have a chance to recuperate and rearrange defences. Furthermore, the Turks are using field guns which are very difficult to locate or destroy.

The Tenedos correspondent of The Times in a despatch dated Tuesday, says:

"Mine-sweepers are again at work in the Dardanelles, but the wind is still too high for other naval operations."

A despatch from Athens to The Daily Express says a force of allied troops was landed on the Peninsula of Gallipoli yesterday, from transports in the Gulf of Saros.

Berlin reports that The Giornale d'Italia of Rome has received a despatch from Athens saying that the British battleship Cornwallis has been disabled in the Dardanelles fighting.

The Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency, in a despatch dealing with the attack on the Dardanelles by the allied fleets, says:

Navy officials at the straits declare that the Turkish submarine defence was greatly weakened following the explosion of numerous mines during the last attack. They add that if it had not been for floating mines an entrance would have been forced last Thursday, as the forts themselves do not offer a sufficient obstacle to prevent a passage.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

(Special Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, March 25. — About two months ago a young men's Bible class was organized in the Norwood Methodist Church. The teacher is Mr. Charles Miller, and the class has a membership of about twenty young men. The class has been organized on a business basis, having its officers and executive committee. On Friday evening of last week they held a very successful banquet. The members of the class, with quite a number of invited guests, sat down to two long tables in the Sunday school room and partook of a supper that did credit to the good ladies of the church, who are interested in the welfare of the class. After doing full justice to the good eatables provided toasts were proposed and responded to by a few of the members of the class as well as by many of the visitors. Among the invited guests were Rev. Mr. De Mille of Havelock, Rev. Mr. Glover of Westwood, Mr. E. C. Pace of Cordova, each one giving an address. All who attended spent a very enjoyable and profitable evening and the class is becoming very popular among the young men of the congregation, and it is confidently expected that a very beneficial influence will be the outcome of the scheme.

The K. O. H. Club intend meeting tomorrow (Friday) night to organize for the lacrosse season. It is expected that a very strong team will be got together, and it is hoped that success will be present with the team, wherever they go. The club is preparing for engagements with outside clubs, such as Havelock, Hastings, Peterborough and surrounding towns.

Mr. C. Cummings of town visited friends in Warkworth on Sunday.

Mr. Arthur Jobbitt of Peterborough was in town this week on business.

A number of the young people of town attended the play in Havelock named "Susanna," given by the Patriotic society of that town. All report an enjoyable evening.

There passed away at his home here on Wednesday morning of this week Mr. Bristowe Moffat, after a short illness. Mr. Moffat had been suffering from a severe cold, which became seated, but for a day or two before his death said he was feeling some better, and retired to rest on Tuesday night in good spirits. Early Wednesday morning he took a sudden change for the worse, and expired almost immediately. His wife and daughter, Miss Evelyn, were alone with Mr. Moffat when he died. Word of his death has been sent to th members of his family living in distant parts. These are: Mrs. Roy Pickens, of Empire, Panama; Mrs. McRoberts, North Bay; Mrs. Ballard, of Monteagle, and Miss Gertrude Moffat, of Brooklyn, N. Y. The date of the funeral has not yet been announced. Mrs. Moffat and family have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

NEWS NOTES FROM OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, March 25.—Affairs are as usual in the town. The ladies are securing Easter bonnets and the men are paying the bills.

Mr. Buchanan, our popular public school principal, is around again after a week's serious illness. Miss Florence Down took his place during his absence.

Our village was deeply grieved when the news came that one of our boys, Lieut. W. N. Gallaugher, with the Kent regiment, had been killed in action in the north of France. It was hardly believed at first and hopes were entertained that some mistake had been made but the sad news has been confirmed. Lieut. Gallaugher held the position of accountant in the Bank of Commerce, Chatham, where he was a general favorite. A memorial service was held in Christ's Church, Omemee, on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30. The service was conducted by Rev. E. R. James, the rector. The sincerest sympathy is entertained in the heart of every resident of the village for the relatives of the brave young man, our first boy to give his life's blood for the glory of old England.

On Wednesday evening, March 17th, the Epworth League of the Methodist Church gave an extremely unique and entertaining concert and social. The nams applied to the event was "A Trip to the Allies." The church was divided into five separate booths to represent Great Britain, France, Japan, Russia and Belgium. For refreshments each booth served some dish which is in general use in each of the allied nations. The young people were dressed to represent the different nations and served the lunch. The program was excellent in every respect.

Measles or some kindred disease much like it, seems prevalent in the vicinity. A couple of cases of it have broken out in the school. Every precaution is being taken for the preventing of the disease.

Some of our ardent baseball players are working out every day in spite of such obstacles as mud and water. It is expected that a fairly good team will be turned out here this year.

A treat is in store for those who attend the lecture in the Methodist Church on Easter Monday night. Mr. Hazelwood of Toronto, a very thrilling speaker, and undoubtedly one of the foremost of Canada in his own line, will deliver an address on "Evangelistic Work." He comes in the interest of the Social Service League of the Methodist Church. The ladies are providing refreshments and a half-hour of social conversation will be indulged in after the address.

BUELOW IS HOPELESS

He is Now Merely Trying to Delay Italy's Action

LONDON, March 24.—The London Chronicle correspondent at Rome cables that opinion is growing that Prince von Buelow is merely playing for time, realizing that his efforts have failed. Among well-informed people much more importance is attached to the negotiations proceeding at this moment between Italy and Great Britain regarding the Dardanelles Straits and Constantinople. It should be realized that for Italy and also for the Balkan States the future of Constantinople is the all-decisive factor.

Despatches from Rome reveal a growing insistence by the people for immediate action by Italy.

The Government has been given a free hand, and the Italian press construes this as an assurance that Italy will strike when the hour arrives.

In Austria-Hungary all hope of the continued neutrality of Italy has vanished, and the Government is preparing for war by moving troops to the Tyrol and Trieste.

A half million Austrian troops are now massed in southern Tyrol and the Trentino, where strategical organization for a fortnight has been carried on with feverish activity, indicating that invasion is feared to be imminent.

Practically all villages between Susana and Lake Garda have been evacuated by their inhabitants. Many houses along the frontier have been dynamited, so as not to hamper the range of guns and to destroy cover to an invading army.

The eastern portion of the city of Rovera has been razed and the debris used to improvise fortifications. Field batteries are posted on every point of vantage. Trees have been ruthlessly felled everywhere.

The region is entirely devastated. Heavy guns are mounted at an altitude of 7,000 feet. The inhabitants along the frontier are treated as spies and closely watched.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Diphtheria.

Diphtheria sometimes begins in a very mild way. Nature does not always give a loud warning of danger. Unrecognized nasal diphtheria of a mild type is largely responsible for the outbreaks of this disease in schools, institutions and communities. It is important therefore to be on one's guard at the first sign of a sore throat with fever, especially when the disease is prevalent. Send for a doctor and have him take a culture in throat and nose in season. This means of preventing the growth and spread of diphtheria is usually within easy reach of all. Do not neglect it.

The War In a Nutshell.

You can hardly put a foot outside your own door without finding some one who is sacrificing something. Yesterday to the collecting station organized by the Lyceum club came a woman with a man's overcoat. Put it down. It was a fine coat. "For some man," she said firmly. "It was my son's. And he's been killed." So the sonless widow walked away tearless.—London Chronicle.

Baths Without Water.

To have a bath without water is one of the latest novelties. A thick robe is entwined with wires, and when put on a current of electricity is passed through the wires. The wearer of the robe soon finds his body getting warmer until in a little while he perspires as freely as if he were in a Turkish bath.

German Fleet In Baltic.

BERLIN, March 25. — (Via London.)—A further official announcement was given out in Berlin yesterday as follows:

"German sea forces have assisted the land forces in the operations to the north of Memel on the Baltic. They bombarded on Tuesday forenoon the village and castle of Polangen, and kept under fire the road from Polangen to Libau."

Twenty-Eight Bodies Found.

VANCOUVER, March 25.—According to reports last night from Britannia Beach, where a snow and landslide on Monday wiped out part of a mining camp, the list of victims now total 54, two more bodies having been recovered yesterday. All told 28 bodies have been taken from the debris and the missing number 26.

FRIGATE BIRDS IN FLIGHT.

Their Amazing Power and Perfect Command of the Air.

The haunt of that remarkable creature, the frigate bird, is the southern oceans, where it makes its nest on some lonely coast or remote island. For that purpose it selects the Crozets, Ascension or Kerguelen, along with booby gannets, "wide awake" terns, the beautiful boatswain birds or the queer kelp pigeon. It tears from the trees as it flies a few sticks and fabricates a rude platform on top of some bush or tree, or even upon a ledge of rock, and lays and broods over a single egg—all that it needs to produce in a situation so safe and so fiercely protected.

The frigate bird is large, its slender but powerful wings spreading at least four feet from tip to tip, while the body is no less than forty inches from the hook of the great beak to the tip of the long forked tail. The color is blackish, with purple and green glossings; the feet are black, the bill bluish, and the pouch, which is peculiar to the male and is inflated in flight, is scarlet, as also is a ring about the eye. The pouch indicates the close relationship of these birds to the pelicans, but their habits are more like birds of prey, and one good name for the race is man-of-war hawks.

On the wing they show perfect command of the air. Their flight is swift, bold and full of grace. They are apparently untiring, keeping away from land for weeks at a time, soaring to enormous heights and descending with amazing speed. They can ride out a hurricane, scudding low and taking a reef in their wings, so as to expose only the largest quills to the gale. They are able to support themselves for long hours without apparent motion, and it is a beautiful sight to watch one of them floating overhead against the deep blue sky, the long forked tail alternately opening and shutting like a pair of scissors and the head swinging slowly from side to side, as if searching the horizon. Frigate birds feed on surface swimming fish, squids, crabs and young turtles.

MAMMOTH AERATORS.

How the Water In the Catskill Aqueduct Will Be Purified.

The great Catskill aqueduct of New York city is to have two immense aerators. One is to be at Ashokan, where the water can be purified before it enters the aqueduct, and the other at Kensico, where the water will be purified a second time just before it reaches New York city.

The second aerator will be in the center of a three acre basin, 460 feet long and 240 feet wide in the widest part. Into the floor are set, in row after row, 1,600 nozzles, each of which will throw a jet of water from fifteen to twenty feet high. The jets will strike each other and thus break up the water into clouds of spray and bring every drop into contact with the air and help free it of impurities.

This thorough airing will be especially beneficial in the autumn, when the water from the lakes and ponds is likely to have an unpleasant taste, owing to the presence in it of microscopic vegetation.—Youth's Companion.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

PACIFIC COAST CHAMPIONS SUPERIOR TO EASTERN TEAM

Vancouver, B.C., March 25.—Even money was offered on last night's hockey match between Vancouver and Ottawa, the coast fans believing that the eastern champions would show an improvement under conditions to which they are accustomed. The ice was in perfect condition when the teams went on, and another big crowd was on hand.

The score by periods was: First period, Ottawa 2, Vancouver 0; second period, Vancouver 6, Ottawa 3.

The line-up:—

Vancouver—Goal, Lehman; point, Patrick; cover, Cook; centre, Taylor; wings, Nighbor and Mackay.

Ottawa — Goal, Benedict; point, Merrill; cover, Ross; centre, Duford; wings, Broadbent and Gerard.

Subs.—Vancouver—Mallen, Stanley, Seaborn. Ottawa—Shore, Darragh, Graham and Hebert.

Andrew Mack Never Won on Andrew Mack

Frank J. Farrell, former owner of the New York Americans, named a thoroughbred in honor of Andrew Mack, the Irish comedian.

"Farrell's colt was bred in the purple, and his owner paid $1,600 to enter the horse in all the rich eastern stakes," said Mr. Mack. "The first time the colt started at Bennings, Farrell advised me not to bet on him, saying he couldn't beat Go Between. Andrew Mack went to the pots at 10 to 1, and galloped in front all the way. He failed to win another race for three years, and kept me broke all that time. One day Farrell touted him heavily and Willie Collier bet $500 on the colt. Andrew Mack swung into the stretch last in a field of 20. Collier was watching the race through a field glass. My wife said:

"'Where's Andrew Mack, Mr. Collier?'

"'Why he's in Fall River,'' replied Willie.

Frank Farrell gave the colt away that fall to William Cahill. Billy found out that the horse had a split hoof. Cahill was a master mechanic at patching up cripples. He healed up Andrew's spreading foot, and made the horse beat the best ponies at San Francisco. But I never won a bet on the blooming skate."

RUSS. BATTALION MAY BE FORMED

Canada May Take Means of Enlisting Her Slav Citizens

OTTAWA, March 25. — So many Russians have been offering themselves for service in the Canadian overseas contingents, that there is some talk of forming a Russian battalion to serve with the Canadians.

Many Russians have already enlisted, but the difficulty is that many cannot speak English, and it is impossible to enlist them, even if they have had former military service.

During the past few days a number of Russians have applied to enlist for the new service battalion of the Governor-General's Foot Guards. It is believed that the news of the fall of the great Austrian fortress of Przemysl has led to the sudden offer from so many Russians. However, most of them have so far been refused on account of their lack of knowledge of English.

Recruiting is very satisfactory for this fourth contingent unit. The 38th Ottawa Regiment, it is now found, when all the companies are gathered together, is two or three hundred over strength. The additional will be either transferred to the new fourth contingent unit, or to some other Ontario regiment which is under strength.

Must Consult Dominions.

LONDON, March 25. — No peace without consulting the leading statesmen of the Dominions overseas was the main theme of an address delivered by Lord Milner in the Whitehall rooms last night. It was true that the people and Government of Great Britain had shown their warm-hearted appreciation of the moral and material help that the Dominions had brought into the present conflict, but there was a far greater obligation than gratitude binding upon the Mother Country.

When Wigs Went.

Civilization has to thank the French revolution and the subsequent wars for masculine emancipation from the wig. It was partly the scarcity of flour and the war tax on hair powder that banished the powdered wig, but partly also the leveling influence of Jacobinism. "I do not know the present generation by sight," wrote Walpole in 1791, complaining that the young men "in their dirty shirts and shaggy hair have leveled nobility as much as the nobility in France have."

First Time Curley Saw Johnson Fight He Lost

Chicago Smoke Put Big Dinge to Sleep in Second Round

Jack Curley says the first time he saw Jack Johnson fight, the big dinge met a Chicago smoke masquerading under the nom de plume of "Klondike."

"George Siler saw Johnson go through five black clouds like a cyclone in a battle royal at Springfield, Ill, and invited the Galveston brunette to visit Chicago," said Surley. "A north side saloonkeeper named Kennedy matched Klondike with Johnson. Malachi Hogan refereed the mill. Johnson floored Klondike in the first round with an uppercut to the chin. Klondike went up like a skyrocket, and came down with an awful thud. They were counting him out when Kennedy called time. He didn't think one round of fighting a run for his money. We doused Klondike with water, and held ammonia to his nose till he regained consciousness and was able to stand on his pins again. Johnson thought he had Klondike's 'number,' and was taking things easy in the second round, when Kennedy's hurricane 'copped' him over the left eye with a long right overarm haymaker that started down around the heel.

"'Sewed a button on Jack's peeper,' is right. The big Galveston cotton picker fell in a heap, and was out for an hour. When he came to he asked for the loser's end.

"'There's no loser's end,' growled Kennedy.

"'But I'm hungry, and have got to eat,' whined Johnson.

"I felt sorry for Jack, and handed him some bird seed (small change), telling him to go fill up on chile con carne. Although I've been busy ever since Johnson became champion trying to dig up a man to beat him, the negro has never forgotten the good turn I did him the night Klondike beat him in Kennedy's cafe."

WAR VOTE

OTTAWA, March 25.—No opposition was made to the passing of Canada's war vote of $100,000,000 in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. It took just ten minutes to despatch this business.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier asked for information as to the measures taken for the defence of the Dominion. He did not ask for anything confidential. Sir Robert Borden said that he would be pleased to communicate privately to the members any information on this point that they desired. Protection of public buildings was given to any person who asked for it.

At the afternoon sitting, the House put through committee the war revenue tax bill, which will come into effect on April 15. One amendment was made to the effect that the special tax on wines would apply to wines used for medical purposes.

Postmaster-General Casgrain announced that negotiations were on foot with the British and French Governments by which letters to soldiers at the front might be carried postage free.

Hon. Mr. White, in reply to a question, stated that the extra war stamp would not be required upon letters to countries for which five cents in postage was required. Otherwise Canada would be violating the International Postal Convention. He also stated that for ordinary postage three one-cent stamps would be used and that upon checks and notes a two-cent postage stamp could be affixed instead of a special war stamp.

While the militia estimates were under consideration, Major-General Hughes announced that the second contingent would sail for England within the next six weeks and before the Valcartier Camp will be available for training purposes, but declared his belief in the large concentration camps for mobilization and training.

Luckless Settlers Helped.

There was laid on the table of the House of Commons the other day the details of the amount spent by authority of the governor-general's warrant since the last session of Parliament. The total amount authorized by orders-in-council was $6,077,016, of which, however, there has been spent but $2,540,016. Most of the expenditure was for the purpose of seed grain and the relief of settlers in southern Alberta. For this purpose there was authorized $2,750,000. The amount spent has been $2,495,292.

Other warrants were for the expenditure of $100,000 on the Intercolonial and $25,000 on the New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island Railway. The amount spent was a little over $41,000. For the assistance of the families of twelve fishermen drowned in the storm off Gloucester there was a warrant issued of $2,400. For carrying out regulations for the inspection of Canadian potatoes going into the United States there was a warrant issued for $20,000 and $50,000 for the clearing of obstructions in the Fraser river. Neither of these amounts has yet been spent.

Good labor is worthy employment in winter as well as in spring, summer and autumn.

UNIFORMITY IN SEASONS FOR SHOOTING OF SMALL GAME

Toronto, March 25.—The open season for all manner of small game with the exception of waterfowl will in the future be from October 15 to November 15. This was the decision of the Fish and Game Committee of the Legislature yesterday after lengthy consideration of proposals to wipe out the various seasons and make them uniform. It was pointed out that under the present system it was practically impossible to enforce the regulations, since the man with the gun shoots everything, and the net result is a shooting season much longer than intended.

Exception will be made to the general regulation in the case of cotton-tail rabbits, which may be shot for three weeks at Christmas time—December 20 to January 20.

A close season for quail was advocated, but the committee thought it was going far enough for the time by limiting the season's bag to 25, or a limit of six a day.

Trappers are to be required to have special licenses at a cost of $2, with the exception of farmers and their sons operating upon their own or adjacent land.

A new zone line was adopted to run from Hamilton to Sarnia, dividing the province into north and south shooting districts.

The committee also favorably considered a proposal to place some restriction upon foreigners who go out into the country shooting, destroying all kinds of useful birds.

STRONGHOLDS CRUMBLE IN Y.M.C.A. BASKETBALL LEAGUE

Set Back for the Leaders Make Finals More Uncertain

In the games last night in the "Y." basketball League the leaders got another set-back which makes the finals more uncertain. In the A division Cressmans beat the Unknowns, which means that if they can do the same trick with the Excelsiors, the division will be tied up and a draw for the play-off etween the three teams will follow. In the B division the Boosters beat the Hustlers, which makes another tie between the Hustlers and Collegiates in B division. The Hustlers meet the Collegiates on Saturday night. Both teams are on edge for this game. The Collegiates beat the Hustlers when they met in the first series of games, but the Hustlers have developed a lot since then, and the fans can expect their money's worth Saturday night.

Boosters Down Hustlers.

Capt. Best and his troop of Boosters succeeded in doing what the rest of the teams in the division wanted him to do. Not that they have anything against the Hustlers, but just wanted them kept from getting too much of a lead. As it is now, the division is again tied up. The Hustlers gave the best there was in them but they didn't have their eye on the basket sufficient to hold their place, while the Boosters had nothing to lose, so were not under the same tension. The first half ended 12-5 in favor of the Boosters and they succeeded in retaining their hold for the rest of the game. The scoring was pretty evenly divided among the Hustlers. Capt. Heaslip did the major part, while Preston and Best were the top-notchers on the Boosters'. Final score, Boosters 28, Hustlers 17.

Boosters Triumph Over Unknowns.

Fred Cressman and his bunch of cohorts are wearing that "Sunny Jim" smile, and it is rumored that they were so jubilant over their victory that they held a banquet afterward in honor of the win. They certainly had full steam ahead last night and came through like pennant winners. The Excelsiors are heading the league wiht only one defeat which the Unknowns handed to them last Saturday night. Cressmans still have to meet the Excelsiors, so these three teams still have a chance for first place in A division. F. Cressman and Bartlett were in fine fettle and scored 28 out of the 40 points for their team, while Robertson was the dependable score-getter for the Unknowns. The Cressman checks camped right on their men last night, giving them very little chance to score. The first half ended with the yellow shirts in the lead by 22 to 15. But in the second half they drew away and succeeded in scoring 18 points to their opponents' 10, the final score being, Cressmans 40, Unknowns, 25.

The teams were:

Boosters — Munro, Preston, Kerr, Best, Wilson.

Hustlers — Heaslip, Carruthers, Jones, Lewis, Lang.

Referee, Dobbin. Scorer, Thackeray. Timer, Smith.

Cressmans — H. Cresman, Palmer, Raynor, F. Cresman, Bartlett.

Unknowns — Mullen, Brown, McCarroll, Smith, Robertson.

Referee Dobbin. Scorer, Taylor. Timer, Stuart.

PRINCE OF FORGERS.

His Work Was Autograph Letters, but He Became Too Brazen.

Ireno Lucas, beyond all question, was the greatest counterfeiter of autograph letters, at least as regards amount produced, that the world has ever seen. Twenty-seven thousand letters, all from famous people, is no mean record and one that may remain forever unequaled.

It must be admitted that Lucas was exceptionally favored by the friendship of Michel Chasles, the famous French mathematician, who from 1861 to 1869 was a steady client and bought almost the total output, paying in all 140,000 francs. This was not a large sum, considering that among the letters he acquired were six from Alexander the Great to Aristotle, a challenge from Julius Caesar to Vercingetorix, three missives of Cleopatra addressed respectively to Cato, Caesar and Pompey; one from Germius Julius to Jesus, one from Aeschylus to Pythagoras, twelve from Jeanne d'Arc, one from Judas to Mary Magdalene, one from Lazarus, ten from Pontius Pilate, one from Sappho, one from Mohammed to the king of France, excerpts from the writings of Caligula, Dante, Spinoza, Luther, Rubens, St. Jerome and a multitude of hardly lesser personalities.

It is true that Michel Chasles did make some objection to the fact that these letters were in French, whereas it is not stated historically that Caesar and Cleopatra, for example, were in the habit of using that tongue for their private correspondence. But Lucas parried this protest in a way that was in keeping with his dignity as a collector of famous letters by offering to take back all he had sold to Chasles and return to him the 140,000 francs. Chasles was so touched with this convincing proof of his sincerity that the discussion ending in his lending Lucas 20 louis to meet some pressing obligations.

How a man having need of $80 could return $28,000 requires a great mathematician to determine.

It was the greed of England in wishing to keep for Isaac Newton the honor of discovering the law of gravitation that caused the bubble to burst and deprived Lucas of a steady and very genteel occupation.

With such solemnity as befitted a striking proof of the world's indebtedness to France, Michel Chasles presented to the Academy of Sciences a letter from Blaise Pascal to Newton, dated May 20, 1654, and proving beyond all question that he (Pascal) was really the discoverer of the law usually attributed to Newton.

It is true that at the date of this letter Newton was hardly eleven years old—rather young to have attracted the attention of the great Pascal—but there was still another proof of the falsity of the document. The author is made to speak of "la mousse du cafe," and coffee was not introduced into France until seven years after his death.

All England arose and protested. They had given their gold medal to Michel Chasles, but they insisted on keeping universal gravitation.

Shortly afterward Lucas was brought to trial, and a sentence of two years imprisonment ended a career not without entertaining elements. — Orville Peets in New York Tribune.

The First Postage Stamp.

The black penny postage stamp of 1840, the first stamp ever issued, was distinctly unpopular and gave place to a red one after a year's existence. Great Britain was the first country in the world to use postage stamps, and the English schoolboy of the period seems to have regarded them as a nuisance rather than a national benefit. "Have you tried the stamps yet?" wrote one of them to his sister in the year 1840. "I think they are very absurd and troublesome. I don't fancy making my mouth a glue pot, although to be sure, you have the satisfaction of kissing the back of her gracious majesty the queen."—London Tit-Bits.

ARTHUR PELKEY KNOCKED OUT

Al Reich Took His Measure in Third Round

New York, March 25.—Al. Reich, of this city, former amateur heavyweight champion, knocked out Arthur Pelky, of Chicopee, Mass., in the third round of a ten-round match here last night. It was a hard battle, Reich taking the first round, and Pelky evening it up in the second. A left to the face and a right cross to the jaw sent Pelky down for a count of nine in the third round. He arose and boxed for another minute, but a left hook on the head and several rights and lefts to the jaw ended the contest. Each weighed 206 pounds.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

SOME people give you the impression that they are going around with canned sunshine that is all of two years old trying to make you believe that it has been but just plucked from Old Sol himself.

If time were money you couldn't get the penurious to stop a minute to save their lives.

Our failure to inherit money accounts for the poverty of most of us.

A rainy day is a great dampner to the enthusiasm of picnickers.

Being able to foresee unexpected conditions is where the good guesser gets the start of the rest of us.

There is no excuse for ignorance in a married man. What he doesn't know his wife can cheerfully tell him.

It isn't easy to cheat ourselves unless we are dead willing to be cheated.

When a woman thinks she is pretty she is certain that every other woman knows she is.

You may put your best foot forward, but you can't keep it there. It has to be back half the time if you make any headway.

The Suspicious.

Oh, when a fellow comes along
And hands you out a little song
About a plan he has in mind
Designed to elevate mankind
And wants your help to come his way
It isn't very nice to say,
"What's in it?"

He has a great and noble cause
That ought to win the world's applause,
That ought to be the very thing
In life to soften down the sting,
But on it you cold water dash
By bringing in the hint of cash—
"What's in it?"

He may, this man who only dreams,
Be poor in purse, but rich in schemes.
You who are practical suspect
That he would with your purse connect
Or that it will not bring you gain,
And so you ask him to explain
"What's in it?"

Alas, the schemes that rise and fade
And with the dead are lowly laid
That might had they been given a show
Have put a crimp in pain and woe
Did not the man who would unmask
Some subtle scheme rise up and ask,
"What's in it?"

Explained.

"That man is a monster of wickedness."

"He is?"

"Yes."

"Mercy me! What did he do?"

"He is a bribe taker."

"What is a bribe taker?"

"One who confesses to taking bribes."

Noticeable.

"Speaking of honesty"—

"Yes."

—"there is one thing I have often noticed."

"What is that?"

"The man who talks most about it is generally willing to dispose of what he has left for a consideration."

Kept Her Busy.

"Very busy did you say she is?"

"Very."

"And clever, too, I understand."

"Extremely clever."

"How does she occupy herself mostly?"

"Drawing alimony from a number of former husbands."

Knew Him of Old.

"He has a most remarkable stock of common sense."

"Who—Brown?"

"Yes."

"Is that so?"

"Most remarkable."

"Now, I wonder where he has been stocking up."

CITY TO PAY FOR ELECTRIC SIGNS

Situation is Explained to Council by City Solicitor

There is a possibility that the electric sign squabble between the city and the Peterborough Light and Power Co. will be settled before many moons. Last night the city solicitor waited on the council and explained the situation. The electric signs were owned by the Peterborough Light and Power Co. and were expropriated by the city. The signs in stock were valued at $210 by the Hydro-Electric valuators while the company put the price at $250. There was $518 still owing to the company, from which the merchants purchased. The figures were presented by the company's representatives on the last day of the arbitration and as Mr. Gordon feared a dispute over some of the accounts he would not accept them. The arbitrators left the matter out of their award to be settled between the city and the company. Last night, Mr. Gordon said he did not feel like paying the $518 to the company and taking a chance on being able to collect it. He did, however, feel that it wuold be wise to pay the $210 for the signs in stock. On motion of Ald. Green and Duffus the matter was left with the solicitor and Mayor Buller with power to act.

Queen Bess' Shadows.

"I do not approve of shades in painting," said Queen Elizabeth to Daniel Myers. "You must strike off my likeness without shadows." Her majesty, when she spoke thus, was near sixty, and the "shadows," as she humanely called them, were wrinkles big enough to have laid a straw in them.

The quick trains to Chicago via the C.P.R. and the Michigan Central have the most modern C.P.R. equipment so that everything to make travelling comfortable is assured. In addition to the visit to Chicago passengers can travel via Omaha and Denver or via Kansas City. The orange groves at Los Angeles and San Diego are well worth a visit at this season of the year and the Coast Line to San Francisco can be taken through Santa Barbara and Monterey. San Francisco is an interesting city but probably the Exposition is the greatest attraction at the present time. Of the numerous buildings the Americans and all visitors claim that the Dominion of Canada is the handsomest and most attractive, while the exhibits from all over the world are interesting. A visit to Victoria and Vancouver, thence through the Canadian Rockies is the most magnificent of all railway journeys, while the company's hotels, which are built in the most attractive spots, have everything that the traveller can desire.

LESSONS IN ASTRONOMY.

Jupiter is by far the largest of the planets, exceeding both in bulk and mass all the others combined.

The satellites, or four moons, of Jupiter enjoy the distinction of being the first objects ever discovered with the telescope, having been found by Galileo almost immediately after its invention, A. D. 1610. It is quite possible that they may have been seen with the naked eye before this time. In more recent years, reports are current that they have been seen under favorable circumstances by sharp-eyed persons, and very little telescopic aid is required to show them. In recent years a considerable number of other fainter satellites have been found attending Jupiter.

In respect to size and mass Saturn stands next to Jupiter, and although far inferior to him in these respects it contains more material than all the remaining planets combined. But the unique feature of Saturn which distinguishes it from every other known body in the heavens is its ring. This was long a puzzle to the astronomers who first studied the planet with a telescope. One of them called Saturn a planet with ears. As correctly understood and described nearly half a century after, however "it is surrounded by a ring, thin, flat, nowhere touching it, and making quite an angle with the ecliptic." Sometimes Saturn is observed without a trace of the ring, as it is so thin that it disappears altogether when turned edgewise.

Saturn is attended by a family of nine satellites, a larger number than belongs to any other planet. With one exception, they are exceedingly small and difficult to observe save with a very large telescope. The latest ones to be discovered were found by means of the image which they impressed upon a photographic plate. They have never really been "seen."

Uranus and Neptune are interesting chiefly as modern additions to the known members of the sun's family. Neptune was the first planet ever "discovered," all of its predecessors having been known from prehistoric times. Uranus has four satellites, Neptune boasting only one. Under favorable circumstances Uranus may be seen with the naked eye by one who knows just where to look for it. Neptune is never visible save in a telescope. — University of Wisconsin.

THE "WHY" OF A "HOT BOX"

A Railroad Official Says the Cause is Carelessness

In answer to the question "What is a hot box?" a Kansas City Southern official has the following to say:

"A hot box is a sign that the safety first rule is not practiced by some car department man.

"There is no excuse for a hot box after a car is sent out if the train is carefully looked over by the car men at each terminal. Primarily a hot box is caused by poor waste and an insufficient 'greasing' at the time it should have been done, and there is no excuse for one. A hot box is liable to cause a wreck, and a wreck on most railroads costs money, much more than the price of a sufficient quantity of waste and oil and grease to protect the journals of the car wheels.

"The farmer who buys a new wagon or a buggy has a pretty good idea of what a hot box means and the ways to prevent it. When he buys a new wagon he sees to it that the spindle is well greased so it will not get hot. He watches it closely and does not take any chances on the wheels running hot. The farmer's wheels on his new wagon or buggy would stick, and if he persisted in driving ahead he would soon have a bad spindle and a bad wheel.

"However, the results would not be so disastrous as they would be in a train of cars running at a speed of fifteen or twenty miles an hour. It's no wonder that trainmen use language unfit for a Sunday school class when they find a hot box in their train. They know that some one has been careless and shirking in his work and that he is to blame."—New York Post.

ITALY REFUSES AUSTRIA'S FINAL TERMS

HYDRO RADIAL DELEGATES ARE TWO THOUSAND STRONG

Ask Government for Subsidy Toward Construction of Railway Lines

A LONG MEMORIAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, March 26. — Two thousand hydro radial delegates from every part of the province arrived here today by every possible means of conveyance to interview the government with a demand for thirty-two hundred dollars subsidy for the construction of radial railways. Preliminary to the presentation of the petition early this afternoon Alderman Hannigan of Guelph called on Sir Adam Beck this morning to arrange for the monster delegation's interview with the Premier.

One portion of their very long memorial says the depopulation of rural districts and congestion in towns has been largely caused by the absence of railways in thinly settled portions of the province and that the construction of such railways would mean rediscovery and re-settlement of rural districts and would practically pay for the subsidy expended.

NO TRACE OF CONEYBEARE

May be Another Man Mixed up in Lindsay Robbery

The Peterborough police have been assisting in the search for Howard Coneybeare, the Lindsay express driver who is suspected of having stolen $3000, the property of the Home Bank, but so far no trace of the missing man has been discovered.

It has been ascertained that the missing $3,000 was done up in two parcels. One contained 500 one dollar bills and the other 500 five dollar bills. They belonged to Series "M" and Letter "A," the one dollar bills being numbered consecutively from 26900 up.

It is surmised that Coneybeare broke open the parcel containing the 500 five dollar bills, as before leaving the house he gave his sister $20, made up of four "fives."

It is the opinion of the Lindsay police that the missing young man has made his way back to Haliburton County where he formerly lived, and that when the lonesome spirit comes over him he will return. However, it is also stated that there may be another man, an older man, from Hamilton or some other point, mixed up in the affair, which may have been well pre-arranged.

PERMITS TO BUILD

From all appearances the amount of building during the month of March this year will be lower than that of March, 1914. During this month last year 19 permits were issued for building estimated to cost $5,665. So far this month 8 permits have been issued for a total amount of $3,417. Thus far this year the building has been by no means brisk. During January 2 permits were issued for $1,900 while in February there were 3 for $1,100.

AUTHORITIES HOLD TRAVELLER

Will Test Legality of His Arrest at Lindsay

LINDSAY, March 26. — A commercial traveller named George Livingston was arrested here yesterday by the military police in connection with the local detachment of the 39th Regiment, C. E. F.

Livingston, it is said, represents an Austrian house having headquarters at Toronto, and carries samples of men's furnishings. He is said to be a German, although he clams Switzerland as his place of birth.

On instructions from Col. Hemming of Kingston, it is understood that Livingston will be taken under escort to Fort Henry.

Livingston is determined to test the legality of his arrest and has secured the services of a lawyer to look after his interests. He claims he has never declared his sympathies either for Germany or for Austria.

TO ESTABLISH CHEESE BOARD FOR NORWOOD

Time and Expense Would be Saved for Factories of the District

There is a strong likelihood of a cheese board being established at Norwood this coming season, in order to make the marketing of cheese more convenient and advantageous for the factories of this section, says the Norwood Register.

It is felt that if the patrons of Stirling, Campbellford, Madoc and Belleville districts are served with boards, where the intervening distances between the centres are only about fifteen miles, why should not this same convenience be afforded the factories of this section, who now have no board closer than Campbellford on the east, a distance of sixteen miles, and Peterborough on the west, a distance of twenty miles, making a stretch of territory of thirty-six miles without a board.

As Norwood is the very centre of a particularly strong dairying section in which there are quite a number of factories, the village would be very easy to reach, and the salesmen would not be under the expense of railway fare, but could drive in. Much valuable time would also be saved. It is also pointed out by some of the cheesemen that if their factories were served by a weekly board here as in other places, and the cheese shipped every ten days, especially in the heat of the summer, it would mean an increase in receipts of a large sum of money for the patrons, which is now lost by shrinkage in waiting two or three weeks for a board to be held.

As regards the output it is said the factories of this section now contribute the bulk of the cheese on a board which is situated outside of their territory.

Many other points in favor of this section being served with a board can also be advanced, and will be fully discussed at a meeting of the members of the factories to be held in Norwood on Saturday afternoon next, the 27th inst., at 2 o'clock, in the office of the Dept. of Agriculture. All officers and members of the factories of the district are called to attend. Some of the factories are:— Killarney, Norwood, Daisy D., Ormonde, Oakdale, Westwood, Warsaw, Stoney Lake, Trent River, Victoria, Rush Point.

In regard to accommodation in Norwood, we understand, three very suitable quarters have been offered to the factories free of charge.

OPERATIONS FOR STREET PAVING IN NEAR FUTURE

Radial Railway Company Ready to Proceed With Extensions

In all probability work will be commenced on the remainder of last year's paving contract in the course of two weeks. It will be remembered that last year the inability to secure the brick for the space between the rails, caused the section of Charlotte street from Bethune to Park street, to be left over till this spring. Superintendent Davis of the Foley and Gleeson Co., was in the city recently, and it was practically decided that a start would be made on the work the week after Easter, providing the frost was out of the ground. It is absolutely necessary that the frost be out of the ground and the ground dry, for this condition would enable the Radial Railway Company to perform their part of the work much better than if the ground is wet. Mr. W. H. Munro, manager of the railway company, stated to the Review today that the company is all prepared to go ahead with the work. The extension west of Park street to the corner of the Boundary road and Patterson street will also be gone on with.

MEMBER OF BATTERY REPORTED KILLED

It has been reported that Wilfrid Ireland, who enlisted with the 24th Battery, C. F. A., had been killed in action. He went to France with the first contingent but if "Bill" is as lively at the front as he was here, he should have no trouble in dodging German bullets. His name does not appear in the casualty lists.

FORTS MADE NO REPLY AFTER BRITISH FIRE

PURPOSE OF RAID SAID TO HAVE BEEN ACCOMPLISHED

Germany's Plan to Place Fleet of Submarines in North Sea is Delayed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 26. — A Daily Express despatch from Rotterdam says that many persons were killed and wounded during the British aviators' successful raid on Hoboken, near Antwerp, both by bombs and by shrapnel, from the wild firing of the German gunners. Two submarines were damaged and a portion of the works was set on fire, and there is no doubt the raid accomplished its purpose of seriously delaying the placing of a fleet of new and powerful submarines in the North Sea by the end of the month or the first week in April.

STEAMER SUNK CREW LANDED

Were Given Ten Minutes to Leave Vessel

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, March 26.—The steamer Delmira has been sunk by a German submarine off Boulogne. Members of the crew were given ten minutes to leave the vessel and subsequently landed on the Isle of Wight.

BARNS AND STABLES OF DAIRYMEN ARE IN BETTER CONDITION

Since periodical inspection of dairy farms have been undertaken by the sanitary inspector there has been, he says, a very marked improvement in conditions surrounding the production of milk throughout the country. Farmers and dairymen exert themselves to keep their barns and stables clean, well aired, and ventiated with the result that the cows are usually found to be in a healthy and clean condition. He came upon an exception to this however during his tour of inspection, which is being conducted this week. This particular farmer put up a hard luck story which accounted for his inability to keep his stables bright and clean or his cows clipped. Not wishing to be severe Inspector Spence agreed to give him a chance to clean up without delay.

Spring Clean-up.

Mr. Spence states that in his travels around the city he has come upon quite a number of yards and premises which are certainly not in a healthy condition and which he intends to see are improved immediately. With the coming of spring he thinks there should be a general attempt to clean up and get rid of any rubbish that has been permitted to accumulate.

PROTEST BY CHILE.

Santiago, Chile, March 26. — The Chilean Government protested today to Great Britain and Germany against the alleged violation of Chilean neutrality involved in the sinking of the German cruiser Dresden. The protests are based on the assertion that the Dresden was in Chilean waters when she was destroyed by British warships off Juan Fernandez Island on March 14.

CLEARED SCHOOL IN QUICK TIME

Real Cause for Fire Drill at King George School

An opportune time to test the pupils at King George Public School arrived this morning, at ten-thirty, when the pipes leading from the furnace caught fire, filling the rooms with smoke.

Principal Park telephoned the fire department, the Fire Chief responding to the call. The alarm at the school was sounded and the pupils left the building within forty seconds.

The Chief told a reporter the children behaved splendidly. There was no damage.

TO BRING BACK GIRL.

Police Matron McElhiney went to Toronto this morning to take charge of fourteen year old Rose Eagleton who ran away from her home in East City and started in to see the bright lights with $4.25 of her mother's money that she stole. The girl is in charge of the Travellers' Aid at Toronto. Mrs. McElhiney is expected back with her captive this morning.

Mine Sweepers Continue Work Without Disturbance and Satisfactory Results Are Obtained

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 26. — The battleships Queen Elizabeth and Agamemnon and the cruiser Cornwallis entered the Dardanelles Wednesday night to protect mine-sweepers, according to a despatch to Reuter's from the Island of Tenedos, dated Thursday.

At ten o'clock Turkish artillery at Erenkui fired five shells and the forts at Kilid Bahr also fired. British vessels replied with twenty rounds, and to this the Turks made no reply. From midnight until morning, mine-sweepers continued their work without disturbance and with very satisfactory results.

MR. BURNHAM WOULD CONSULT THE FARMERS

Ottawa, March 26.—"That in the opinion of the House it is desirable that a modus referendi be provided whereby the farmers of Canada may be consulted whenever it is proposed to take the money of the farmers of one part of Canada for the purpose of subsidizing with it the farmers of any other part or parts of Canada," is the text of a resolution of which Mr. J. H. Burnham, of Peterborough, has given notice. The resolution, it is understood, has reference to the assistance of Western farmers by the supply of seed grain.

HOME GUARDS AS RESERVES

A general meeting of the home guards was held last night, when matters of interest to the members were discussed. Home Guards will be brought under the reserves according to a statement of the Minister of Militia in the House last night.

PROHIBITION OF EXPORTS FROM ITALY IS EXTENDED

Negotiations With Austria Regarding Cession of Territory Has Failed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, March 26. — The newspaper Agenzia Nationale says negotiations between the Italian and Austrian governments regarding the cession of territory have definitely failed. Austria's final terms were of such a nature that Prince Von Buelow thought them not worth while submitting, and it is reported that he has resigned the role of mediator.

A royal decree has been promulgated, greatly extending the prohibition of exports.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, MARCH 26, 1915

PASSED WITH CHEERS.

IN LESS than ten minutes did Canada's Parliament pass the huge war vote of one hundred millions. It was passed enthusiastically and with cheers. That makes one hundred and fifty millions voted, and another hundred millions will be cheerfully voted should the war require it. Canada is in this war to stand or fall with the Empire to the last dollar and the last man.

AN IMPORTANT CAPTURE.

THE FALL of Przemysl is one of the big events of the war. It is more important than was at first realized, for the number of prisoners, stores and war supplies were larger than was anticipated. But the moral force of this event will also have a telling effect. Already the Germans have become pessimistic, and the fall of this great fortress will likely increase their gloom. It will at the same time give added enthusiasm to the Allies, particularly to the Russians, and we may expect some notable changes in the battlefront very shortly. The fall of Przemysl means that Germany's ally, Austria, is practically defeated. Germany's turn is next.

THE WAR SCANDALS.

THE INVESTIGATION going on at Ottawa into the purchases of war equipment is not so much a criticism of the Department of Militia, but rather a scathing exposure of the ethics of Canadian business and business men. Some of the wealthiest and most respected business houses in Canada have adopted methods that by comparison would make old Shylock a fairly respectable character.

In the first place, Canada was totally unprepared for taking part in a great war, yet the organizing and equipment of 33,000 men was accomplished in record time. The Minister of Militia, Major-General Sam Hughes, deserves every praise for the expeditious manner in which his department conducted the extraordinary task placed upon it. Naturally, the military authorities had to depend on the patriotism and moral sense of a great many persons in securing the large equipment necessary. Knowing that they had the Government at a disadvantage because of the war, firms of all kinds took the most selfish and unpatriotic advantage of their position.

The boots supplied were in many cases so bad that the companies offering them virtually committed robbery. It has been brought out that soles were padded with shavings and pieces of wood instead of being made of solid leather, while the heels would not hold together even for repairing.

Those who supplied bicycles were guilty of the same hold-up process. They charged the Government as much as they possibly could, manufacturers selling bicycles at the outside retail price in large quantities, when they should have sold them at their regular manufacturer's or wholesale price.

There are some rays of decency in this sordid scramble to cheat the Government and the Canadian people. In the selling of field glasses to the department, the evidence seems to show that some regard for decency and conscience was maintained.

It is all very well for Mr. Ames, of the Ames-Holden-McCready Company, to say that as far as he was concerned his company did good work, and that if anything was improper he did not know of it. That sort of milk and water plea won't go, and the Government will do well to treat every company or person who suplied improper equipment, or charged too much for their goods, as severely as possible. It really amounts to treason to sell at high prices to the Government equipment which imperils the health, efficiency and lives of those men who are risking and laying down their lives on the battlefields of France and Belgium.

What makes the affair worse is that everybody is being taxed to pay for their ill-gotten gains and the disgraceful equipment supplied. If the Conservative Government does not take some strong measures bringing these delinquents to time, the matter will not pass without an effective protest from the people. We do not blame the Government or the Department of Militia and Defence, for that which it could not help, but it is certainly the duty of the Government to punish those who tried to swindle the Canadian Government and people and who did impair the efficiency of the Canadian Overseas Forces. If that is the sort of spirit that is uppermost in Canadian business, the sooner these firms get a rude jolt the better it will be for all concerned.

THE DESPATCHES say the British cruiser Amethyst cut an important telegraph cable in the Dardanelles. A jewel like that has always had good cutting capacity.

EXPLOSIVES, MINES AND BIG GUNS.

ONE CAN FORM only a very inadequate idea of the terrific explosive power of a mine, a big 15-inch shell, or of the explosive in a single warship. A shell from a forward gun of the Queen Elizabeth weighs 1,950 pounds and can be easily thrown a distance of ten miles. If need be they can be shot a distance of fifteen or eighteen miles. These guns have the disadvantage that they are soon worn out. Some say they are good for 500 shots, others for only about 100, and the latter seems to be nearer the mark, the bore of the gun being eaten or worn away. An American artillery expert says, in the New York Herald, that the erosion of the bore of the guns

"is the outcome of a powder gas moving rapidly at a very high temperature, under pressure. 'Wash' is the wear and tear caused by the gases between the projectile and the walls of the gun. Erosion is seldom found serious in the powder chamber for the reason that the gas is not in rapid motion, nor is it serious at the muzzle, since the temperature of the gas has become considerably reduced by the time the muzzle is reached. About the seat of the shot, and a few calibre lengths beyond, the erosive action in big guns after some rounds is truly frightful. The metal is found gouged out in great fissures, and in consequence the powder gasses pass the shell, fail to exert full power in the base, and even tend, by reason of the unequal pressure, to give the shell a deflective line of travel. In other words, not only is velocity reduced, but all accuracy is gone. The British here found that their 67-ton guns had a life of 120 rounds, and the 111-ton guns a life of 75 rounds. The 67-ton guns can fire 400 half charges, or 200 three-quarter charges, and the 111-ton guns 250 half charges, or 125 three-quarter charges."

Of these big guns Britain has plenty, but ships have to go to some naval base like Malta to have them replaced.

The sinking of the big 12,000-ton battleship Irresistible by a mine is an example of the terrible power of explosives used. It recalls the mysterious blowing up of a battleship of that class, the Bulwark, at her moorings a few months ago. There were eighty tons of cordite, in addition to large quantities of lyddite and other explosives, on the British warship Bulwark when she blew to pieces at her anchorage in the Medway on the morning of November 26th.

A New York man has received the following letter from a friend in the navy that describes the explosion:

"You will have heard all about the Bulwark, I expect. It was one of the most shocking things that ever happened. One understands that sort of thing hapening in action, such as the Good Hope; but to happen as it did makes it seem much worse. Any theories about mines or submarines being the cause are quite out of it. I don't think there is the slightest doubt about the cause being internal. It probably started with the cordite, in some way or other, and, as she had about eighty tons of the stuff in her magazines, to say nothing of the lyddite and other explosives, etc., the fact that she was literally blown to pieces doesn't appear so surprising, after all. Still, I never thought a ship could meet with such total destruction as that.

"The Bulwark was moored a short distance from us at the time, and our decks were literally covered with debris of all sorts, including pieces of charred flesh, etc. I was having my 'tub' at the time, and for a short time certainly thought we had 'got it.' The explosion was terrific, of course, people on the upper deck being knocked down, but fortunately none were hurt. We had boats out in a matter of a few seconds, and at the same time closed all the bulkhead doors, and manned certain guns, in the event of possible submarines, etc. But even at the moment that possibility seemed most unlikely, considering our position.

"I won't go into any details of the gruesome business of picking up the few survivors and bodies. We got thirteen men out of the fourteen left alive on board here (three have since died, poor chaps!). Later in the day they were transferred to hospital ashore.

"Of the Bulwark, nothing remained visible after the smoke had cleared but about four feet of jagged iron plate showing above the water and a mass of floating wreckage—sorry remnant of a battleship and over 400 men."

Modern engines of war have undergone a wonderful development since Wellington fought at Waterloo. Their power is almost beyond calculation. Their accuracy is also of a high order, but their striking power is also a danger to their operations from the explosives necessary.

Home Garden Hints.

(Canadian Courier.)

During April you must give your garden a proper start if you mean to get the most out of it this coming summer. Do not be in any unreasonable haste, as there is no arbitrary date for starting. You can begin earlier on light soils than you can on heavy, unless the latter be underdrained. Good vegetable gardening rests on good cultivation. Fertilize with barnyard manure if possible. Get busy with the seed catalogues and plan your garden on paper. By so doing you can have twice as good a garden and five times as much fun. So measure your garden and draw your plan to scale. Rake over your garden, and burn the rubbish, using the ashes as a fertilizer. Get your tools out; repair and sharpen them; repair holes in the hose. Watch next week's issue for varieties of vegetables to plant and cultivation. If you intend making a hotbed, get busy, and sow at once radish, lettuce and onions. The latter sown in this manner and transplanted will be milder in flavour. Don't waste time and space by planting last year's seed of parsnips. Throw it away and buy fresh. Make a reel for your garden hose. Mark off on a rake handle a scale of as many feet as the handle permits off; two of these feet mark off into inches. This saves carrying rules or yardsticks at planting time. Have your garden line, stakes, markers and dibbers ready. Be sure and include potatoes, carrots, peas, onions, beans, and cabbages in your plan.

WAS WITNESS TO SHOOTING OF MRS. WHITE

Daughter of Murdered Woman Says Kilborn Made Threat to Use Gun

BROCKVILLE, Ont., March 26.—So far the only apparent motive for the alleged murder of Mrs. James White by Grant Kilborn is contained in the statement of Mrs. Jonah White daughter-in-law of deceased, made at the opening of the inquest. This is to the effect that Kilborn accused Mrs. James White of spilling a pail of slops in his apartments, which she denied. Kilborn, however, quickly drew the gun, Mrs. Jonah White stated, and shot her mother-in-law, holding the barrel of the weapon a few inches from the body of his victim. Mrs. Jonah White stated that she witnessed the tragedy.

Mrs. Mall, daughter of the deceased, who also states that she witnessed the shooting, states that on Tuesday Kilborn ordered her parents to vacate the premises, and as the result of this they were packing up Wednesday morning to move, and there was a vehicle at the door to take their effects away. Her father was loading up at the door, and she was in the kitchen with her mother when Kilborn came into the room where they were, from his own apartments on the other side of the house. Mrs. Mall says that Kilborn had a shotgun in his hand, and said that he was going to shoot her father.

Mrs. Mall says she told Kilborn he was not going to shoot anybody, and immediately the gun was raised and her mother was shot. Kilborn then returned to his own apartments, and Mrs. Mall ran to telephone the police. There was no quarreling previous to the shooting and no reason for the deed that she knows of. She intimated that Kilborn had been drinking, and returned from town on Tuesday night with a bottle of whiskey. James White, the husband, could give no reason or motive for the shooting, and said that he was loading up the waggon near the door of the house when he heard the report, and on going in found that his wife had been shot.

When taken from the woods where he was arrested, to the police station, Kilborn was in a dazed condition, and had little to say beyond that the shooting was accidental. He is about 45 years of age, and has spent all his life in this vicinity. He is married, but his wife is living in the United States.

Crown Attorney Brown went to the hospital with a view of securing an ante-mortem statement from the dying woman, but he was too late. She had lapsed into unconsciousness before his arrival.

OBITUARY

THE LATE DR. BELL.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

The funeral of the late Dr. Wm. Ralph Bell was held this afternoon to Beechwood cemetery, there being a large attendance, which included many prominent in the medical profession.

Dr. William Ralph Bell, one of the best known and oldest physicians in Ottawa, died at his residence, 151 Stanley Ave., at a late hour on Monday evening. Dr. Bell, who was in his eighty-third year, had been ailing for nearly two years, and had given up his practice about six months ago. He was particularly well known as a surgeon, and for many years was recognized as one of the Capital's best consulting physicians. He was born at Thirsk, and was the only child of the late William Bell, Esq., of Brook House, Thirsk, Yorkshire, England. He came to Cnaada in 1866, and settled in Ottawa, taking up his residence in the house in which he died.

He had completed his medical course before coming to Canada, being a graduate of Marshall College, Aberdeen University, and studied at a number of colleges on the continent. Dr. Bell was for many years a director of the Protestant General Hospital, and a consulting physician on the staff.

He was connected with the Masons, and a number of other fraternal societies. He was for years prominent in military circles, being an officer in the Governor General's Foot Guards when that regiment was organized, and later for a long period was surgeon of the Ottawa Field Battery, retiring with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He was a member of St. David's Episcopal Church, being one of the original members of the church when the congregation was organized twenty-six years ago.

Besides his wife, Dr. Bell is survived by seven sons, Dr. Wm. David Bell of Ottawa; Ralph, of Victoria, B.C.; Ernest, of Cochrane, Alta.; George, of Revelstoke, Alta.; J. Morrison and T. Grayson, of Ottawa; and Major Archibald de Mowbray Bell, officer commanding the ammunition park with the first Canadian Contingent in France; also three daughters, Mrs. J. B. Donaldson, 157 Stanley Ave.; Mrs. D. C. Cadenhead, of Three Hills, Alta.; and Mrs. Roy H. Parsons, of Peterborough, Ont.

BIG SCHEME IS LAUNCHED

First Step Taken in Ontario's Road Program

BILL INTRODUCED

TORONTO, March 26.—An important feature in the Legislature yesterday was the introduction of a roads bill, marking the launching of the $30,000,000 highway scheme. It was actually a skeleton bill which Hon. Findlay Macdiarmid brought down, and any of the larger features of the work will be begun only by proclamation. The intention of the Government is to prepare the way for a rapid advance in 1916, and the purpose of this year's legislation is to arrange the county system so that no wrench will be sustained when the broader machinery is brought into action.

The report of the commission has been followed to some extent, although in future their recommendations will be more feasible when financial conditions brighten. The Government will advance 40 per cent. of construction and 20 per cent. of all maintenance costs on all work undertaken. In the former case there is an increase from the 33 1-3 per cent. formerly allowed.

To encourage municipalities to assume responsibility beyond their confines the Government proposes, upon application from a county, to arrange local boards of trustees to define suburban areas and to superintend construction. The municipality appoints one man, the county another, and in case of disagreement on the third the Government chooses. On such work the Government will assist up to 40 per cent., or a maximum of $4,000 per mile, with the other parties shouldering the balance equally.

The bilingual question was raised in the Legislature yesterday afternoon, and in response to the demands of the French-Canadian members, the Premier promised a discussion of the subject later in the session.

Mr. Hugh Munro, member for Glengarry, advocated racial as well as public and separate schools for Ontario. Schools should be established to suit the various classes in each community, he thought. In his riding he said that practically all the French-Canadians could speak English, but where it was impossible for two sections to agree on the matter of schools, they should be permitted to have schools of their own.

"Your suggestion is to permit racial schools as well as public and separate schools," asked Premier Hearst.

"Yes," replied Mr. Munro.

"Would you give Germans and Italians schools, too," interrupted Mr. A. H. Musgrove of North Huron.

"That is not an issue," remarked Mr. Munro.

Mr. Rowell said the question was one for non-partisan consideration. Mr. Munro had no doubt made his suggestions with reference to his own constituency. Personally he would deplore a division in the separate schools, and hoped some other solution would be found.

Hon. Dr. Pyne introduced in the Legislature at midnight last night several important amendments to the Ontario Educational Act.

An amendment to the Industrial Educational Act will remove several restrictions on admission and entrance to classes.

Dr. Pyne introduced a bill to meet the Ottawa separate school situation by the appointment if necessary of a commission which would keep the schools open and pay qualified teachers.

The trouble which settlers in newer parts of the province are experiencing with wolves, influenced the fish and game committee of the Legislature yesterday to institute bounty increases.

The bounty on the timber wolf is raised from $15 to $20 per pelt, and a $5 bounty will in future be paid on his lesser brother, the brush wolf. It was stated that in the Kenora district children are kept from school through fear of these creatures.

How to Make Your Want Ad. PAY

Here Are three infallible rules for making a Want Ad. win

They were written by one of the greatest Want Ad. experts in America; they're worth reading.

FIRST: — Just be willing to stop and look the facts in the face candidly, honestly. If it's a room you want to rent, size it up from the renter's point of view, not yours, and then tell the truth about it. If it's plain, say so. If it's very plain but very cheap, tell 'em that. If it's handsome and rich and elegant, let 'em have the truth about that, too.

SECOND: — Write your own want ad. — write it yourself in your own plain, natural way, exactly as if someone had called and you were talking to them. It may make the ad. a line longer, but it will mean more and say more and people will believe it.

THIRD: — When you've done that — put it in the paper that is doing the most to help make its want ads. pay you — put it in The DAILY REVIEW. Don't bury your want ad. — give it a chance.

If you don't read the Classified you don't read the Paper.

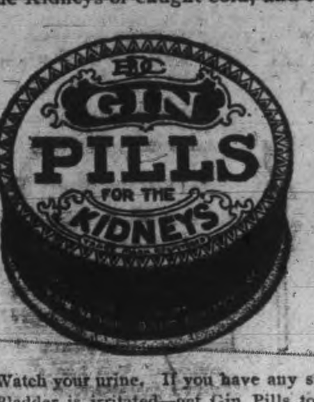
You Can Easily Tell—If You Have Kidney Trouble

Watch the urine. If there is a deposit of brick dust matter in the morning urine, or after it has stood in a vessel over night—if there is any trace of mucus—it is a sure sign of Kidney Trouble and you need GIN PILLS.

If the urine is highly colored—a reddish or deep orange—it shows that the Kidneys are not doing their work properly, and need GIN PILLS to strengthen them.

If there is pain in the back, it means that you have strained the Kidneys or caught cold, and that these organs are inflammed or irritated. Gin Pills will soothe and heal the kidneys and give almost instant relief from the pain.



Norwich, April 23rd.

"I was laid up for two months with Kidney Trouble. The doctor said it was not my Kidneys but I felt sure it was. I could not get any relief from his medicine so I told my husband when he went up town to get a box of GIN PILLS. My father always keeps them on hand. The pains were relieved at once and I am now up and doing my work."

U 29 IS SUNK

Famous Raider Believed to Have Been Under the Command of Commander Weddigen, is Gone With all Hands

LONDON, March 26.—The British Admiralty stated last evening that they thought the German submarine U-29, which recently sank four British and one French steamer in the English Channel, and damaged three other vessels, had been sunk with all hands.

The text of the official statement follows:

"The Admiralty have good reasons to believe that the German submarine U-29 has been sunk with all hands."

The Admiralty gave no details of how or where the U-29 was sunk, but the report that she was disposed of was received in shipping circles with a sigh of relief.

This makes the sixth German submarine, so far as the British Admralty has reported, sunk, five of them at least by British warships, since the outbreak of the war, and in only one case has the British report been denied by the Germans. Besides these, a French warship recently sank a submarine off the French coast, and three British merchant captains have put in claims for the rewards offered for merchantmen ramming German underwater craft. One of these claims, that of the captain of the steamer Thordis, has been allowed by the Admiralty and the reward paid.

According to a letter from the captain of the steamer Headlands, one of the ships sunk, published by The London Daily Mail on March 13, the U-29 was commanded by Capt. Otto Weddigen, who won fame and the Iron Cross on the U-9 earlier in the war by sinking the British cruisers Hogue, Aboukir, Cressy and Hawke. Assuming this statement to be true, and there seems to be little reason for doubting it, the loss of the U-29 with all hands means that Germany's most famous undersea hero has paid the penalty of his daring.

The Dutch steamer Medea was sunk off Beachey Head yesterday morning by the German submarine U-28, says a Dover despatch. She carried a cargo of oranges and was bound from Saloniki for London.

The Medea was stopped by the submarine and the crew were given fifteen minutes in which to leave the vessel. They did so and the submarine then fired several shots at the steamer, which remained afloat for an hour. The crew rowed about in their boats until picked up by a destroyer, which brought them to Dover.

The trawler Alprecht was attacked by a submarine yesterday. A torpedo passed within ten feet of the fishing boat while she was crossing the channel. A British patrol boat chased the submarine, which, however disappeared.

The Admiralty, in reporting the sinking of the Medea by the U-28, says:

"The ship was flying the Dutch flag and had a Dutch crew aboard. Her name, 'Medea, Amsterdam,' was painted in large letters on her sides. The ship's papers were taken by the Germans, who refused to return them."

TO SOLITARY CONFINEMENT

French Officer is Sentenced and Degraded

PARIS, March 26.—Col. Francois Desclaux, former paymaster-general in the French army, charged with stealing military stores, was convicted yesterday and sentenced to seven years solitary confinement and military degradation. His name was ordered removed from the list of the Legion of Honor.

Mme. Bechoff, the wife of a German, in whose house the stolen goods were found, also was declared guilty by the court-martial and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. A soldier named Verges, who was accused of aiding in thefts, was given a one-year sentence. All the other defendants were declared not guilty.

Charles Philippe, counsel for Madame Bechoff, protested during the summing up against the imputations that his client had organized in France a spy service, and that at her country home she had installed cement foundations for the emplacement of German cannon. These charges, he said, were calumnious inventions. Mme. Bechoff's father and uncle, he aversed, had fought for France in 1870, and a number of her relations were doing the same to-day. M. Philippe also referred to Mme. Bechoff's work as a nurse and as the directress of a hospital. Tears were dropping from the eyes of Mme. Bechoff as her counsel completed his address.

BUDAPEST CITY PLAGUE RIDDEN

Wounded Austrians in an Unspeakable Condition

NEW YORK, March 26.—A lurid but unvarnished story of the horrors of European war was bought to this country yesterday by Dr. Charles McDonald of the U. S. army, who arrived from Budapest by the Italian liner American. Dr. McDonald related staggering facts on conditions in the eastern theatre of war that will, in his opinion, soon convert Austria into a pest house.

"Budapest is a city of rotting, diseased and shattered human beings," Dr. McDonald said. "They are rotten from lack of care and diseased from lack of sanitation. Cholera and typhoid soon will be sweeping through Austria and Hungary like a prairie fire. Already the hospitals and many homes are crowded with cases of both.

"The Austrian soldiers are in a horrible condition. They live like vermin and with vermin. I mean that literally. You see, the Austrian soldiers, wounded at the front, were placed on trains, on flat cars sometimes, and brought to the hospitals without any food or water, attention or sanitation. When they reached us their condition was unspeakable."

CARRIED BY AN ASSAULT

Austrian Position on Mountain Crest Taken by Russians

PETROGRAD, March 26. — Complete success is attending the Russian advance on the front along the roads to Bartfeld and Uzsok, in the mid-Carpathian region, where the Austrians lost a very important position on the great crest of the Beskid Mountains, 100 officers, 5,600 men and several dozen of machine guns yesterday.

This strong position was carried by assault after the Russians had forced a wood which was a perfect entanglement of barbed wire and was surrounded by several layers of trenches. The Russian infantry burst through this fortress, hauling their field artillery with them to within 600 paces of the fortification. From this distance they bombarded it, crossed several deep ditches, burst through palisades, and carried the post, which was strongly armed and provided with internal defences. Fierce endeavors were made by the Austrians, who advanced in close rank formation, to retake this position, but they were dispersed by Russian rifle fire and broke under Russian bayonet charges. The Austrian attacking forces were partly annihilated.

Having had enough of the fighting the Austrians were forced to begin a retreat on other prepared positions.

In the north the Russians continued their advance towards the west of the middle Niemen river. Fighting has proceeded without important alterations on the right bank of the Narew and the left bank of the Vistula river.

The French War Office issued the following official statement last night.

"The day passed calmly, and there is nothing to report, except an attack at Notre Dame de Lorette, which was repulsed."

The following official statement was issued yesterday afternoon:

"In the Champagne district there was Wednesday a fairly lively artillery engagement. In the neighborhood of Hill No. 196 we repulsed three German attacks. In the Argonne the German attack at Fontaine failed. At Les Eparges we repulsed three counter-attacks.

"On the remainder of the front there was nothing to report."

Lieut. Charleston, of Ottawa, has volunteered for service with the Royal Flying Corps. He is at present taking a course in the Royal School of Artillery at Kingston.

TO ENLARGE THE SENATE

Legislation Will be Sought From Imperial Parliament

OTTAWA, March 26.—With several committees meeting morning, afternoon and evening there was a slim attendance in the House yesterday.

At the afternoon sitting the rail way estimates were taken into consideration. Hon. Mr. Cochrane stated that the I. C. R. showed a deficit of $83,000 for the ten months' period ending Jan. 31. He said that the deficit could have been avoided by laying off employes.

When the militia estimates were taken up last evening, Mr. Sinclair (Guysboro) and Messrs. Rhodes (Cumberland) and McCurdy (Queen's and Shelburne) read affidavits and counter-affidavits respecting the alleged mistreatment of the 17th Battalion, Nova Scotia, at Salisbury Plain.

At the morning sitting a resolution was passed providing for a joint address of both Houses to the Imperial Parliament asking for an amendment to the B. N. A. Act, so as to include the Senatorial representation of the west. A similar resolution passed the House at the last session, but the Senate put on a rider declaring that it should not come into effect until after the next general election. The Government refused to accept the amendment, but it seems to be generally understood that the resolution passed yesterday morning will be concurred in by the Senate as the Dominion elections will probably be over before the desired legislation can be obtained from the Imperial Parliament.

ARE IN TERROR OF THE YSER

German Troops Never Told They Are There Going

LONDON, March 26. — The Daily Chronicle has the following from its Amsterdam correspondent:

"That there is a terror of the Yser for many German soldiers seems certain from accounts I have lately received of scenes and incidents in the far western corner of Belgium. In spite of all the frontier guards, there is still a good deal of uncensored communication with Holland, and news occasionally reaches us from the heavy heart of the German lines. From this it seems clear that large bodies of young and unseasoned men are never allowed to know the exact locality to which they are being sent when they entrain. It is never for the rail-heads nearest the Yser, always it is for some destination whose name is not synonymous with certain death, for such is the reputation of the Yser front. A roundabout train journey is arranged in order to delude the soldiers still further if possible. According to their officers, the enemy in front of them is always more than half-beaten and ready to run away at the approach of the ever-victorious Germans.

LONDON, March 26—The Evening Chronicle published a despatch from Bucharest, Roumania, to the effect that the Turkish Government recently decided to surrender Constantinople and the Dardanelles to the attacking fleet. The surrender was all but arranged, The Chronicle says, when at the last moment it was blocked by Germany.

Ambassador Morgenthau made a visit of two days to the Dardanelles last week.

PENSIONS FOR SOLDIERS WIDOWS AND CHILDREN

Pension regulations for Canadian soldiers have been made by the Dominion Government, under authority of the War Measures Act, but the pensions will not go into force until they are approved by Parliament.

Pensions are provided for soldiers who are wounded or otherwise incapacitated while on service, and also for the widows, children or widowed mothers of those killed in action or dying from illness contracted on active service.

The degree of the pension depends on the extent of the incapacity of the soldier or officer. The first degree implies total incapacity and the degrees vary to the fourth, which implies that the soldier is rendered in a small degree incapable of earning a livelihood.

A soldier who is totally incapacitated may also draw half pay for his wife at the rate granted to widows of those who have died on active service.

The pensions for wounded or incapacitated soldiers range from $264 per annum for the rank and file of the first degree, to $2,100 for Brigadier-Generals of the first degree. The rates under the fourth degree range from $75 for the rank and file to $636 for a Brigadier-General."

FORTS MAKE FEEBLE REPLY

Violent Bombardment Resumed by Fleet in Narrows

LONDON, March 26.—The Anglo-French fleet has again entered the Dardanelles and opened a violent bombardment of the Turkish forts near the Narrows, according to a despatch from the Island of Tenedos yesterday afternoon. Several forts near Kilid Bahr replied feebly as the warships steamed into action, but soon ceased their fire. The bombardment was continuing when the last word reached Tenedos.

Reuter's correspondent at Tenedos Island forwarded the following yesterday:

"According to reliable information obtained from refugees from the Dardanelles, the Turks suffered enormous losses in the attack of the allied fleet on March 18. The greater part of the fortresses and powder magazines was reduced.

"The Turkish submarine defences are declared to have lost their military value, owing to the mines breaking adrift.

"Two British destroyers on Wednesday penetrated the straits to a considerable distance."

A despatch from Bucharest, Roumania, says:

"Turkey's entire fleet has sailed into the Black Sea to give battle to the Russian warships, according to a despatch received here from Constantinople yesterday. If successful in engaging and defeating the Russians, the Ottoman commander will then attack all the important coast towns on the Russian coast, the despatch adds.

It says that the Goeben, which was recently damaged, has been completely repaired, and that this battle cruiser, together with the Breslau, forms part of the Turkish fleet that has emerged from the Bosphorus.

COST OF HOUR'S FIGHT.

LONDON, March 26. — According to a writer in the War Budget, published yesterday, it would cost the Queen Elizabeth, Britain's new super-dreadnought, whch has been working havoc among the forts of the Dardanelles, $1,250,000 if she were to fight all her guns to full capacity for one hour. The Lion, flagship of Admiral Beatty, used up cordite and shell to the value of about $375 every time she emptied one of her 13.5-inch guns at the Blucher.

MILITARY NEWS

The men of the unit which left Peterborough on Wednesday morning for Belleville have been posted to "D" Company of the 39th Battalion.

Colonel Ogilvie left yesterday for Port Hope, Cobourg and Peterborough on military business.—Kingston Standard.

The Lindsay division of the 39th Battalion passed through Peterborough this morning en route to Belleville, the mobilization centre.

About half the men of the 21st Battalion of the Second Contingent encamped at Kingston, are on leave. This is their last leave before going overseas.

It is said that the 26th Battery for which recruiting is being carried on in the armouries, will occupy artillery park at Kingston as soon as the place is vacated by the 21st Battalion.

The 38th and 39th Battalions have been ordered to mobilize as quickly as possible. It is expected that by the first of April mobilization will be completed in Ottawa and Belleville.

Capt. Gray of the Second Contingent forces at Kingston is in Peterborough today in the interest of raising funds for the purchase of 6 field kitchens.

Belleville Intelligencer: This morning 110 enlisters from the 57th Regiment of Peterboroughh, arrived here as part of the 39th Battalion, which is being mobilized in this city. They were attired in their uniform of red, and were a fine body of men.

One more recruit was received at the Armouries this morning for the 26th Overseas Battery. Major Hilliard, recruiting officer, stated today that another quota of men would be sent to Kingston the first part of next week.

The members of the 46th detachment of Port Hope, who have enlisted for overseas service with the 39th Battalion, arrived in Belleville yesterday afternoon and, according to reports, they looked to be a fine body of men.

A despatch received by Sergt.-Major Sims, who is stationed at the Armouries, at Lindsay, announced the sad news that his brother, William, of the Oxfordshire, Buckingham, Light Infantry, was killed at Neuve Chapelle, France, while in active service.

Cobourg Sentinel-Star:—Mr. and Mrs. J. Dave have three sons who have enlisted. Albert is with the 2nd contingent, and George and a younger brother are with the 3rd contingent training here. Families with two sons are numerous, but the palm goes in this district to J. Hercock, who has four sons. There are two cases of father and son serving — Thos. Hastings with the Cobourg Heavy Battery, and his son Charlie with the Strathcona Horse, and Alf. Nicholson and his son Bobbie with the 1st contingent.

C. M. COPELAND TO SPEAK AT BOYS' BANQUET

Directors Will Meet to Discuss Proposed Changes to Y.M.C.A. Building

Mr. C. M. Copeland, secretary for the Ontario and Quebec division of the National Council, is in the city today and will be one of the speakers at the Y. M. C. A. boys' banquet tonight. After this banquet a meeting of the directors of the Y.M.C.A. will take place to deal with the question of remodelling the building and enlarging the dormitory accommodation. The directors have been working on this matter for a considerable time, and if plans go through they propose to expend a large sum upon the work. One of the proposals is to create dormitory accommodation for thirty-three roomers instead of thirteen as at present. In this way the revenue from the institution will be increased.

The other chief alterations consist of laying out the floor space differently, so that a more convenient and economical arrangement will result.

It is expected that something definite will develop from the directors' meeting this evening.

WHY TEACH A CHILD TO PLAY

This question will be answered in these columns during the next three weeks. Watch for it!

A special committee of the local Council of Women met on Wednesday afternoon to discuss the steps to be taken for the establishment of supervised play-grounds in the city this summer. Great enthusiasm was shown, and various plans discussed. The committee separated full of determination that at least one supervised play-ground will be fully equipped and running by July.

Most of the battles that are being fought in Flanders today were fought and won on the cricket fields of England's public schools ten years ago. What are these cricket fields but supervised play-grounds? Only in supervised play can boys learn the double lesson of how to bear defeat and how to temper victory.

King George, in discussing, with a wounded soldier, the misuse of the white flag by the enemy, said, "They don't play cricket, do they?"

Does your boy "play cricket?"

Mr. F. Etherington, who will be in command of the Queen's University Stationary Hospital at the front, is awaiting orders to recruit. He has more applications than he can accept.

At the annual meeting of the Babies' Guild at Hamilton Dr. Mullen said the death rate in that city among infants had been reduced from 1.56 in 1908 to .85, though the population had almost doubled in that time. He credited the Guild with the improvement in a large measure.

THE HAGUE, March 26. — With the parting salute, "Will see you again at London when we march in," the Germans yesterday permitted a party of 41 English women and six children to leave Brussels for Holland under the auspices of the American Minister to Belgium, Brand Whitlock.

Many British women remain at Brussels, fearing to risk the mines on the sea voyage.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, March 25.—What was termed "peace feeling" had much effect today in lowering the value of wheat. The market, which thruout the session leaned heavily to the bear side, was weak at the close and 1 1-4c to 1 3-8c under last night. Corn finished 7-8c to 1c off and oats varied from 7-8c decline to 1-8c advance. In provisions the outcome ranged from 2 1-2c decline to a rise of 7 1-2c.

Slackness of export demand was an element which received due notice from the wheat bears. Besides, domestic crop conditions seemed to take on a more favorable aspect, little being heard today of damage by Hessian fly.

Corn suffered from the depression of wheat. The big stocks on hand acted as a weight on the market and so, too, did the slowness of cash enquiry.

Liquidating sales in May option was the principal feature of the oats trade. Despatches from Texas said the oats acreage in that state was the largest ever known.

Liberal buying of May lard strengthened provisions. Weakness in the hog market seemed to be virtually ignored.

Mr. F. L. Hutchinson

FRANK LOSH HUTCHINSON, manager of the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, the largest hotel in Canada, has been appointed to the position of manager-in-chief of hotels of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He will enter upon his duties on the 1st of April, succeeding Mr. Hayter Reed, who retires, after a long and faithful and successful term of office. There are few hotelmen whose climb up the ladder of success has been speedier than that of F. L. Hutchinson.

He is a Canadian, born in London, Ont., in 1869, and a son of Charles Hutchinson, K.C., County Crown Attorney for Middlesex. At the age of sixteen he began his career as a clerk in the Bank of Montreal. At the age of thirty-two, or in 1901, he resigned from the bank to become a member of the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Everything was going smoothly until 1907, when that memorable financial panic hit the country, and Mr. Hutchinson also suffered in consequence. It occurred to him that the C.P.R. offered opportunities that appealed to him, and he asked for a job. He was sent down to the Chateau Frontenac as kitchen steward, and there began his hotel experience and his hotel career. Shortly afterwards he was moved to the front office, and soon after that was made assistant manager of the hotel. In less than a year from the time he began in the kitchen he was appointed manager. In 1911 he was appointed assistant to Hayter Reed, manager-in-chief, C.P.R. Hotels system. The following year he was made superintendent of C.P.R. hotels in Alberta and British Columbia. In August, 1913, he resigned from the C.P.R. to accept his present position as manager of the Windsor Hotel, Montreal. In returning to the C.P.R. to enter upon the duties of the highest office in the gift of the hotels department, Mr. Hutchinson does not underrate the work and responsibilities that go with it, but he is glad to go back, and he returns with that practically gained confidence that he "knows the ropes" to guide the destinies of twenty hotels, involving an invested capital of twenty-five millions of dollars.

Alphabet In Bible Verse.

In the twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra can be found every letter of the English alphabet. It runs thus: "And I, even I, Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily."

But, still more wonderful, in the eighth verse of the third chapter of Zephaniah is contained every letter, including finals, of the Hebrew language.—Westminster Gazette.

Ancient Glassmaking.

When the council of ten ruled Venice they issued a decree regarding the art of glassmaking. It runs: "If a workman carry his art beyond the limits of his country to the detriment of the republic, he shall be desired to return. If he disobey, his nearest relatives shall be imprisoned. If, in spite of their imprisonment, he remain obstinate in his wish to live abroad, an emissary shall be told off to kill him."

PAY WHOLE GRANT TO SCHOOL BOARD

Trustees Must Take an Oath of Office

Toronto, March 26.—Shortly after midnight, just before the adjournment of the Legislature, Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, brought down a number of bills of varying importance amending the educational laws. The present provision for paying one-half of the provincial school grants to the school boards and the other half to municipal councils is changed, and the entire amount will henceforth go to the boards. Legislation is presented opening the way for an administration building for the Toronto Board of Education. Another change is that in the future all trustees, members of boards of education, will have to take an oath of office.

Public, High Schools and Separate School Boards are given authority to provide medical and dental inspection in schools, and in the case of Public Schools to give meals to pupils whose parents are unable to provide them. The Ottawa school situation is met by a special bill that provides that in the event of the Ottawa School Board refusing to obey the regulations the English-speaking Roman Catholic minority will be relieved by the appointment of a commission to keep the schools open.

W. McDonald, Liberal member for North Bruce, brought in a bill to provide for the extension of legislative franchise to women.

CANUCK LEAGUE GRADUATES STAY WITH FASTER COMPANY

Good Showing Made by Dave Hilliard With Cleveland A.A.

The Canadian League in its four years' existence has sent up quite a few players who have stuck in higher company. Pitcher Ray Keating, of Hamilton, now with the N. Y. Americans, and Catcher Jimmy McAvoy, of Berlin, with the Philadelphia Athletics, are the only ones who have reached the pinnacle. Two men, however, who delivered last season in faster company were Pitcher Fred Herbert, formerly of Ottawa, who was one of the Toronto International League team's mainstays, and Outfielder Dave Hilliard, of Peterborough, who was drafted by the Cleveland American Association club. Hilliard, one of the Canadian League's fence busters in 1913, was hitting like a fiend for Cleveland last season till he broke his ankle.

Many players sold or drafted from the league, however, have come back or gone back. Matt Hynes, the London pitcher, and Lou Courtney, the Brantford shortstop, drafted by the Portland Northwestern League club in 1912, have disappeared altogether. Hynes lasted one season in the N.-W. and Courtney was injured in an auto accident. Joe McManus, with Ottawa, was given a trial by Cincinnati in the spring of 1913, and went fine for the first three weeks. He was farmed out to Nashville, and then wandered back to the Canadian, and finally down to Durham, where they throw the bull in Class D.

In 1913 Toronto drafted Bill Bradshaw, of Berlin, but he gave eight bases on balls without throwing a strike in his first trial and was turned loose. Dunlap, the London shortstop of 1913, sold to Cleveland, was with Omaha for the greater portion of last season, but was shot down to a D circuit in Oklahoma in August, and refused to report. Oskee Neale didn't burn up any batting or fielding record in the American Association. Artie Schwind, with Ottawa in 1912, led the Texas League shortstops last year. He will be higher up shortly.

Here are the 1914 records of those who stuck:—

	Bat.	Field.
McAvoy, Baltimore, AA; Berlin, 1913	.235	.972

Have Found Excuse.

BERLIN, March 26.—The seizure of the Dutch steamers Batavier V. and Zaanstroom in the North Sea by a German submarine, which took them to Zeebrugge, was due to the fact that both vessels had on board food and clothing for the Belgian army, it was officially announced here yesterday.

The two ships carried a great number of uniforms for the Belgian soldiers, as well as civilian clothing, 300,000 eggs, 40,000 kilograms of cheese and 6,000 hams.

Wolf Bounty is Raised to $20

Big game hunters will have to pay more for the privilege of bringing home their trophies. The Fish and Game Committee of the Legislature decided to increase the license fee, which in the future will be $3 for deer instead of $2, and $7 for moose instead of $5.

The committee also decided to check the slaughter of ducks, and henceforth only one flock of decoys will be allowed to each license, with thirty to a flock, and no two flocks nearer to each other than one hundred yards.

The bounty on timber wolves will be raised to $20, and the Government will take the skin. Brush wolves will bring a bounty of $5. In support of the bounty increase, it was pointed out that the wolves were destroying great numbers of deer, and also making it dangerous for children to go to school in the northern districts.

LACROSSE

At the meeting of the Madoc lacrosse club it was decided to enter the juvenile and intermediate series. These officers were elected:

Hon. President—Geo. West.

President—Wm. Cross.

1st Vice-President — Chas. Whytock.

Sec.-Treas.—E. E. Lancaster.

Executive Committee—F. Nayler, P. Nayler, C. Moon, R. Lewis and R. Waring.

Grounds Committee—Geo. Bassett, C. I. Ross and J. Rylott.

Manager and Captain—Geo. Bassett.

Manager and Captain of the Juvenile team—H. Trotter.

Sec.-Treas. Juvenile team — K. Whytock.

Several lacrosse enthusiasts from Millbrook were in Peterborough yesterday interviewing officers of the local club on the prospects for lacrosse in this district of the O.A.L.A. It is expected a club will be formed in the village to the south west in the course of a few days. Millbrook wants to play in this district.

HYDRO REPORT

Seventh Annual Statement of the Commission

TORONTO, March 26.—In the seventh annual report of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, which was presented in the Legislature yesterday, the total capital expenditure to the end of the last fiscal year is given as $10,130,048. Of this amount $5,960,856 represents the investment in the Niagara system, the balance being made up as follows: Port Arthur, $103,730; Penetang, $16,241; St. Lawrence, $124,201; Severn, $675,951; Wasdell's Falls, $201,327; Eugenia Falls, $239,739; Renfrew, $20,763. There is in addition a large amount charged to plant equipment, stock and tools.

The total power consumption on the Niagara system, based on the average horse-power, is 50,752, which cost the municipalities $465,098, and after allowing for maintenance and operation, interest and all other charges, the surplus applicable to sinking fund and depreciation, if that were chargeable this year, would be $149,123.

So far this month 10 marriages have been solemnized while last year the total number for the month was 12.

Do you know that no grocer can be sure of getting the same quality of tea in bulk twice running? It is impossible for him to have the extensive machinery that makes it possible to blend the choicest teas in varying proportions to form an absolutely uniform tea like Salada. So true is this, that many grocers will neglect quality and only think of the greater profit that bulk tea affords them.

CAUSES LEADING UP TO THE WAR

Paper is Read by Mrs. Jamieson to Daughters of the Empire

At the regular monthly meeting of the 57th Regiment Chapter, I.O.D.E., yesterday, an interesting paper on the "Causes Leading up to the Present War" was read by Mrs. Jamieson.

"An Open Letter Concerning Peace," published by the National Committee for Patriotic Service, was heartily endorsed by the meeting. In this letter attention was drawn to letters and circulars in prase of peace calling upon the women of the world to unite to stop the war. It was pointed out, however, that "although we hate war, and admit that there is always wrong at the root of war, we cannot unconditionally condemn all war, nor regard all belligerents as equally guilty." "The war in which we are now engaged is no mere scramble for gain nor quarrel over rights in which all parties are alike to blame. It is rather a struggle between the principles of law and force. We have drawn the sword to defend the rights of the weak, the liberty of the many, and the pledged honor of our Empire. To sheath the sword before this has been accomplished is to render useless the sacrifice of countless lives. Shall not the women of this country bear their part in this war, with the same high courage and steadfastness of purpose as animate our troops?"

The annual meeting of the National Chapter will be held in Halifax the latter part of May.

The visiting committee reported twenty visits paid.

The Oriental Tea Room has been well patronized under the auspices of the chapter. The closing tea will be held this (Friday) afternoon, and it is hoped that a large number will attend.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the management of the Oriental, to Mr. John for gifts af tea, to Messrs. Grafton & Co. for flags loaned for decorating, also to Mrs. Hounsell for large card.

Wool for knitting is still being given out, and the next one hundred pairs of socks will be sent (by vote of the chapter) to the men at Shorncliffe camp.

New Members.

Several new members were received into the chapter, and for their benefit the aims and objects of the order were read.

The chapter accepted with thanks the kind offer of the use of her house for an entertainment, from Miss Morrow. It is hoped this may be arranged soon after Easter.

"TRUE TO THE KING."

The great romantic military play, "True to the King," will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House Tuesday, March 30th, for one night only. The piece deals with an incident in the present war on the Belgium frontier and is most interesting and exciting. Alexander Loftus, who is at the head of a specially selected company, appears as Capt. Pierpont, a part he has enacted through all the principal cities in Great Britain. He may be remembered by his performance of Lord Ellerdine in "A Butterfly on the Wheel" through Canada. Miss Grace Welby, another member of the company, is the daughter of the celebrated Miss Bertha Welby. There are musical introductions by Mr. Jesse Willingham, the Irish tenor, Miss Mollie Mavis, the Australian soprano. The former will sing the now famous song, "It's a Long Long Way to Tipperary," and will also join Miss Mavis in duets which have been specially selected for the play. Mr. Wilford Jessop has lately come over from England on purpose to appear as Colonel Chard, the heavy part, and other members include Mr. Robert Barrat, J. C. Beazley, Chas. E. Adams and Miss Mabel Lea. The whole company has been carefully rehearsed and the piece beautifully staged. Everyone who likes a really absorbing play of military life with some good singing, should not miss the opportunity of seeing "True to the King."

THE STRAIGHT ROAD

The "Straight Road," featuring Miss Gladys Hanson made a very favorable impression at its first presentation at the Empire Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening. Not only is the acting and the setting of high order but the plot is both fascinating and entertaining. It's the story of a girl from the underworld shaking off evil companions and surroundings and beginning life anew. Among her new associates is one who keeps temptation before her almost continually but she stands the test and keeps on the "straight road." By a cleverly thought out ruse she reveals the bestial character of her tempter and saves a dear friend from his clutches.

The Advantage

of the Toric lens is, that it is ground exactly to fit the curve of the eye, thus saving the strain of accommodating the vision, which has to be done with a flat lens when looking anywhere, except straight ahead, they are also neater in appearance and cost very little more.

"Fighting has been going on at La Boiselle under conditions favorable to the French.

"In the Argonnė district, in the vicinity of Bagatelle, there has been bomb-throwing from one line to the other, although no infantry attack has taken place.

"After an energetic engagement, which lasted for several days, French troops were successful in reaching the top of Hartmanns-Weilerkopf, which they captured from the Germans. The French also made progress on the northeastern and southeastern flanks of the main army, taking more prisoners, including several officers.

"Germans have abandoned important war material and left numerous dead on these battlefields. The French losses were inconsiderable.

"A German aviator dropped several bombs on the town of Willer, to the northeast of Thann. Three little children were killed."

FEW LOCAL MEN WERE REJECTED

Peterborough Did Better Than Other Places

Five soldiers who went down to Belleville with the 39th Battalion from this city have come back having been turned down for various ailments. Two have gone to the hospital, one having to submit to a slight operation. The other has since been discharged from the hospital cured. Two of them will be able to join the ranks again very shortly and will likely go direct from here to Kingston. Out of the one hundred and twelve of the rank and file who went from Peterborough to Belleville there are only three altogether permanently rejected. Four were left here sick but they have all recovered and will be able to again don the khaki.

In comparison with other places who sent battalions to Belleville, Peterborough had fewer men rejected than any of them. Lindsay had over twenty-five turned down who had to be sent back, while Port Hope and Cobourg contingents numbering about seventy had twenty rejected. Quartermaster Sergeant Edwards who went to Belleville says the boys are lodged in what was once a canning factory. At present they were not receiving the same rations, but later on when everything was systematized each company would receive its rations separately, the boys therefore being more apt to receive a little variation in their diet.

Sergeant Edwards did not think they would be quartered at Belleville for more than six weeks, but would be moved to Barriefield just as soon as the weather improved.

CAUGHT ON FIRST.

He—"I'd no idea you would accept me the first time I proposed."

She—"And did you think I would the second time?"

He—"Oh, there would have been no second time."

BANQUET WAS HUGE SUCCESS

Y.M.C.A. Boys Ate To Their Hearts Content

HEARD ADDRESSES

W. R. Brock Points Way to City of Win

That every boy loves his stomach was again shown last night when three hundred young appetites attacked a glorious feed provided for the annual boys' banquet held in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium. All the established rules of etiquette were thrown aside by the youngsters who attacked everything in sight with a vim that spoke well for the future of the country. The air rung with "Y" yells, cat calls and indescribable noises. Youthful enthusiasm was permitted to find free outlet with the result that the boys had the best time imaginable.

The banquet and program was a splendid indication of the fine work being conducted among the boys at the "Y." Despite rather adverse conditions an increase in the membership of twenty-eight was reported. All the activities of the boys' department was heartily availed of and an extensive program has already been prepared for the spring and summer.

Besides the boys, there were present last night Mr. H. B. Cowan, Rev. C. G. Smith, of Belleville, Mr. C. M. Copeland, secretary of the National Council, Mr. James Connal, Jos. Wearing, Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. James Rollins, Rev. Canon Davidson, Mr. P. M. McCarrell, Mr. W. R. Brock, manager of the Brinton Carpet Company, Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., Chief of Police Thompson, and Mr. J. J. Howden.

Master Jack Whitehouse sang in fine voice a stirring patriotic song, "Boys of the King." Miss Ida Sanderson presided at the piano and supplied spirited music for the meal. The catering was all done by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. who excelled themselves in their menu and who made very accommodating waitresses for the occasion. Preliminary speeches were made by Chairman McCarrell and Rev. Mr. Smith of Belleville, after which the toasts were run off. The toast to The King was heartily honored, after which Mr. Hugh Austin and Wilfrid Adams did justice to the Young Men's Christian Association, and Charles Elliott and Romeyn Stevenson extolled the praises of the Ladies in real eloquent style.

But it remained for Mr. W. R. Brock to deliver the speech of the night, his subject being "The Way to the City of Win," full of inspiration and education to all. Mr. Brock urged boys to start out life with high ideals and a fixed purpose, and to fight manfully and honorably until they reached the goal of their ambitions. Riches was not everything in life worth striving for, and many men lost their appreciation of all that was worth while in life by setting their mind on the achievement of money. They should ever be honorable and self sacrificing and their's would be the reward.

Mr. C. M. Copeland also gave the boys a little talk. A flashlight photo was taken, and the boys then dispersed after singing God Save the King.

POTATOES WERE UNDER WEIGHT

John Faux, a farmer from North Monaghan was brought before the police magistrate this morning charged with selling a bag of potatoes that was underweight. Constable Lawrence was responsible for the apprehension of the man. The potatoes were found to be in a a bag not of regulation size and there was a decrepancy of nine pounds in the weight.

After a warning Mr. Faux was discharged.

WHAT ITALY WANTS --- WHY SHE MAY FIGHT

The black spots show why Italy may go to war against Austria and Germany. The Austrian province of Istria, in which is the historic city of Trieste, and the province of Tyrol, in which is Trient, have been battlegrounds before and the bone of contention between Austria and Italy for centuries.

TRANSPORTS NOW ANCHORED IN GULF FORTS DESTROYED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 27.—It has been established that forts at Dardanus have been destroyed and those at Kilid Bahr seriously damaged by the operations of the allied fleet in the Dardanelles, says a Havas despatch from Athens, dated Friday.

Sailing ships engaged in mine-sweeping were fired upon by Turkish field artillery posted at Erenkeui, but the batteries are said to have been silenced by fire from two battleships.

According to a despatch from Mytilene, three British and two French warships have anchored in the gulf of Smyrna with transports.

HIGH PRICE FOR MAPLE SYRUP

Opening Price at Market is $1.80 Per Gallon

Maple Syrup made its first appearance on the market this morning, but alas, the price at which it broke in was almost prohibitive. Upon the outside market $1.80 a gallon was asked, while inside the vendors put a figure of 55c a quart with the gem, or 50c without the gem, which would make a price of $2 a gallon. The syrup was certified by the vendors to be pure and undiluted, and what the reporter saw looked to justify such claims.

There was a considerable quantity of the liquid offered, but not a great quantity was sold, people evidently preferring to wait till the price dropped some.

It is the intention of Mr. McCrohan to thoroughly renovate the building. The transfer of the license will be considered by the commissioners.

DISTRICT MEETING IN BELLEVILLE

To Organize for Hydro Radial Undertaking

After the deputation in the interests of Hydro Radials made their appeal before the Premier yesterday, a meeting was held of all the representatives of this district. Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of this district, occupied the chair. In all there were over 100 representatives present and addresses were made by Adam Beck, T. W. Owen, ex-M.P. of Campbellford and several others. Each town represented put in a strong claim for the meeting of the district. Campbellford and Belleville put up a very strong fight but Belleville was successful. The date will be announced by the chairman, Mr. T. F. Matthews.

The representatives from Peterborough were His Worship Mayor Buller, Mr. T. F. Matthews, Ald. Green, Duffus, Stratton, McIntyre, Edgar, Evans, and Weir, also City Clerk S. R. Armstrong and B. D. Hall, President of the Board of Trade.

During the day Mayor Buller, accompanied by Ald. Green, Duffus and McIntyre looked over sections of roads and secured information which will come in handy when the paving of the roads in Peterborough will come up. The uartette also attended the Good Roads Convention and learned more of road-beds, etc.

Appeal Against Award Entered

City Solicitor Gordon was in Toronto this morning and before the Appellate Division of Ogoode Hall entered an appeal on behalf of the city against the award of the Board of Arbitrators in the matter of City of Peterborough and Peterborough Light and Power Co., by which the city had to pay $154,516 for the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Co.

The appeal will come up Monday but as Mr. M. K. Cowan, the city's chief counsel, is ill at Atlanta City, it will be necessary to have the case postponed for two weeks.

Rome, March 27.—Every measure possible has been taken by the government preparatory to the beginning of hostilities by Italy on the side of the Allies.

WAS REPAIRING ENTANGLEMENTS WHEN WOUNDED

Sergt. Victor Was Shot Through Both Legs

A cable from C. Beresford Topp to the Mail and Empire says:

Wounded men at Shorncliffe state that Stretcher-bearer Prince of No. 4 Company, 2nd Battalion, and one other man whose name is not available, have been recommended to headquarters for conspicuous bravery under fire.

Sergt. Victor of the 2nd Battalion was shot through both legs while repairing wire entanglements. Prince and his comrade took the stretcher out in broad daylight and brought him in. They were fired on by the Germans, but reached cover unhurt. On two other occasions they performed similar acts of heroism.

Sergt. J. B. Barnes, of the Sherwood Foresters, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal for gallantry in rescuing Sergt. Victor Holland, of the Toronto regiment.

On the occasion when the Canadians were first in action the Canadian artillery located a hidden German battery and placed a heavy shell under it, blowing it several feet in the air.

The Germans dropped a shell into a trench occupied by some Ontario men. The explosion knocked six down, but all miraculously escaped unhurt.

Ptes. P. E. Honour, of the 2nd Battalion, and J. F. Davis, of the Toronto Regiment, are the lastest arrivals at Shorncliffe.

TO TRAIN AT BARRIFIELD

39th Battalion Will Form Part of the Forces

KINGSTON, March 27. — The troops that will be mobilized at Barriefield will be the overseas troops of this division. These consist of the 38th Battalion, 39th Battalion, 8th Regiment Canadian Mounted Rifles, and the 7th Artillery Brigade. These units total over 4,000 men, and this will make the 1915 camp at Barriefield the largest that has ever been held on the heights.

The position of officer commanding No. 3 Company, C. A. S. C., vacated by Major Mitchell, who goes overseas with the expeditionary force, has been taken by Capt. J. Welch, of Kingston. Capt. Welch has arrived from Belleville, where he has been looking after supplies for the 39th Battalion.

FINE OF $20 IS IMPOSED

Owner of Cattle Did not Give Them Proper Care

THREE DAYS TO PAY

Magistrate Langley handed down judgment this morning in the case of Barnard Nevin, charged with cruelly ill-treating, abusing and torturing cattle, to wit, his three cows and one pig, his own property. Nevin was fined $20 and costs of $15.20 and given three days to pay.

Magistrate Langley found that the evidence disclosed that defendant was the owner of three yearling cattle and one 2-years-old of the bovine species, and a pig, which were confined in a barn or stable in North Monaghan, a short distance from Peterborough, and the defendant resided in Peterborough.

The prosecution sought to show that the animals were kept confined in such unsuitable quarters and so insufficiently fed as to amount to wanton and cruel treatment; no evidence was presented to prove abuse, torture or ill-treatment by acts of defendant other than the passive neglect to provide proper and sufficient food and proper housing. A number of witnesses were called by both prosecution and defence, and the evidence was chiefly directed to the physical condition of the beasts to show a state of starvation and want of nourishment, or the reverse, and there was no such discrepancy in the evidence of different witnesses and sometimes in the evidence of the same witnesses.

By reason of a complaint made to him, A. Moore, county constable, went to see the cattle on Thursday, March 11th. Mr. Akers, the tenant on the place, who permits the defendant, the landlord, to keep the cattle in the stable or barn, showed them to him. Mr. Moore swore that at this time he found the pig "as poor as can be," and that there was not a bite of food n the pen or in the premises, that the cattle were very, very thin, and that by the actions of the cows and pig he said they were hardly strong enough to move for want of food and hardly able to eat. He ordered some food sent out from Denne's store.

For the defence, several witnesses were called who had examined the cattle shortly after the charge had been laid, to swear as to their condition.

"I deemed this evidence relevant, as the case for the prosecution largely depended upon the natural deduction to be drawn from their physical condition, and several witnesses had sworn that a few days' good treatment or different treatment would make little or no appreciable difference in their condition, although it was to be noted that Dr. Johnston, the only veterinary surgeon called, swore, on cross-examination, that food for two days just before he was called would make a great improvement.

"I do not consider the evidence of the defence (considering also the evidence of Akers) sufficient to offset the prima facie case made out by the testimony. The conclusion is that the defendant, being the owner of, and having confined them, and being in duty bound to care for them, he, during the month of March, 1915, and prior to the date of information, neglected properly to care for them to an extent amounting to wanton and cruel treatment, and, amending the information accordingly, I convict him of the offence charged."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, MARCH 27, 1915

SIXTEEN YEARS AGO AND NOW.

HAPPENING the other evening to pick up a volume describing the South African war, we glanced over the pages detailing the part Canada played at that time. Comparing what Canada did then with what she is doing now in the greatest war in a hundred years, at least, one is struck by the difference—a difference that shows the great progress of this country in the short space of sixteen years. Replying to Canada's offer of men, the first contingent then was to be 500 men, but so vigorous was the enlistment that 1,000 men had to be taken. Two other contingents of 1,000 men each were sent, besides the famous Strathcona Horse. At different places these volunteers, or a part of them, were drawn up on review and speeches made. It is recorded that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and members of his cabinet inspected one thousand men at Quebec and made an inspiring speech on the occasion. The late Hon. A. G. Blair also spoke to the thousand men who were going to cross the seas to South Africa. Flags were waved, war extras issued, war songs written, and everybody thought Canada was doing big things. It was a big thing, for it did much to instil in the Canadian people a spirit of Empire or Imperialism that solidified our far-flung domains. But it did not at all represent so much what Canada was able to do then, as the principle she thereby laid down. This principle has been concisely expressed by the sentence, "When Great Britain is at war, Canada is at war."

Following the South African war, a period of immigration began that must always be one of the most important factors in Canadian development. Year after year an army of new citizens arrived until it reached the number of nearly half a million in one year. In the hurried chase for wealth and in the great development that has taken place in Canada, those who went to the South African war have been almost forgotten, but their work still lives. Canada did not realize how much she had grown or how fast a pace she had maintained until this war broke out. In some things Canada was deceived or had made mistakes, but her capacity to raise and equip an army of one hundred thousand men for overseas service has been fully demonstrated. This army stands in strange contrast with the small bodies sent forward a few years ago to the South African war, but the spirit of imperial unity and loyalty is the same, although it has no doubt grown in strength and importance. Henceforth the fighting strength of Great Britain will be reckoned, not as that of the British Isles, but of the British Empire, and in that Empire Canada will have an honoured and important place. Sixteen years has sufficed to raise this country from the status of a big colony to a powerful dominion.

OVER ONE THOUSAND PETERBOROUGH MEN VOLUNTEERED.

OVER ONE THOUSAND men from Peterborough have volunteered for active service, and of these over seven hundred have been accepted and found places in the various Canadian contingents or in other divisions as reservists. That is an excellent showing for this city, with a population of 22,000. On a basis of population, to equal what Peterborough has done, Toronto should have had 25,000 volunteers, and over 17,000 accepted. Of course, this comparison is hardly fair, because discounts should be made for various reasons in the enlistment from larger places like Toronto. The figures for Peterborough include also a few from the surrounding country. They are of a magnitude, however, that indicates the spirit of this locality, and, we think, also of the whole of Canada. There are many places which have not done as well, but it must be a satisfaction to the citizens of this city and an example to other places that Peterborough knows what its duty is when danger threatens the Empire.

A BIG HYDRO-SURPLUS.

THE REPORT of the Hydro-Electric Commission is one of the most satisfactory in its history. It shows that municipalities have an aggregate reserve of two and a half millions, and that all contingencies are well provided for. Those who say that a commission cannot be efficiently operated in Ontario are wrong, as this one has performed its duties in an exceptionally able manner. It has delivered electric light, heat and power to the people of Ontario at greatly reduced prices, and closes its year of business with a large profit. That is good management, and should enable further reductions to be made.

THE REPLY of Mr. Burnham to the president of the local board of trade, who made inquiry regarding the public building to be erected here, shows how injurious to public interests are the political tricks of a factious Opposition which has objected to expenditure during war-time.

SCOPE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

WHILE the war and the demand it is causing for suplies, especially foodstuffs, are the main reasons for the "Patriotism and Production" campaign, the subject matters discussed have a wider aspect than the immediate present. They mean the welfare of the district, the country and the Empire, both now and hereafter. With all the principal European supply countries engaged in deadly conflict, there will be no produce of quantity or quality coming from thence. They will not only require every ounce for their own consumption, but will be compelled to purchase largely from neutral countries. Great Britain, above all, will have to be fed and clad, and Canada, being her largest, nearest and absolute ally, will have in great measure to furnish the necessities. Nor will Great Britain be the only member of our Empire that will need what we can produce. New Zealand and Australia will also be importers. Thus, then, the markets are assured for years to come, practically for all time, and not only for grain, but also for livestock, far, as the seasons pass, the latter bid fair to become scarcer and scarcer. Cattle cannot be bred, raised and placed on the market in one season; nor can horses, nor can sheep; hence the demand for action is instant. In short, Canada's opportunity is right now.

NO RECIPROCITY IN AUTOMOBILES.

THE AGITATION to have "reciprocity in automobiles" between Canada and the United States should not be encouraged. Americans would tear up the dust on our roads and pay nothing for their up-keep. They would outnumber Canadians who used American roads ten to one, and would likely cause a great increase in what are called flag incidents. Canada is at war with Germany and in no mood to ignore flag incidents. Besides, Americans very frequently do not realize that this is to them a foreign country and that they must respect its laws. Failure to understand this has already resulted in the death of two Buffalo men, and further incidents like that might occur and cause friction between the two countries. When Canadians go to the United States, let them pay for their automobiles, and let Americans coming to Canada do likewise.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

OUR FRIEND, the Orillia Packet, makes the misstatement that we called the Toronto Star editor a cheap skate. We merely said his great familiarity with ham and eggs summer resorts would indicate him to be so. He may not be, but anyway, supposing he did receive as big a salary as Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that would not alter the case, would it?

THE SINKING of Dutch vessels by German submarines seems to indicate that Germany is reckless now whom she hits, or that she has confidence in succeeding eventually in this war. If her confidence is well founded, the British are badly misinformed.

THE HON. F. ASHTON is in Montreal from Australia. He says Canada ought to import meat and mutton from Australia as they would greatly lower the price of those articles in Canada. Is he a friend of the Canadian farmer?

ECONOMISTS predict a boom in trade when the war is over. Increased and improved production now means riches for Canada then. Markets are not won in a day.

A GOOD MANY soldiers may object to being put on the "Indian" list.

A QUESTION—will it be in order to call an "Indian" a soldier?

WIVES' VOICES.

(Thomas Hardy.)

Rain came down drenchingly, but we unblenchingly
Trudged on beside them through mirk and through mire,
They stepped steadily — only too readily!—
Scarce as if stepping brought parting time nigher.

Great guns were gleaming there — living things seeming there—
Cloaked in their tar-cloth, upnosed to the night;
Wheels wet and yellow from axle to feloe,
Throats blank of sound, but prophetic to sight.

Lamplight all drearily blinking and blearily
Lit our pale faces outstretched for one kiss,
While we stood prest to them, with a last quest to them
Not to count perils that honour could miss.

Some one said, "Never more will they come! Ever more
Are they now lost to us!" Oh, it was wrong!
Howsoe'er hard their ways, some hand will guard their ways,
Bear them through safely — in brief time or long.

Yet — voices haunting us, daunting us, taunting us,
Hint in the night-time, when life-beats are low,
Other and graver things. . . . Hold we to braver things —
Wait we—in trust—what Time's fulness shall show.

Dangerous Optimism.

(London Daily Mail.)

Look at what is before us. The deadlock in France and Flanders has to be broken, the Germans have to be cleared bag and baggage out of Belgium; Silesia and Westphalia will have to be occupied before there can be any rational talk of beating Germany to her knees. All the permanent factors favour the Allies, but on one condition only—that we put forth the maximum of our strength. This is the time to redouble our endeavours in preparation for the exceedingly stern and arduous but not insuperable task that lies ahead of us.

A Joke on the Globe.

(Catholic Register.)

The Globe had better be more careful in its headings, or it will have a lawsuit on its hands. A week or so ago it chronicled the death of a fire chief as follows: "Veteran fire chief answers his last call." Even a Scotchman can read between the lines here and see the joke. But the Globe should not be too frisky. "The frisky lamb lands once too often in the soup," as Poor Richard didn't say!

Obsolete Oratory.

(Detroit Free Press.)

With Ireland fighting side by side with England, most of the St. Patrick's Day speeches this year had to be rewritten.

PASS YIELDED BY AUSTRIANS

Russians Now in Complete Occupation of Lupkow

FORCING RETREAT OF FOE FROM SUWALKI

PETROGRAD, March 27.—Air reconnaissances have established the fact that the Austrians have withdrawn altogether from the Lupkow Pass in the Carpathians. The Russians are now in unopposed occupation there. Signs also point to the fact that the Austro-German armies are availing themselves of the drenched mountain roads to draw back into Hungary, their strongest column containing the main German force. This army is slowly changing its position south of Beskidas and Koziome. It is expected that in accordance with the Budapest-Berlin compact the Magyars and Germans will now prepare a stubborn defence campaign for the plains of Hungary. Large calibre guns have been brought to the Austro-German position in Yuz, where the cannonade is intensifying, with occasional fierce infantry fighting.

The strong Russian threat inside the border of East Prussia, in the direction of Tilsit, had the desired effect of hastening Gen. von Eichhorn's retreat from Suwalki. The shooting of the new German infantry is utterly inadequate. Young prisoners admit that they had no musketry training until they entered the first battle.

The expedition to Memel destroyed the depot of contraband, through which necessaries had been taken from Russia into Germany. Documents were seized disclosing the organization by which the traffic was carried on.

The comparative inactivity along the whole of the western front, such as has not prevailed for weeks, leads to the belief in artillery circles in London that both armies are awaiting the turn of events in the Carpathians before attempting to strike a hard blow.

The British are resting on their victory at Neuve Chapelle, and the Germans, though they are reported to be massing troops for a fresh offensive, have undertaken nothing in the west comparable to their rush of last autumn.

Germany is declared to be sending vast reinforcements into the Carpathians and the newspapers deem it not illogical to conclude that this fighting at the gateway to Hungary, is having, and will continue to have, a marked influence on the German campaign in the east and in the west.

Rumors of the approaching intervention of Italy, coupled with assertions that Austro-German troops are massing along the Italian frontier, continue to be prominently printed, but foundation in fact for them is hard to find.

South of Nieuport the allies yesterday achieved another considerable success, capturing the northern part of St. George's farm, which has been a constant source of annoyance from the enemy right in front of the allied lines. This place is a strong group of farm buildings, with stables, dairy and farmhouse, enclosed in a square after the style of the old French chateaux. It gave considerable cover for the German infantry, supported by machine guns. This place was subjected to a heavy artillery fire and rushed with the bayonet. The allies occupied the position after the Germans were driven out of it.

Nieuport has been the centre of fierce artillery duels, preparatory to an advance in that region.

Six French aviators made a daring raid on the Zeppelin hangars at Frescaty and the railway station at Metz, causing a panic among the inhabitants and soldiers. In all they dropped twelve bombs in the midst of a violent gunfire. Another aerial squadron at the same time flew east of Strassburg and bombarded a barracks. The result of their visit is not announced.

The spraying of French trenches with a burning liquid at the Reich Ackerdopf in Alsace did not force their evacuation this time, the soldiers having found means to combat this new form of offensive.

Elsewhere on the battlefront there has been a bombardment in the Champagne region, but no infantry attack, and north of Badenviller in Lorraine the French troops have solidly organized the positions that they have won from the Germans since Monday.

Dodge Brothers Active In Foreign Field

Dealers Appointed in Cuba and Norway; Sample Cars Being Shipped Out to All Quarters of Globe.

With quantity production in full swing at the Detroit factory, Dodge Brothers are carrying out their announced policy of building up a substantial foreign trade simultaneously with the development of the American field.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that competition for foreign sales rights on Dodge Brothers' car is even more keen than that displayed by United States dealers last season. First of the foreign dealers to receive appointment is Aktieselskabet Auto, of Christiania, Norway. The first consignment of cars for this company was shipped from the factory February 13th.

E. G. Willems, foreign representative of Dodge Brothers, who has been in the West Indies for the past few weeks, has cabled the company announcing the appointment of Brouwer & Company as Dodge Brothers' dealers for Havana, Cuba, and he has also appointed a dealer for the Isle of Pines. Mr. Willems will later visit Jamaica, Porta Rico, Panama, Venezuela and British Guiana.

Recognizing the preference of foreign agents for dealing directly with the factory, Dodge Brothers are handling all export business from the general offices in Detroit. Dealers from all quarters of the globe have cabled and written to Detroit for sales rights on the new car, but practically all appointments are held in reserve until a representative of the company can personally visit each dealer with a view toward securing the best possible representation.

This has not interfered with the shipment of sample cars, however, and others are going out at frequent intervals to reputable dealers. The first Dodge Brothers' car shipped out of this country for Ireland was sent as a sample to a dealer in Dublin, on the steamer Arabic, two weeks ago. Six cars have been sent to Manila, two to Sweden, and others will soon follow to the Canal Zone, New Zealand, Australia, Denmark and Great Britain.

The trial is fixed for the spring sessions of the High Court, commencing on Tuesday next, and Mr. Justice Meredith will be on the bench. It is said that T. C. Robinette of Toronto will be the counsel for the defence.

We may not take ourselves seriously, but it is hard to forgive the other fellow for not doing so.

How to Make Your Want Ad. PAY

Here Are three infallible rules for making a Want Ad. win

They were written by one of the greatest Want Ad. experts in America; they're worth reading.

FIRST: — Just be willing to stop and look the facts in the face candidly, honestly. If it's a room you want to rent, size it up from the renter's point of view, not yours, and then tell the truth about it. If it's plain, say so. If it's very plain but very cheap, tell 'em that. If it's handsome and rich and elegant, tell 'em have the truth about that, too.

SECOND: — Write your own want ad. — write it yourself in your own plain, natural way, exactly as if some-one had called and you were talking to them. It may make the ad. a line longer, but it will mean more and say more and people will believe it.

THIRD: — When you've done that — put it in the paper that is doing the most to help make its want ads. pay you — put it in The DAILY REVIEW. Don't bury your want ad. — give it a chance.

If you don't read the Classified you don't read the Paper.

EYE WITNESS' REPORT

No Sensational Incidents in Life of Troops

OTTAWA, March 27.—The first despatch from Sir Max Aiken, the official "Eye-witness" with the Canadian forces at the front, was received here last night. It says, in part:

IN FLANDERS, March 26.—None can examine what, for want of a better name, is called "the front" of this amazing war without realizing the truth of what has been so often said, that it is a war almost without a front. As one approaches from a distance, the actual point of contact between the opposing forces, one is struck even more and more by the immense numbers which are converging as it seems for some great military purpose, but the nearer the front approaches the more completely does all that is spectacular disappear until finally the flower of the youth of Europe disappears and is swallowed by immense but barely visible lines of field fortifications.

And now the Canadian division has reached the front. The long and tedious winter discomfort of Salisbury Plain, never resented, but always disliked, already seems far away. No one in the Canadian division grudges the honor which was paid to Princess Patricia's Light Infantry to carry first the badge of Canada on the battlefields of Flanders. It was freely recognized that this regiment had arrived with greater technical knowledge and had reached a degree of efficiency which the other battalions could hardly equal without longer preparation. The time has not come in which it will be possible to describe the fortunes of the Princess Patricias, but it can be said that the battalion has proved itself worthy of fighting side by side and on equal terms with the army of veterans and heroes which has held the trenches in the horrible winter of Flanders.

As Lord Kitchener has stated, the Canadian troops have now, after gaining some further preliminary experience, taken their turn as a division in the trenches. Nothing sensational has happened to them. It has not up to the present been their fortune to be swung forward in a desperate attack or to cling in defensive tenacity to the trenches which the Germans had resolved to master. There have, of course, been casualties. One does not enter or leave trenches without casualties, for the sniper never fails to claim his daily toll; but, the trench experiences of the Canadians have not up to the present been eventful, as one judges incidents in this war.

Nor, indeed, have our artillery failed to hold their own. The gunners inherited from the division which preceded them in the trenches a disagreeable inheritance in the shape of an observation post, which had long harassed and menaced our lines by the information which it placed at the disposal of the enemy. We were so fortunate as to put it out of action in the third round we fired—a success very welcome as an encouragement and giving a very substantial relief from an unewlcome scrutiny.

Our infantry were not especially engaged in the fighting at Neuve Chapelle, but our artillery played its part in that triumph of artillery science which preceded the British attack, and our men were ready during the whole fight for the order which, had the tactical situation so developed, would have sent them, too, to make their first assault upon the German trenches. And there were not a few who were longing for that order. For on the very first night on which our men were put into the trenches the Germans began to call out, "Come out, you Canadians; come out and fight!"

The following casualties were announced by the Militia Department this morning:

Princess Patricias — Killed in action, Pte. David Geekle, Lc.-Corpl. Charles Horner, Pte. Angus McPhee, Pte. Allen Strachan, Pte. Harry Crabtree. Died of wounds, Corpl. Walter McKenzie. Slightly wounded, Pte. Charles A. Gardner. Severely wounded, Pte. Walter F. Woodhams, Pte. John Masson, Corpl. Charles McMillan. Wounded, Pte. Henry J. Logan, Pte. Thomas Sullivan, Pte. Archie McDonald, Sergt. Fred. Gillingham, James Boxall, William H. Sharpe, Pte. David W. Cuthbert. Severely wounded, Sergt. John Anderson.

First Battalion—Killed in action, Pte. William Lloyd. Seriously wounded, Pte. W. Moore.

Seventh Battalion — Slightly wounded, Pte. Robert A. McKay, Pte. George Stonestreet.

Thirteenth Battalion — Severely wounded, Pte. John Stewart. Reported wounded, Pte. G. H. Pearce.

Fourteenth Battalion—Dangerously wounded, Pte. Edward G. Brown.

Sixteenth Battalion — Slightly wounded, Pte. Ambrose T. Smith. Wounded, Sergt. Geo. H. Slessor, Pte. Jeffrey A. Sceales.

Nursing sisters — Dangerous ill, Marcella Percy Richardson.

SITUATION UNCHANGED.

No Confirmation That Big Battleships Have Entered the Dardanelles.

LONDON, March 27.—The situation in the Dardanelles, so far as is known, remains unchanged. The Admiralty has vouchsafed no confirmation of the report that the super-Dreadnought Queen Elizabeth and other ships, among them the battleship Triumph, which recently bombarded Smyrna, have entered the straits.

Reports from allied sources are to the effect that German officers are leaving Constantinople and that the situation in the Ottoman capital is gloomy; but there is nothing official to show that the Turks are discouraged over the outlook.

"Owing to the damage caused by the shore torpedo tubes in the Dardanelles," says The Daily Mail's Athens' correspondent, "the allied admirals in a council of war have decided to designate certain warships to fire at the forts at long range.

"Officers of the allied fleet declare to the correspondents that the forcing of the straits at all costs is certain."

To Have Warship Escort.

AMSTERDAM, March 27.—The Cabinet met yesterday afternoon to consider questions arising from the sinking of the Medea. During the morning the Foreign Minster conferred with the Minister of Marine and the chief of the Dutch naval staff.

It was reliably reported that Dutch warships would hereafter escort all merchantmen of Holland leaving Dutch ports.

WHAT MOTHERS SAY OF BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use no other medicine. She quickly realizes the Tablets are an absolutely safe remedy and one that will give sure results. Concerning them Mrs. R. L. Wright, Penabit, Sask., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my three babies and think so much of them that I always keep them in the house." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOLLAND ROUSED

Paper Says Sinking of Medea Was not an Accident

LONDON, March 27. — Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent gives the outline of statement printed yesterday by The Handelsblad of the sinking off Beachy Head Thursday of the Dutch steamer Medea. The article says that the steamer's orange cargo could not have been considered conditional contraband, and adds:

"The sinking of the Medea is an act of arbitrary violence which cannot be considered a lamentable error. This action as well as attacks on Dutch ships from the air, can only be explained on the assumption that Germany feels certain that so long as no foreign troops or warships attack our country every act of arbitrary violence against Dutch subjects or property is permissible.

"We are convinced that complete compensation must be demanded from Germany. The last act is certain to arouse great uneasiness and bitterness here."

A cable from The Hague says members of the Netherland's Government are refraining from any comment on the subject of interference with and destruction of Dutch shipping by German submarines beyond saying that requests for explanations have been sent to Germany with a view to an eventual protest after Berlin's reply has been received.

The Ministry held an extraordinary council yesterday afternoon following a conference between the Foreign and Marine Ministers and between the Marine Minister and the chief of the naval staff. The subjects under discussion were not made public.

The newspaper are taking a serious view of the situation owing, as they put it, to the repeated "unpleasant incidents."

The Dutch Government already has sent to Berlin a protest against the alleged attack by a German aeroplane on the Dutch steamer Svenbergen.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Hundreds of People Have Found "Fruit-a-tives" Their Only Help

READ THIS LETTER

Superintendent of Sunday School in Toronto Tells How He Cured Himself of Chronic Rheumatism After Suffering for Years.

55 DOVERCOURT ROAD, Oct., 1st. 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH

Rheumatism is no longer the dreaded disease it once was. Rheumatism is no longer one of the "incurable diseases". "Fruit-a-tives" has proved its marvellous powers over Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago—in fact, over all such diseases which arise from some derangement of stomach, bowels, kidneys or skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, March 26.—Assertions that the Turks had disagreed with the Germans and that Roumania and Bulgaria were about to take a hand in the war put the wheat market today under a good deal of selling pressure. As a result, prices closed weak at 1 7-8c to 3 7-8c decline. Other losses for the day were 5-8c to 3-4c and oats 3-8c to 5-8c. Provisions gained 10c to 20c.

Auspicious conditions for the domestic crop were influential as a means of keeping sentiment adverse to the bulls. Besides, cash and export demand was slow, both here and at the seaboard.

A further source of discouragement to holders was a report that Russia was preparing to ship 300,000 tons of wheat from Vladivostok.

Aggressive selling by pit speculators forced down corn. Wheat weakness formed the chief incentive, but in addition eastern demand was poor and Argentine prices at a sharp decline.

Oats sagged with corn and wheat. The best buying was attributed to shorts.

Despite some wavering at the outset provisions finally took the upgrade. Packers and other recent sellers were conspicuous in the purchasing, but carried the market higher.

MISSIONARIES ARE IN PERIL

Efforts Are Made to Protect Those in Persia

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Alarming reports of atrocities, including the hanging of sixty men taken from the French mission, and five from the American mission compound at Gulpashan, Persia, stirred up the State Department yesterday to further efforts to obtain protection for American missionaries and refugees in the vicinity of Urumiah, Persia, where an uprising of Kurds threatens a general Christian massacre.

It was learned through the British Embassy that the British consul at Tabriz, Persia, not far distant from Urumiah district, acting in conjunction with the American consul, had appealed to Russian commanders in the region near Tiflis to send soldiers to the rescue of the helpless Christian populace. The Russian generals had delayed action, awaiting orders from Petrograd.

The Servian legation yesterday afternoon stated that out of these they were making a selection of fifteen doctors, whose names will be announced in a day or two.

Canadian Accused of Treason.

LIVERPOOL, March 27. — George A. Gatehouse, sometime manager of the Montreal branch of Sloan & Co., cotton merchants, Philadelphia, was charged at Liverpool yesterday with trading with the enemy. The crown prosecutor described the case as serious. The prisoner came to England after the outbreak of the war, apparently to transmit cables for his firm from the continent. While doing this, the crown alleged, he had made elaborate preparations to sell a species of cotton, used for the manufacture of explosives, to German agents.

The prisoner is a Canadian by birth and was arrested at a prominent Liverpool hotel when about to take passage across the Atlantic.

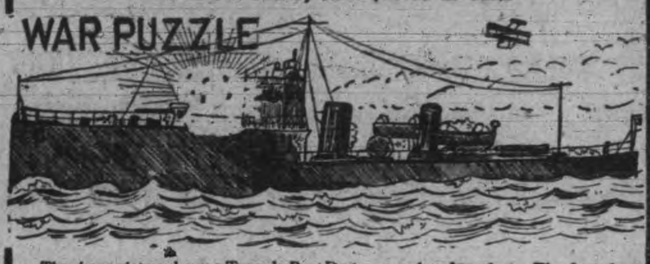
WAR PUZZLE



The above picture shows a Torpedo Boat Destroyer and an Aeroplane. The Aeroplane belongs to the enemy. It has just dropped a bomb on the deck of the war vessel. Some of the crew have been knocked down by the shock, and some have jumped into the water in an endeavour to save themselves by getting aboard other boats that are near by. Can you find the faces of the fourteen men in this picture? Some will be easily found, others are harder to discern, but by patience you can propably find most of them. You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this. If you find the faces mark each one with a X; cut out the picture and send it to us together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly as in cases of ties both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there is $200.00 in Cash and One Hundred Premiums given away, it is worth your while to take a little trouble over this matter.

We do not ask you to spend one cent of your money in order to enter this contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by return mail saying whether you are correct or not and will send you a complete prize list together with the names and addresses of the persons who have recently received over $2,000.00 in cash prizes from us, and will also send full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled in order that you may qualify in this contest. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this one.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity who have no connection with this Company. Their decision must be accepted as final.

The despatch adds that the Austrian press "trusts that the Austro-German forces will have their revenge for the fall of Przemysl in the battle of the Carpathians."

GOVERNMENT HOUSE OF PETERBOROUGH IN 1832

A Gift to The Public Library by Judge Huycke

Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, librarian of the Public Library, has receved from His Honor Judge Huycke the following letter referring to the picture of the old "Government House," which Judge Huycke kindly presented to the Library and which now hangs in the reading room beside the portrait of Hon. Peter Robinson, settlement. The letter, which Mr. Dela Fosse has handed to us, constitutes a most interesting and valuable addition to the records of the early days of Peterborough.

March 23, 1915.

Mr. Dela Fosse,
Librarian,
Peterborough.

Dear Mr. Dela Fosse:

I have had sent to you for the Public Library of the city, if the officers choose to accept it, a little picture of small intrinsic value, but of much local historical interest. It is, as you see, a picture of "Government House, Peterborough, 1832. This expression means little to most of us now, but in the early days of our community this "House" was of vast interest and importance. Prior to 1825 what is now Peterborough was known as "Scotts Plains" and here and in the whole surrounding country from Rice Lake north could be numbered scarce 500 souls. "Scotts Mill" was the pivot of the little colony.

In 1825 Hon. Peter Robinson brought his celebrated immigration of that year from Ireland, sailing from Cork in May, 1825, and arriving here via Kingston and Cobourg over Rice Lake and up the Otonabee in August of the same year. There were in all 2,069 settlers, but through hardship and disease over 100 of them died en route or very soon after their arrival. This settlement was really the nucleus of what is now Peterborough city and county, of which Peter Robinson was really the founder, and in honor of whom the place received its name Peterborough. These settlers were all allotted land in the surrounding townships and nearly all proved most valuable citizens and their descendants are still with us.

Peter Robinson was the eldest brother of Sir John Beverly Robinson, probably the most distinguished and best known of the Chief Justices of Upper Canada. Mr. Robinson immediately set to work to erect buildings for the purposes of the immigration, residences, storehouses and offices, all of logs and situate mostly east of what is now Water Street and opposite the market square. The fifth one erected was the largest and most pretentious of all and was long known as "Government House" and was first used as the residence of Mr. Robinson and his chief associates and for a short time of Vice Royalty itself. It is of this house I send you a picture, it being a copy of probably the only picture extant of this historical landmark. Let me give a brief description, the only authentic one I can find. I quote from Poole's Early Settlement of Peterborough. He says, page 15:

"Built of logs it was 40 feet long by about 20 feet wide. It stood on the Eastern side of the lot now occupied by the Bank of Montreal (now the Peterborough Club, S.E. corner of Simcoe and Water Streets) about 30 feet from the former and 40 from the latter, very near the Southern end of the brick stable now belonging to these premises. It fronted towards the South with a door near the centre of the building, partly concealed by a wooden porch in front. There were two windows in the front, and three in the rear. The interior was divided into three rooms, of nearly equal size, by two partitions of logs, erected with the walls. Into the middle of these the front door opened and here was the chief reception room from which doors opened into the other apartments on either hand. The Western room was devoted to the purposes of the kitchen, while Mr. Robinson slept in the eastern apartment, which also contained sundry books, papers and maps. The logs, both of walls and partitions, were hewed to a level surface in the interior, and the interstices, both within and without, carefully secured with "chinks" and mortar. A considerable portion of the ground, extending across the North of Simcoe Street, was fenced in as a garden, etc."

In the picture you see the house and garden, ornamented by a sun dial, and in the background over and through the intervening trees is shown the old tower of the old St. John's Church, then as now a church set upon a hill.

To this house and its kindly occupants came the settlers with their wants and their complaints, both of which were doubtless very numerous. It is stated they always met a kindly reception and such assistance as could possibly be given.

Seat of Local Government.

But why was it called "Government House?" Perhaps to some extent because it was the seat of a local government, the kindly depotism of Mr. Robinson, but chiefly because it was visited and occupied by a real Governor, His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, which visit took place in the winter of 1826, a year after its erection. This was absolutely the first gubernatorial visit to Peterborough. His Excellency was accompanied by the brilliant but eccentric Col. Talbut, founder of the Tarbut settlement in Western Canada, soldier and settler, courtier and pioneer diplomat and despot, known almost equally well in the social circles of London and Paris and in the Western wilds of Upper Canada. With him were Sir John B. Robinson, Chief Justice above referred to, George G. Bethune, Hon. Zaccheus Burnham and many others. The party came from Cobourg out, over the plains, across Rice Lake and up the Otonabee.

The central room of "Government House" was used as a reception room, His Excellency seated at the further end where he held a sort of rude levee. The settlers in considerable numbers were duly presented and as duly retired. The usual addresses of welcome, loyalty and appreciation of the high honour conferred by the distinguished visitor were presented and acknowledged. Various compliments were incidentally given to our "worthy Chief," Mr. Robinson." The Irish representative, one Patrick Barragan, a school teacher, was most effusive in expressions of loyalty. In event of war he promises "that we, when called upon, will to a man follow our brave commanders; not an Irish soul will stay behind; and if we have no better weapons in our hands we will mow them down with our Irish shillalehs. He ends by asking the supply of two wants, clergymen to administer to us the comforts of our Holy Religion and good schoolmasters to instruct our children." If they had those he promises they will be completely happy. We trust their wants were supplied and their anticipations realized.

Its Location.

Such then is a brief sketch and description of "Government House, Peterborough," once widely known but now all but forgotten even in our own midst. It apparently stood on what is now the residence of Mr. Roland Denne and partly on the Peterborough Club property. As the settlement increased the rude little log "Government House" became unused and decayed and was burned in the early forties. I am credibly informed it met destruction on a certain Hallowe'en probably the victim of boyish pranks or wicked mischief makers, or both. There is a well defined legend, which I am however unable to verify, that Peterborough was named and duly christened in this very old log house at a dinner given by or for Hon. Peter Robinson, our city and county being named after him and in honour of their chief founder.

So much for the house; now a word as to the picture. You will see the one I send you is a copy, not the original. I succeeded in getting temporary possession of the original and Mr. Roy did the rest.

Drawn by Mary Sanford.
